155. Development and Structure of Musculoskeletal System. (4) Requisite: course 111B. Development, histology, cell biology, and biochemistry of musculoskeletal soft tissues. Integration of knowledge of muscle and connective tissue structure and function on each of these levels to understand organization and physiological behavior of the intact system.

M158. Cell Biology. (6) (Same as Organismic Biology M158.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, six hours. Requisites: Chemistry 14A, 14B, and 14BL, or 20A, 20B, 20L, and 30AL, Life Sciences 1, 3, 4. Cell biology of eukaryotic cells, with emphasis on correlation of structure and function at molecular, organellar, and cellular levels. Letter grading.

M166. Animal Physiology. (6) (Same as Organismic Biology M166.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, five hours. Requisites: Chemistry 14B and 14BL, or 20B and 30AL, 153A, Life Sciences 1, 2, 3, Physics 1C and 4BL, or 6C or 6CH. Not open for credit to students with credit for Organismic Biology 167 or 170 or to Physiological Science majors. Introduction to physiological principles, with emphasis on organ systems and intact organisms. Letter grading.

167. Physiology of Nutrition. (4) Lecture, four hours. Limited to senior Physiological Science majors. Topics include physiological adaptation to starvation and physiological responses to oxidants/antioxidants, vitamins, minerals, photochemicals, and their relationship to common chronic diseases and physiology of fuel utilization during aerobic and anaerobic exercise. Letter grading.

M168. Ideas and Experiments in History of Physiology. (4) (Formerly numbered 197Z.) (Same as Neurobiology M168.) Lecture, three hours. Interaction of concepts and experimental techniques in physiology from the early 19th to latter 20th centuries, including heart and circulation, hormones, nutrition and vitamins, the brain, spinal cord, and peripheral nervous system, as well as development of physiology as scientific discipline. Discussion of weekly readings and presentations by students. Letter grading.

M173. Anatomy and Physiology of Sense Organs. (4) (Same as Organismic Biology M173.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 111A (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology 171) or M180A and M180B (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A and M175B). Structure and function of sense organs. Adoption of quantitative and comparative approach to provide insight into evolution of sense organs in both invertebrates and vertebrates. Letter grading.

177. Neuroethology. (5) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 111A. Physical properties of animal signals and physiological mechanisms underlying their generation. Topics include classical neuroethological models: acoustic and vibration communication in vertebrates, sound localization in owls, electrosensing and electrocommunication in electric fish, and neurobiology of birdsong. Letter grading.

M180A-M180B-M180C. Neuroscience: From Molecules to Mind. (5-5-5) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A-M175B-M175C, Neuroscience M101A-M101B-M101C, and Psychology M117A-M117B-M117C.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, 90 minutes. P/NP or letter grading.

M180A. Cellular and Systems Neuroscience. (5) Lecture, four hours; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: Chemistry 14C or 30A or former course 30 (14C may be taken concurrently), Life Sciences 2, Physics 1B or 6C. Not open for credit to students with credit for Physiological Science 111A. For Physiological Science majors only, a grade of C- or better is required to proceed to Physiological Science 111B. Cellular neurophysiology, membrane potential, action potentials, and synaptic transmission. Sensory systems and motor system; how assemblies of neurons process complex information and control movement. P/NP or letter grading.

M180B. Molecular and Developmental Neuroscience. (5) Lecture, four hours; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: course 111A or M180A (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A or Neuroscience M101A or Psychology M117A) or Psychology 115, Life Sciences 3, 4. Molecular biology of channels and receptors: focus on voltage dependent channels and neurotransmitter receptors. Molecular biology of supramolecular mechanisms: synaptic transmission, axonal transport, cytoskeleton, and muscle. Classical experiments and modern molecular approaches in developmental neurobiology. P/NP or letter grading.

M180C. Behavioral and Cognitive Neuroscience. (5) Lecture, four hours; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisite: course 111A or M180A (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A or Neuroscience M101A or Psychology M117A) or Psychology 115. Neural mechanisms underlying motivation, learning, and cognition. P/NP or letter grading.

M181. Biological Bases of Psychiatric Disorders. (4) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M191, Neuroscience M130, Psychiatry M191, and Psychology M117J.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 111A or M180A (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A or Neuroscience M101A or Psychology M117A) or Psychology 115. Underlying brain systems involved in psychiatric symptoms and neurological disorders, including schizophrenia, depression, bipolar disorder, obsessive-compulsive disorder. Provides basic understanding of brain dysfunctions that contribute to disorders and rationales for pharmacological treatments. P/NP or letter grading.

189. Undergraduate Research Seminar. (1) Seminar, 90 minutes. Requisites: courses 111A, 111B. Limited to Physiological Science majors with advanced junior standing and 3.0 grade-point average in major, or seniors. Readings from and discussion of selected literature in research project area. May be repeated for credit. Only 1 letter-graded unit of course 189 may be applied toward elective requirements for the major. P/NP or letter grading.

190A. Honors Thesis. (4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Requisites: courses 111A, 111B. Corequisite: course 189. Limited to physiological science honors program students. Directed independent research for departmental honors with a faculty member, involving definition of research topic and extensive reading and research in the field of proposed honors thesis. In Progress grading (credit to be given only on completion of course 190B).

190B. Honors Thesis. (4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Requisite: course 190A. Corequisite: course 189. Continued reading and research that culminate in final honors thesis. Only 4 units of course 190 or 3 units of course 199 and 1 unit of course 189 may be applied toward elective requirements for the major. Letter grading.

190C. Advanced Studies for Honors Thesis. (4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Requisite: course 190B. Corequisite: course 189. Additional course to provide further research opportunities for departmental honors students. Letter grading.

C191. Recent Advances in Neurophysiology. (1) Seminar, one hour. Requisite: Life Sciences 2. Critical examination and discussion of recent data and publications that focus on synaptic function. Student presentations, readings, and participation in discussions required. Concurrently scheduled with course C294. P/NP grading.

192. Intracellular Calcium Regulation. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, two hours. Requisites: courses 111A, 111B, 111C. Lecture on and review of current literature covering broad issues of intracellular calcium metabolism, regulation, and transport.

193. Field Studies in Physiological Science. (4) Lecture, one hour; fieldwork, six to eight hours. Limited to seniors. Departmental application required. Supervised field studies in specific careers related to physiological science. May not be repeated for credit and may not be applied toward elective requirements for the major. P/NP grading.

M194. Undergraduate Seminar: Current Topics in Biomedical Sciences. (2) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M194 and Organismic Biology M194.) Seminar, two hours. Designed for juniors/seniors in research traineeships or those who have strong commitment to pursue graduate studies in molecular, biochemical, physiological, or biomedical fields. Weekly presentation and discussion of a paper selected from current literature. May be repeated for credit. P/NP or letter grading.

195H. Undergraduate Seminar: Current Topics in Physiology. (3) Seminar, three hours. Requisites or corequisites: courses 190A, 190B. Designed for juniors/seniors and required of departmental honors students. Presentation of primary paper from physiology literature. Reading and critical evaluation of current research literature. Presentation of student laboratory research hypothesis, approach, and results in form of oral and poster presentations. Letter grading.

196. Laboratory Practicum in Systems Anatomy. (3) Lecture, two hours; laboratory practicum, five hours. Requisite: course 107. Training and supervised practicum for advanced undergraduates in teaching courses related to human anatomy. Students assist in preparation of materials and development of innovative programs under guidance of faculty and teaching assistants. Consult Undergraduate Office for further information. May not be applied toward elective requirements and may not be repeated for credit. Departmental application required. P/NP or letter grading.

197A-197Z. Variable Topics in Physiological Science. (4 each) Limited to juniors/seniors. Variable topics courses which cover specific subjects of special interest. May be repeated for credit with topic change.

199. Special Studies in Physiological Science. (2 to 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Requisites: courses 111A, 111B. Corequisite: course 189. Limited to Physiological Science majors with advanced junior standing and 3.0 grade-point average in major, or seniors. Directed independent research with a faculty member. Course application must be submitted to undergraduate affairs chair during first week of classes. Only 3 units of course 199 may be applied toward elective requirements for the major. P/NP or letter grading.

Graduate Courses

CM200. Experimental Statistics. (4) (Same as Biostatistics M220.) Lecture, four hours. Introduction to statistics with focus on computer simulation instead of formulas. Bootstrap and Monte Carlo methods used to analyze physiological data. Concurrently scheduled with course C100. S/U or letter grading.

M202. Cellular Neurophysiology. (4) (Same as Neurobiology M200F and Neuroscience M202.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, two hours. Requisites: course 111A or M180A or Physics 6B, Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology 171 or Organismic Biology M166. Advanced course in cellular physiology of neurons. Action and membrane potentials, channels and channel blockers, gates, ion pumps and neuronal homeostasis, synaptic receptors, drug-receptor interactions, transmitter release, modulation by second messengers, and sensory transduction. Letter grading.

CM203. Basic Human Biology for Biomedical Engineers II. (4) (Same as Biomedical Engineering CM203.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, two hours. Preparation: human molecular biology, biochemistry, and cell biology. Not open for credit to Physiological Science majors. Molecular-level understanding of human anatomy and physiology in selected organ systems (digestive, skin, musculoskeletal, endocrine, immune, urinary, reproductive). System-specific modeling/simulations (immune regulation, wound healing, muscle mechanics and energetics, acid-base balance, excretion). Functional basis of biomedical instrumentation (dialysis, artificial skin, pathogen detectors, ultrasound, birth-control drug delivery). Concurrently scheduled with course CM103. Letter grading.

CM204. Basic Human Biology for Biomedical Engineers I. (4) (Same as Biomedical Engineering CM202.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, two hours. Preparation: human molecular biology, biochemistry, and cell biology. Not open for credit to Physiological Science majors. Broad overview of basic biological activities and organization of human body in system (organ/tissue) to system basis, with particular emphasis on molecular basis. Modeling/simulation of functional aspect of biological system included. Actual demonstration of biomedical instruments, as well as visits to biomedical facilities. Concurrently scheduled with course CM102. Letter grading.

M210. Molecular and Cellular Mechanisms of Neural Integration. (5) (Same as Neuroscience M230 and Physiology M210.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: Neuroscience M202 or Physiology M209A. Introduction to mechanisms of synaptic processing. Selected problems of current interest, including regulation and modulation of transmitter release, molecular biology and physiology of receptors, cellular basis of integration in sensory perception and learning, neural nets and oscillators, and molecular events in development and sexual differentiation.

211. Exercise Cardiovascular Physiology. (4) Attention to cardiovascular adaptations to acute exercise as well as adaptations associated with regular exercise training.

M212. Introduction to Cellular Physiology and Biophysics. (6) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M237 and Physiology M212.) Lecture, five hours. Requisite: course 111A or Physiology M209A. Development of fundamental physiological and biophysical concepts associated with all membranes, membrane channels and transporters, membrane potential, membrane excitability, electrical signal transmission and transduction, and muscle contraction and their application to study of basic cellular processes. Emphasis in laboratory on development of skills using computer programming languages, spreadsheets, and graphics for modeling and analysis of cellular processes.

M213. Principles of Integrative Physiology. (6) (Same as Physiology M213.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Open to juniors/seniors with consent of instructor. Basic principles of biological integration, including regulation, homeostasis, feedback, and natural selection, to be illustrated by applying them to a molecules-through-whole animal view of four sets of problems: information processing, development, and plasticity in central nervous system; endocrine regulation of reproduction; feedback regulation of blood pressure and control of eye movements; and matching of enzyme, transporter, and bone capacities to natural loads.

215. Molecular and Cellular Foundations of Physiology. (5) Lecture, three hours; discussion, two hours. Application of molecular and cellular approaches to systems level questions. Basic foundation for study of major physiological systems, with emphasis on levels of organization from molecular to macroscopic. Letter grading.

CM225. Comparative Endocrinology: Molecular to Behavioral. (4) (Same as Physiology M225.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Important concepts in endocrinology, with focus on current research involving invertebrate and vertebrate animal models in areas of reproduction, neuroendocrine control of behavior, metabolism, and insect metamorphosis. Concurrently scheduled with course C125.

M227. Cellular, Molecular, and Functional Aspects of Reproductive System. (4) (Same as Neurobiology M227.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Didactic presentations and discussion of developmental, anatomical/histological, physiological, cellular, and molecular aspects of reproductive system and functional integration of neuroendocrine-reproductive axis.

C235. Dynamical Systems Modeling of Physiological Processes. (5) Lecture, four hours; laboratory, two hours. Examination of art of making and evaluating dynamical models of physiological systems and of dynamical principles inherent in physiological systems. Concurrently scheduled with course C135.

C237. Growth and Adaptation in Cardiovascular System. (4) Requisite: course 111B. Regulation of normal and pathological cellular growth in cardiac and vascular tissue. Modification of gene expression in response to diverse physiological stimuli. Emphasis on molecular and cell biology approaches. Concurrently scheduled with course C137.

241. Substrates for Neural Repair. (4) Lecture, four hours. Requisite: Neuroscience M201 or M203 or M204. Progress in basic and clinical neuroscience provides new insight to understand mechanisms of cell repair and strategies to promote neural healing. Focus on physiological, molecular, and anatomical basis governing repair processes in brain and spinal cord and their clinical implications. Letter grading.

C243. Neuromotor Control of Posture and Movement. (5) Lecture, four hours. Requisite: course 142. Examination of theories for neuromotor control of posture, walking, and voluntary arm movements. Concurrently scheduled with course C143.

C244. Neural Control of Physiological Systems. (5) Lecture, four hours. Requisite: course 111B or M180B. Role of central nervous system in control of respiration, circulation, sexual function, and bladder control. Material for each section to be developed by combination of lecture and open discussion. Concurrently scheduled with course C144.

C245. Neural Mechanisms Controlling Movement. (5) Lecture, four hours. Requisite: course 111A or M180A or Neuroscience M101A. Examination of central nervous system organization required for production of complex movements such as locomotion, mastication, and swallowing. Concurrently scheduled with course CM145. Letter grading.

250A. Muscle Dynamics. (4) Lecture, four hours. Requisite: course 151. Integrated study of electrical and dynamic parameters of muscle-action, including topics in length-tension and force-velocity interrelationships; critical analysis of electromyographic and digital computer techniques. Letter grading.

C250B. Musculoskeletal Mechanics. (5) (Formerly numbered 250B.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: course 107, Physics 6A. Introduction to biomechanical analysis of human musculoskeletal system. Examination of cinematographic, force platform, and digital computer techniques to characterize and evaluate kinematic and kinetic components of movement. Topics include biostatics, biodynamics, and modeling. Concurrently scheduled with course C150. Letter grading.

C252. Musculoskeletal Anatomy, Physiology, and Biomechanics. (5) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 111A. Anatomical, physiological, and mechanical characteristics of cartilaginous, fibrous, and bony tissues examined in normal and abnormal stress situations. Connective tissue growth processes, normal physiology, and repair mechanisms analyzed in conjunction with musculoskeletal injuries and effects of exercise. Concurrently scheduled with course C152.

M255. Seminar: Neural and Behavioral Endocrinology. (2) (Same as Neurobiology M255 and Psychology M294.) Seminar, one hour; discussion, one hour. Topics include hormonal biochemistry and pharmacology. Hypothalamic/hypophyseal interactions, both hormonal and neural. Structure and function of the hypothalamus. Hormonal control of reproductive and other behaviors. Sexual differentiation of brain and behavior. Stress: hormonal, behavioral, and neural aspects. Aging of reproductive behaviors and function.

M260. Neuromuscular Factors in Movement Regulation. (4) (Same as Neuroscience M260.) Requisite: course 138. Interaction of neural and muscular factors in regulation of muscle fiber properties and importance of these properties in neural strategies of movement regulation. S/U or letter grading.

M263. Neuronal Mechanisms Controlling Rhythmic Movements. (4) (Same as Neuroscience M263.) Requisite: course CM145. Advanced topics on brainstem mechanisms responsible for controlling cyclic and stereotypic movements such as mastication and locomotion. Emphasis on cellular neurophysiology and interaction between neuronal networks. Introduction to primary literature and techniques used in these areas. Students expected to critically evaluate data and conclusions drawn.

270A-270B-270C. Modern Concepts in Physiology. (4-4-4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Study and evaluation of primary research literature. Study of foundations of modern techniques in physiological research, analysis of research design. Letter grading. 270A. Requisite or corequisite: course 111A. Foundation for experimental study of organization and function of nervous system and cellular basis of neural action. 270B. Requisite or corequisite: course 111B. Foundation for experimental study of musculoskeletal, cardiovascular, and respiratory systems. 270C. Requisite or corequisite: course 111C. Foundation for experimental study of general issues and mechanisms in neuroendocrine physiology.

M272. Neuroimaging and Brain Mapping. (4) (Same as Neuroscience CM272 and Psychology M213.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: course M202, Neuroscience M201. Theory, methods, applications, assumptions, and limitations of neuroimaging. Techniques, biological questions, and results. Brain structure, brain function, and their relationship discussed with regard to imaging. Letter grading.

M290. Seminar: Comparative Physiology. (2) (Same as Organismic Biology M290.) Seminar, two and one-half hours. Discussion of specific topics in comparative physiology of animals. Topics vary from year to year, with emphasis on systems physiology, neuroethology, or behavioral physiology. S/U or letter grading.

291A-291B-291C. Seminars: Cardiovascular Function and Adaptation. (2 to 4 each) Selected topics on cardiovascular function and adaptation. Students required to present two-hour seminar.

292. Evolution and Development of Auditory System. (2 or 4) Seminar, two hours. Discussion of specific topics related to evolution, embryology, morphogenesis, cytodifferentiation, and onset of function of auditory system, with special attention to centrifugal pathways. Emphasis on primary literature sources as well as current methodological approaches. Two-hour seminar presentation required for 2 units; seminar paper and two-hour seminar presentation required for 4 units. S/U or letter grading.

293A-293B-293C. Seminars: Musculoskeletal Function and Adaptation. (2 to 4 each) Requisites: courses 138, M260. Selected topics on muscular determinants of movement, metabolic aspects of exercise, and mechanics of connective tissue. Students required to present two-hour seminar.

C294. Recent Advances in Neurophysiology. (1) Seminar, one hour. Requisite: Life Sciences 2 or undergraduate degree in science. Critical examination and discussion of recent data and publications that focus on synaptic function. Student presentations, readings, and participation in discussions required. Concurrently scheduled with course C191. S/U grading.

M295A-M295B-M295C. Seminars: Cellular Neuroscience. (2 to 4 each) (Same as Neuroscience M266A-M266B-M266C.) Seminar, two to four hours. Requisite: course M202. Selected topics in sensory transduction, cellular integration, synaptic processing, central nervous system function, and learning. Students required to present two-hour seminar. S/U or letter grading.

296. Research Seminar: Physiological Science. (2) Review of literature, discussion of original research, and analysis of current topics in physiological science. May not be applied toward M.S. or Ph.D. course requirements. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

297. Seminar: Muscle Cell Biology. (2 to 4) Seminar, two hours. Selected topics in muscle cell biology. Students required to present two-hour seminar. May be repeated for credit.

375. Teaching Apprentice Practicum. (1 to 4) Seminar, to be arranged. Preparation: apprentice personnel employment as a teaching assistant, associate, or fellow. Teaching apprenticeship under active guidance and supervision of a regular faculty member responsible for curriculum and instruction at the University. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

495. In-Service Practicum for Teaching Assistants in Physiological Science. (2) Seminar, to be arranged. Required of all teaching assistants. Supervised practicum in teaching laboratory courses in physiological science; material preparation and use of teaching aids. May not be applied toward degree requirements. S/U grading.

501. Cooperative Program. (2 to 8) Preparation: consent of UCLA graduate adviser and graduate dean, and host campus instructor, department chair, and graduate dean. Used to record enrollment of UCLA students in courses taken under cooperative arrangements with USC. S/U grading.

596. Individual Studies for Graduate Students. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. To enroll for letter grade, petition signed by faculty sponsor, graduate adviser, and graduate affairs committee chair must be submitted prior to end of second week of class. Eight units may be applied toward degree requirements for M.S. or Ph.D. degree, provided that students enroll in two different 4-unit 596 courses in different laboratories under supervision of different mentors. Term paper required for letter grading. S/U or letter grading.

597. Preparation for M.S. Comprehensive Examination or Ph.D. Qualifying Examinations. (2 to 16) Tutorial, to be arranged with faculty member serving as student's comprehensive examination chair or Ph.D. committee chair. May not be applied toward M.S. or Ph.D. course requirements. May be repeated as necessary. S/U grading.

598. Research for and Preparation of M.S. Thesis. (2 to 16) Tutorial, to be arranged with faculty member serving as student's thesis committee chair. May not be applied toward M.S. course requirements. May be repeated as necessary. S/U grading.

599. Research for and/or Preparation of Ph.D. Dissertation. (2 to 16) Tutorial, to be arranged. May not be applied toward Ph.D. course requirements. May be repeated as necessary. S/U grading.

Scope and Objectives

Physiology is the science of the functional activities of the human body. This covers a wide range, including observations on humans and experiments on animals and model systems in order to understand principles. Physiology is the science most directly relevant to human medicine in all its specialties and to understanding all environmental factors affecting human life. It is also a pure science of great challenge because of the complexity of its problems and its extensive interaction with mathematical, physical, biochemical, and engineering sciences, as well as with other branches of biology.

Within the prescribed curriculum, students may specialize in cellular and molecular physiology, theoretical and mathematical physiology, and organ systems and integrative phenomena, including neuroscience and behavioral physiology.

In a recent survey conducted by the Conference Board of the Associated Research Councils, UCLA's Physiology Department was judged fifth best in the nation in terms of the quality of its faculty. The department offers postdoctoral training in research and welcomes students interested in articulated M.D./Ph.D. programs.

Applicants interested in pursuing graduate study may apply directly to the interdepartmenttal Molecular, Cellular, and Integrative Physiology Ph.D. Program. See <http://www.mcip.ucla.edu/> or UCLA ACCESS to Programs in Molecular, Cellular, and Integrative Life Sciences at <http://uclaaccess.ucla.edu/>.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Physiology offers the Master of Science (M.S.) degree in Physiology.

Physiology

Lower Division Course

88. Lower Division Seminar: Special Topics in Physiology. (4) Seminar, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. Variable topics seminar which examines specific issues or problems and ways that professionals in physiology approach study of them. Students define, prepare, and present their own research projects with guidance of a professional school faculty member. Letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

100. Elements of Human Physiology. (6) Designed for first-year dental students. Major organic body functions. With special supplementation, a suitable introduction to the field for graduate students for whom the 201A, 201B course sequence is too extensive.

199. Special Studies. (1 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Special studies in physiology, including either reading assignments or laboratory work or both, designed for proper training of students.

Graduate Courses

201A-201B. Organ System Physiology. (6-6) Lecture, six hours; laboratory, three and one-half hours. Designed for medical and qualified graduate program students. Recommended corequisites: courses M203A, M203B. Runs throughout School of Medicine's second semester. Lectures, laboratories, and conferences. Properties of biological membranes. Contractility of muscle. Epithelial transport. Cardiovascular, renal, respiratory, and gastrointestinal systems. Fluid and electrolyte balance. To receive credit, both courses must be taken together in same academic year. In Progress grading.

M203A-M203B. Neuroscience. (4-4) (Same as Neurobiology M203A-M203B.) Lecture, four hours. Designed for medical and qualified graduate program students. Lectures, conferences, demonstrations, and laboratory procedures necessary to understand functions of nervous system, with emphasis on their applications in the medical sciences. To receive credit, both courses must be taken together in same academic year. In Progress and letter grading.

M209A. Molecular, Cellular, and Developmental Neurobiology. (6) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology CM220, Neurobiology M200B, and Neuroscience M201.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours; laboratory, two hours. Fundamental topics concerning molecular, cellular, and developmental neurobiology, including intracellular signaling, cell-cell communication, neurogenesis and migration, synapse formation and elimination, programmed neuronal death, and neurotropic factors. Letter grading.

M210. Molecular and Cellular Mechanisms of Neural Integration. (5) (Same as Neuroscience M230 and Physiological Science M210.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course M209A or Neuroscience M202. Introduction to mechanisms of synaptic processing. Selected problems of current interest, including regulation and modulation of transmitter release, molecular biology and physiology of receptors, cellular basis of integration in sensory perception and learning, neural nets and oscillators, and molecular events in development and sexual differentiation.

M212. Introduction to Cellular Physiology and Biophysics. (6) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M237 and Physiological Science M212.) Lecture, five hours. Requisite: course M209A or Physiological Science 111A. Development of fundamental physiological and biophysical concepts associated with all membranes, membrane channels and transporters, membrane potential, membrane excitability, electrical signal transmission and transduction, and muscle contraction and their application to study of basic cellular processes. Emphasis in laboratory on development of skills using computer programming languages, spreadsheets, and graphics for modeling and analysis of cellular processes.

M213. Principles of Integrative Physiology. (6) (Same as Physiological Science M213.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Open to juniors/seniors with consent of instructor. Basic principles of biological integration, including regulation, homeostasis, feedback, and natural selection, to be illustrated by applying them to a molecules-through-whole animal view of four sets of problems: information processing, development, and plasticity in central nervous system; endocrine regulation of reproduction; feedback regulation of blood pressure and control of eye movements; and matching of enzyme, transporter, and bone capacities to natural loads.

220. Methods in Cell Physiology. (6) Linear circuit analysis, including admittance, transfer admittance, transfer function, and filters using transform methods. Application of these concepts to electronic analog circuits in lectures and laboratory, with emphasis on operational amplifiers. Applications to electrophysiology include microelectrode amplifiers, voltage clamp and patch clamp techniques, with circuit analysis and noise considerations. Digital electronics cover logic gates, sequential circuits, and A/D and D/A conversion, with introduction to sampling theory.

221. Cell Physiology: Excitability. (6) Requisite: course 220. In-depth coverage of general properties of excitable cells, linear cable properties, nonlinear conductance changes, and generation and propagation of the nerve impulse. Voltage gating and gating currents, as well as relationship between macroscopic conductance and single channel properties discussed in analytical detail using original publications.

M223. Membrane Molecular Biology. (4) (Same as Biological Chemistry M223.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Requisite: Biological Chemistry CM253. Advanced course in molecular aspects of membrane physiology and biochemistry covering lipids and physical chemistry of biological membranes; membrane biogenesis and targeting of proteins to membranes; pumps, carriers, and channels; receptors and transmembrane signaling. S/U or letter grading.

M225. Comparative Endocrinology: Molecular to Behavioral. (4) (Same as Physiological Science CM225.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Important concepts in endocrinology, with focus on current research involving invertebrate and vertebrate animal models in areas of reproduction, neuroendocrine control of behavior, metabolism, and insect metamorphosis.

298. Current Topics in Physiology. (2 to 4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Designed for graduate students. Students read primary literature in a specified area and conduct or participate in discussions on these papers. May be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

596. Directed Individual Study or Research. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged.

597. Preparation for M.S. Comprehensive Examination or Ph.D. Qualifying Examinations. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged.

598. Thesis Research for M.S. Candidates. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged.

599. Dissertation Research for Ph.D. Candidates. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged.

Scope and Objectives

The Department of Policy Studies is an interdisciplinary unit composed of faculty members from around the campus, as well as faculty unique to the department. Its goal is to foster an understanding of the theory and practice of public policy in the many fields in which it applies. Examples include social insurance and welfare programs, unemployment and training, drug policy and crime, economic development, environmental quality, education, and health care. The department plays a major roll in two schoolwide programs: the Master of Public Policy (M.P.P.) degree and the undergraduate minor in Public Policy.

The M.P.P. degree program is designed to train professionals in both public- and private-sector policy analysis and implementation and provides coursework in such areas as microeconomics, statistics, and political processes.

Concurrent degree programs allow students to combine study for an M.P.P. with work toward a J.D. in the School of Law or an M.S.W. in the Department of Social Welfare.

The undergraduate minor in Public Policy familiarizes students with key issues in public policy. Both programs have a heavy applied orientation. For further information on the minor, see Public Policy and Social Research Schoolwide Programs later in this section of the catalog.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degree

The Department of Policy Studies offers the Master of Public Policy (M.P.P.) degree. Two concurrent degree programs (Public Policy M.P.P./Law J.D. and Public Policy M.P.P./Social Welfare M.S.W.) are also offered.

Policy Studies*Lower Division Courses

10A. Introduction to Public Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Overview of principal topics of contemporary policy analysis, developing their applications with examples from instructor's own research, visitors, small student projects, or field trips.

10B. California Policy Issues. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Enforced prerequisite: course 10A. Application of policy analysis to California issues. Guest lectures from practitioners and academics along with readings and videos. Student written reports and oral presentations required. Letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

C101. Drug Abuse Control Policy. (4) (Formerly numbered 101.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Introduction to and development of main ideas and themes that enter into analysis and execution of policies directed at control of substance abuse and its side effects; illustration and instantiation of main techniques and concepts of policy and management analysis. Concurrently scheduled with course C235. Letter grading.

102. Rational Policies, Irrational People. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Development of some central concepts of rational-choice model and examination of theories and evidence about systematic ways in which actual behavior deviates from that model. Exploration of various reasons groups of rationally self-seeking individuals might fail to act as rationally self-seeking groups and discussion of policy implications of individual and collective departures from rational action. Letter grading.

103. Ethics, Morality, and Public Life: Contemporary Controversies. (4) Lecture, four hours; outside study, eight hours. Study of ethical and moral questions that arise in public life. Goal is not to imbue students with a given body of factual knowledge or to develop new quantitative or social science methodologies to analyze such questions, but to enhance their critical thinking skills. Letter grading.

104. Culture and Political Structure of Los Angeles. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Exploration of two pieces of the puzzle in modern urban life: the different communities that live here (and in most other major cities) and political structure that binds us all together. Who are the communities living here? How do they organize themselves and develop leaders? How does integration into mainstream take place? What is "mainstream" today? How does political structure help or impede the notion of a united city? Letter grading.

CM110. Information Superhighway. (4) (Same as Communication Studies M155.) Lecture, three hours. Information Superhighway seen from a non-American viewpoint, considering its meanings, potentials, structures, applications, policy implications, economic, social, and cultural impacts, and public perceptions in a number of countries. Special emphasis on Western Europe, Canada, and Australia, with a look at Japan and China also. Opportunities for Africa and Latin America suggested, especially education, health, and other public services. Concurrently scheduled with course C270. Letter grading.

M111. Culture, Identity, and Media. (4) (Same as Communication Studies M157.) Discussion, three hours. Interplay of national culture and identity with electronic media, both "old" and "new." Examination of how national mythologies, constructive or pernicious, are reinforced through the media in several countries: U.K., France, Germany, Canada; analysis of how media manipulation, especially of radio and television, increasingly paves the way to war: Bosnia, Rwanda, Somalia. Letter grading.

C112. Controversies in Education Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Focus on several controversial topics in contemporary education. Topics vary each year and include multiculturalism, affirmative action, "test score gap," bilingual education, and school choice. Introduction to major arguments for and against several important education policies and to encourage students to critically evaluate logic and evidence behind these policies. Concurrently scheduled with course C225. Letter grading.

C115. Environmental and Resource Economics and Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: Economics 11, 143. Survey of ways economics is used to define, analyze, and resolve problems of environmental management. Overview of analytical questions addressed by environmental economists which bear on public policies. Concurrently scheduled with course CM250. Letter grading.

M116. Nuclear Weapons: Critical Decisions. (4) (Same as Environment M165, Honors Collegium M119, and Political Science M139B.) Lecture, three hours. Examination of critical decisions regarding nuclear weapons, starting with President Roosevelt's decision to build atomic bomb and ending with current policies on containing nuclear proliferation and on avoiding nuclear catastrophe. Letter grading.

C117. Crisis Decision Making in U.S. Foreign Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Recommended requisites: Political Science 120, 137A, 137B. In-depth look at theory and practice of U.S. foreign policy-making. Assessment of competing theories of international relations and application to specific case studies. Weekly role plays of foreign policymakers and final crisis simulation exercise. Concurrently scheduled with course C272. Letter grading.

C119. Crime Control Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Design, implementation, and evaluation of policies to control crime. Operations of major institutions within criminal justice system. Theories of crime causation and prevention and their relationship to impacts of alternative policies. Concurrently scheduled with course C219. Letter grading.

M120. Race, Inequality, and Public Policy. (4) (Same as Afro-American Studies M120.) Lecture, three hours. Background in economics, sociology, or urban studies preferred but not required. Survey course to examine major debates and current controversies concerning public policy responses to social problems in urban America. Letter grading.

C124. Budget Politics, Social Policy, and Entitlement Reform. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Examination of politics of public budgeting in the U.S., with emphasis on financing of social safety net. Exploitation of budgetary process as setting both for gaining substantive knowledge about how government really works and for developing political skills required to influence resource allocation decisions. Concurrently scheduled with course C239. Letter grading.

C125. Rights and Wrongs of Affirmative Action. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Exploration of race-based affirmative action from moral, political, and social philosophy standpoint. Topics include defining discrimination, individual and group equality; different meanings of "diversity"; meritocracy and its critics; historical and future-based arguments; sociology of values; possibilities for moral compromise. Concurrently scheduled with course C248. Letter grading.

141. Employment and Labor Policy: Survey. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: course 10A. Introduction to current public policy issues in employment, labor relations, and labor markets. Historical context for current employment and labor policies in the U.S. Pro and con philosophical analysis of reasons for government regulation. Analysis of current data on labor unions, the workplace, and labor-market trends. Workforce diversity, education and training, social welfare policy, and global issues (immigration, trade, and global economy as it affects the workforce). Future trends and issues on policy horizon. Letter grading.

C142. Labor Markets and Public Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: course 10A. Survey of major topics in economic analysis of labor markets and public policies toward the labor market. Topics include labor force trends and measurement, compensation determination, productivity, internal labor markets, human capital, union wage effects, unemployment, and minority and female labor-market experience. Concurrently scheduled with course CM230. Letter grading.

C144. Comparative Industrial Relations. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: course 10A. At national and international levels, historical and contemporary analytical comparison of political, social, and economic contexts influencing human resource systems of selected developed countries. In addition to discussing possible frameworks for analyzing human resource systems, examination of institutions and ideologies of labor, management, and government, and interaction of their power relationships; substance and manner of determination of "web of rules" governing rights and obligations of the parties; and resolution of conflicts. Concurrently scheduled with course CM231. Letter grading.

145. Labor Policies in the U.S.: Historical Perspective. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: course 10A. Insight into evolution of labor policies in the U.S. from 19th century to the present. Exploration of important policy areas such as child labor, labor standards, protective legislation for women workers, industrial relations, civil rights, occupational safety and health, and international labor standards in (1) historical context (economic, political, and social factors that shaped the debate), (2) motivation and action of major players (business, labor, government), and (3) changing patterns of government involvement in public policy. Letter grading.

C146. Democracy, Disobedience, and Dissent. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Theories of political and legal obligation and their critics; justified disobedience in response to inequality, injustice, and social exclusion; moral and religious pluralism as argument for both obedience and dissent. Concurrently scheduled with course C236. Letter grading.

C147. Critical Policy Issues and Problems in Globalizing World. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. To enable students to (1) think of world in dynamic terms, (2) be able to map, divide, and assemble world in many different ways, and (3) be able to articulate patterns of flux, change, and movement in world space and history. Concurrently scheduled with course C245. Letter grading.

148. Business and Public Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: course 10A. Introduction to key issues arising at interface between business and government policy. Discussion of why government focuses so intensively on regulating economic outcomes, nature of business/government relationship, business political activity, and major government policies. Topics include economic regulation (industrial policy, antitrust, technology policy); social regulation of business (energy, environment, risk, liability, corporate governance); and corporate social responsibility, business ethics, and green business. Discussion of topics in their historical and political context, with comparison between economic regulation in the U.S. and other countries. Letter grading.

190. Special Topics in Public Policy. (4) Discussion, three hours. Examination of particular subfields of policy studies (e.g., international policy, crime policy, policy history) in depth, with specific topics to be identified by instructor. Must be taken for credit if applied toward Public Policy minor. May be repeated for credit with topic change. P/NP or letter grading.

197. Research Seminar: Policy Studies. (4) Seminar, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisites: courses 10A, 10B. Required of students in Public Policy minor. Production of research paper that examines in depth a particular policy issue in its social context, including political pressures involved and problems of implementation. Emphasis on skills of data acquisition and analysis, conceptualization, and written analysis and presentation. Letter grading.

199. Special Studies in Policy Studies. (2 or 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: 3.0 grade-point average. Limited to juniors/seniors. Intensive directed research in policy studies. P/NP or letter grading.

Graduate Courses

201. Principles of Microeconomic Theory I. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. First course in two-term sequence (see course 204) to prepare students for economic analysis of public policy, with review of economic principles and basic microeconomic theory and policy applications. Consumer theory and demand, producer theory and supply, equilibrium of product and factor markets. Letter grading.

202. American Political Institutions and Processes. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed to provide background necessary to develop strategies for dealing effectively with political environment of policy and administration. Discussion of U.S. constitutional arrangements, followed by instrumental and integrative examination of primary institutions of politics and governance from organized interests to legislatures, bureaucracies, and courts. Letter grading.

203. Statistical Methods of Policy Analysis I. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. First course in two-term sequence (see course 208). Review of statistical principles useful to policy research and analysis. Topics include descriptive statistics, expectations, univariate distribution, probability, covariance and correlations, statistical independence, random sampling, estimators, unbiasedness and efficiency, statistical inference, confidence intervals, and hypothesis testing. Letter grading.

204. Principles of Microeconomic Theory II. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: course 201. Second course in two-term sequence (see course 201) covering both theory and policy applications. Topics include monopoly, factor markets, general equilibrium, welfare economics, externalities, public goods, uncertainty, and intertemporal optimization. Letter grading.

205. Bureaucracy and Public Management. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Problems posed by behaviors within and by bureaucracies. Conceptual tools for comprehending organization environment in which policy analysts work; tools for understanding role of manager with such organizations. Practical suggestions for policy analyst attempting to navigate waters of bureaucracy. Theoretical analysis integrated with case studies. Letter grading.

206. Political Economy of Policy Adoption and Implementation. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Analysis of how policy is formed, adopted, and implemented. How policies are formulated, by whom, how policy agendas are set, how to define relationships between politicians, bureaucrats, lobbyists, and media experts. Letter grading.

207. International Political Economy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Examination of political, legal, and social institutions to show where the U.S. fits in among varieties of modern capitalism and business/government relations. Analysis of domestic policy options nations are pursuing in response to economic globalization, such as protectionism, mercantilism, and deregulation. Introduction to international coalitions being formed, including NAFTA, and to nongovernmental organizations created to deal with special problems such as global environmental crisis. Letter grading.

208. Statistical Methods of Policy Analysis II. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: course 203. Second core course in statistics and quantitative methods for M.P.P. degree. Quantitative studies of public policy, covering regression analysis and its application to public policy questions. Letter grading.

209. Management in the 21st Century. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Overview of moral philosophy, political theory, and public-sector ethics using readings from classical and contemporary literature and case studies. Consideration of various ways in which terms such as "democracy" and "liberty" are used in public discourse. Practice in developing and defending moral arguments, both orally and in writing. Letter grading.

M210. Foundations of Social Welfare Policy. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M221A and Urban Planning M241.) Lecture, three hours. Nature, roles, and history of welfare institutions in different societies; applicable social system theory of different components of the welfare system; theory and research about welfare policies and organizational forms. S/U or letter grading.

M211. Aging Policy, Elderly and Families. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290P.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Examination of theoretical models and concepts of policy process and application to aging policy. Analysis of decision-making processes that affect social policies. Description of historical development of contemporary policy. Exploration of current proposals and issues. Letter grading.

M212. Child Welfare Policy. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290J.) Lecture, three hours. Development of social policy as it affects families and children from different cultural backgrounds and as it is given form in public child welfare system. Examination of development of an infrastructure to support needs of children and families. S/U or letter grading.

M213. Mental Health Policy. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290K.) Lecture, three hours. Examination of evolution of social policy and services for the mentally ill, with emphasis on political, economic, ideological, and sociological factors that affect views of the mentally ill and services they are provided. S/U or letter grading.

M214. Poverty, the Poor, and Welfare Reform. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290L and Urban Planning M246.) Lecture, three hours. Major policy and research issues concerning poverty and social welfare policy directed toward the poor in the U.S. S/U or letter grading.

M215. Health Policy. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290M.) Lecture, three hours. Introduction to contemporary issues in health care financing and delivery, providing historical perspective on emergence of these issues. Examination of major public programs and their relationship to issues of access and cost. S/U or letter grading.

M216. Public Policy for Children and Youth. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290N.) Lecture, three hours. Policy issues that affect children and adolescents in relation to their interaction with schools and the community, with emphasis on impact of policy across federal, state, and local levels. S/U or letter grading.

217. Methods of Evaluating Social Programs. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisites: courses 203, 208. Examination of design of and statistical methods for evaluating impacts of social programs. Introduction to use of experimental and nonexperimental designs and to various methods for estimating impacts of social programs. Discussion of designs for process analyses. Letter grading.

M218. Research Design and Methods for Social Policy. (4) (Formerly numbered 218.) (Same as Urban Planning M204.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Limited to graduate students. How to become more sophisticated consumers and producers of qualitative and quantitative policy research. In first half of course, formal principles of research design; in second half, various data collection methods, including ethnography, interviewing, and survey design. Letter grading.

C219. Crime Control Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Design, implementation, and evaluation of policies to control crime. Operations of major institutions within criminal justice system. Theories of crime causation and prevention and their relationship to impacts of alternative policies. Concurrently scheduled with course C119. Letter grading.

M220. Transportation, Land Use, and Urban Form. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M254.) Lecture, three hours. Historical evolution of urban form and transportation systems, intrametropolitan location theory, recent trends in urban form, spatial mismatch hypothesis, jobs/housing balance, transportation in the strong central city and polycentric city, neotraditional town planning debate, rail transit and urban form. Letter grading.

M221. Travel Behavior Analysis. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M256.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 201 and 203, or Urban Planning 207 and 220B. Descriptions of travel patterns in metropolitan areas, recent trends and projections into the future, overview of travel forecasting methods, trip generation, trip distribution, mode split traffic assignment, critique of traditional travel forecasting methods and new approaches to travel behavior analysis. Letter grading.

M222. Transportation Economics, Finance, and Policy. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M257.) Lecture, three hours. Overview of transportation finance and economics; concepts of efficiency and equity in transportation finance; historical evolution of highway and transit finance; current issues in highway finance; private participation in road finance, toll roads, road costs and cost allocation, truck charges, congestion pricing; current issues in transit finance; transit fare and subsidy policies, contracting and privatization of transit services. Letter grading.

M223. Transportation and Environmental Issues. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M258.) Lecture, three hours. Regulatory structure linking transportation, air quality, and energy issues, chemistry of air pollution, overview of transportation-related approaches to air quality enhancement; new car tailpipe standards; vehicle inspection and maintenance issues; transportation demand management and transportation control measures; alternative fuels and electric vehicles; corporate average fuel economy and global warming issues; growth of automobile worldwide fleet; the automobile in the sustainability debate. Letter grading.

M224A. Introduction to Geographic Information Systems. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M206A.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Preparation: one graduate-level statistics course, familiarity with one of the packaged statistics programs. Principles of Geographic Information Systems (GIS) and applied techniques of using spatial data for mapping and analysis. Topics include data quality, data manipulation, spatial analysis, and information systems. Use of mapping and spatial analysis to address a planning problem. Letter grading.

M224B. Advanced Geographic Information Systems. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M206B.) Lecture, four hours; laboratory, four hours. Requisite: course M224A or Urban Planning M206A. Principles and skills of geographic analysis and modeling; managing, processing, and interpreting spatial data. Especially useful for students interested in environmental, demographic, suitability, and transportation-related research. Scripts (Avenue), modeling (Spatial Analyst), network analysis, and transportation modeling (TransCAD). Letter grading.

C225. Controversies in Education Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Focus on several controversial topics in contemporary education. Topics vary each year and include multiculturalism, affirmative action, "test score gap," bilingual education, and school choice. Introduction to major arguments for and against several important education policies and to encourage students to critically evaluate logic and evidence behind these policies. Concurrently scheduled with course C112. Letter grading.

M226. Management Challenges and Tools for Nonprofit Sector. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290V and Urban Planning M286.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Fundamental building blocks for successful management in nonprofit sector. Students develop management skills in strategic thinking/problem solving, project management, team building, and negotiation. Use of case studies to troubleshoot critical challenges, from finance to crisis management to marketing, that nonprofit managers typically face. Letter grading.

M227. Nonprofit Sector, State and Civil Society. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290S and Urban Planning M287.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Use of political economy perspective to analyze forces that have shaped rise and characteristics of nonprofit sector and its constituent elements. Examination of social history of nonprofit sector in the U.S. Exploration of legal and policy environments and distinct organizational forms. Comparative perspective between the U.S. and other countries. Letter grading.

M228. Leadership, Development, and Governance of Nonprofit Organizations. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M241E and Urban Planning M288.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Various patterns of community action for attaining social welfare objectives; research and field experience directed toward study of social problems within context of community planning; emerging patterns of physical, economic, and social planning within framework of social change theory. Letter grading.

CM230. Labor Markets and Public Policy. (4) (Same as Management M259C.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Survey of major topics in economic analysis of labor markets and public policies toward the labor market. Topics include labor force trends and measurement, compensation determination, productivity, internal labor markets, human capital, union wage effects, unemployment, and minority and female labor-market experience. Concurrently scheduled with course C142. S/U or letter grading.

CM231. Comparative Industrial Relations. (4) (Same as Management M255.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: Management 409 or elementary knowledge of labor economics. At national and international levels, historical and contemporary analytical comparison of political, social, and economic contexts influencing human resource systems of selected developed countries. In addition to discussing possible frameworks for analyzing human resource systems, examination of institutions and ideologies of labor, management, and government, and interaction of their power relationships; substance and manner of determination of "web of rules" governing rights and obligations of the parties; and resolution of conflicts. Concurrently scheduled with course C144. S/U or letter grading.

M232. Labor Relations: Process and Law. (4) (Same as Management M250A.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Consideration, at advanced level, of collective bargaining process, labor/management agreement, administration of the contract, law of labor/management relations, union structure and goals, and influence of external labor markets on labor relations. S/U or letter grading.

233. Employment Issues in California. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Drawing on resources of UCLA Business Forecasting Project, introduction to general features of California labor market, analysis of employment fluctuations and forecasting techniques including linkages between employment fluctuations in California and elsewhere in the country, and social issues related to labor market. Letter grading.

234. Labor Markets and Social Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Examination of analytical tools and conceptual models needed to understand policies directed toward people in lower tail of income distribution. Concepts include static and dynamic labor supply, labor demand, compensating differentials, human capital, and economic models of immigration and crime. Letter grading.

C235. Drug Abuse Control Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, 90 minutes; outside study, nine hours. Introduction to and development of main ideas and themes that enter into analysis and execution of policies directed at control of substance abuse and its side effects; illustration and instantiation of main techniques and concepts of policy and management analysis. Concurrently scheduled with course C101. Letter grading.

C236. Democracy, Disobedience, and Dissent. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Theories of political and legal obligation and their critics; justified disobedience in response to inequality, injustice, and social exclusion; moral and religious pluralism as argument for both obedience and dissent. Concurrently scheduled with course C146. Letter grading.

237. Political and Administrative Ethics. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Introduction to moral issues that commonly arise in public life. Ethics of political roles, compromise and moral integrity, lying and deception, place of rhetoric in defending stand on issues, politics and violence. Letter grading.

238. Community Organizing and Democracy. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Theoretical bases of community organizing tradition. Contribution of democratic theory to debates over organizing; practical input from guest lectures by organizers. Letter grading.

C239. Budget Politics, Social Policy, and Entitlement Reform. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Examination of politics of public budgeting in the U.S., with emphasis on financing of social safety net. Exploitation of budgetary process as setting both for gaining substantive knowledge about how government really works and for developing political skills required to influence resource allocation decisions. Concurrently scheduled with course C124. Letter grading.

M240. Theories of Regional Economic Development I. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M236A.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Introduction to theories of location of economic activity, trade, and other forms of contact between regions, process of regional growth and decline, reasons for different levels of economic development, relations between more and less developed regions. Letter grading.

M241. Introduction to Regional Planning: Evolution of Regional Planning Doctrines. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M230.) Lecture, three hours. Critical and historical survey of evolution of regional planning theory and practice, with particular emphasis on relations between regional planning and developments within Western social and political philosophy. Major concepts include regions and regionalism, territorial community, and social production of space. Letter grading.

M242. Regional Development, Urbanization, and Industrial Policy. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M231.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Survey of regional development, with special reference to "new economic geography" and its relevance for formulation of local economic development policies. Letter grading.

M243. Community Development and Housing Policies: Roles of State, Civil Society, and Nonprofits. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M290U and Urban Planning M275.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Examination of role of U.S. housing policy and role of government agencies and community organizations. Is the problem housing or economic development? Should interventions be directed toward inner city housing markets or through neighborhood strategies? What lessons can be learned from experiences of other countries? Letter grading.

M244. Transportation Planning. (4) (Same as Urban Planning M255.) Lecture, three hours. Examination of how planners analyze, manage, and operate transportation systems. Measuring system performance, intelligent transportation systems, transportation system demand management, parking management, freight movement and facilities, public transit evaluation and management, paratransit, bicycle and pedestrian planning, transportation for elderly and disabled. Letter grading.

C245. Critical Policy Issues and Problems in Globalizing World. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. To enable students to (1) think of world in dynamic terms, (2) be able to map, divide, and assemble world in many different ways, and (3) be able to articulate patterns of flux, change, and movement in world space and history. Concurrently scheduled with course C147. Letter grading.

M247. Strategic Planning for Public and Nonprofit Organizations. (4) (Same as Social Welfare M241F and Urban Planning M290.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Technical processes of problem solving regarding substantive social welfare problems at community level. This form of community practice fills niche between the professional and knowledge and skill set possessed by agency and program administrators on one hand and by policy analysts and policymakers on other. ## Scope and Objectives

The undergraduate major in Political Science aims to provide understanding of basic political processes and institutions as these operate in different national and cultural contexts. It also covers the interaction between national states, the changing character of the relations between citizens and governments, and the values and criteria by which the quality of political life is judged. The program may be individually focused to serve the needs of the liberal arts major, the student seeking preparation for graduate work in political science, public administration, law, and other professional fields, and the student preparing for specialized roles in political and public organizations.

The graduate program leads to the Ph.D. degree in Political Science (a master's degree may be earned in the process of completing Ph.D. requirements). It is designed to give students a strong foundation in the discipline while enabling them to acquire additional skills for advancing their professional careers.

Undergraduate Study

Political Science B.A.

Prepolitical Science Major

All students intending to major in Political Science must enroll as Prepolitical Science majors. After completion of preparation for the major courses, they need to petition to enter the major in the Undergraduate Office, 4269A Bunche Hall.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Four lower division courses from Political Science 10, 20, 30, 40, 50. These lower division courses are requisites to upper division courses and 10, 20, 40, and 50 are required in those fields designated as the concentration or distribution field. Students must also take Political Science 6 or one of the following statistics courses: Anthropology M80, Geography M40, Sociology M18, Statistics 10.

Students must complete all premajor courses with a 2.0 grade-point average by the time they attain 135 units. Admission to the major is granted only after successful completion of all lower division requirements.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Political Science majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: one statistics course and four courses from political theory, world politics, political economy, American politics, or comparative politics.

The Major

Required: Ten upper division courses (40 units) selected from Political Science 102 through 199 taken for a letter grade. Students are also required to complete four upper division courses (16 units) in one or two of the following social sciences: anthropology, communication studies (only Communication Studies 160), economics, geography, history, management (only Management 150, 190), psychology (except Psychology 115, 116), sociology. These courses must be taken for a letter grade. Students are required to maintain a 2.0 overall grade-point average in all upper division political science courses.

Upper division political science courses are organized into four fields: (I) political theory, (II) international relations, (III) American politics, and (IV) comparative politics.

In fulfilling the requirement of 10 upper division political science courses, students must satisfy the following:

1. A concentration in one field by completing the lower division course and at least four upper division courses in that field
2. A distribution of the lower division course and two upper division courses in each of two other fields (four upper division courses)

3. Two additional elective courses in political science to comprise the total of 10

Field Concentration Requirements

The lower division course is requisite to upper division courses in those fields designated as the concentration field and the two distribution fields for majors. Specific requirements for the field concentration are as follows:

- I. Political Theory: Political Science 10 and any four courses in Field I
- II. International Relations: Course 20 and any four upper division courses in Field II
- III. American Politics: Course 40 and any four courses in Field III
- IV. Comparative Politics: Course 50 and any four additional courses in Field IV. Course 118 may also be applied toward concentration in this field

Courses 119, 139, 149, and 169 may be applied no more than twice toward the field concentration requirement. No more than three of these courses may be applied toward the major.

Courses 195A, 195B, 195C, and 199 may not be applied toward either the concentration or distribution requirement.

Political Science majors should be aware that the upper division course requirements in the major (56 units) do not meet the upper division requirement of 60 units for graduation. Additional upper division units must be taken to reach the 60-unit total.

Undergraduate Seminars

Each term the department offers a series of seminars (Political Science C197A through C197D) in each field. The requisites are two upper division courses in the field in which the seminar is offered, a 3.25 average at the upper division level in political science, or discretion of the instructor. These courses may be applied toward either the concentration or distribution requirement, and students who qualify are encouraged to take them.

Honors Program

The department honors program is open to seniors and to students who (1) have completed five upper division political science courses (two of which are in one field), (2) have a 3.5 grade-point average in upper division political science courses, and (3) are eligible for College of Letters and Science honors. Students should have substantial experience in writing research papers and take at least one seminar course in the Political Science C197 series before they enter the honors program or course 195A.

Students wishing to qualify for graduation with departmental honors must complete the following: (1) courses 195A, 195B, 195C, in which a senior thesis is written; (2) eight upper division courses (excluding courses 119, 139, 149, and 169) distributed as follows: four courses in one field and four additional courses, two in each of two other fields; (3) four upper division courses in one or two of the social sciences other than political science.

Political Science Minor

The Political Science minor introduces students to political processes and institutions.

To enter the minor, students must have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better and file a petition in the Undergraduate Office, 4269A Bunche Hall.

Required Lower Division Courses (10 units): Any two lower division political science courses.

Required Upper Division Courses (20 units): Any five upper division political science courses.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Political Science offers Master of Arts (M.A.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Political Science.

Political Science

Lower Division Courses

6. Introduction to Quantitative Research. (5) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Introduction to collection and analysis of political data, with emphasis on application of statistical reasoning to study of relationships among political variables. Use of computer as an aid in analyzing data from various fields of political science, among them comparative politics, international relations, American politics, and public administration. ## Graduate Courses

Formal Theory and Quantitative Methods

200AL. Statistical Methods Laboratory I. (4) Laboratory, three hours. Corequisite: course 200A.

200C. Statistical Methods III. (4) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: knowledge of elementary calculus. Requisites: courses 200A, 200AL, 200B. Statistical modeling of political processes. Topics include simultaneous equations models, discrete choice models, time-series models.

200D. Quantitative Methods in Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours. Preparation: knowledge of calculus and matrix algebra. Recommended requisite: course 200C. Designed to build on foundations set in course 200C. Focus on logical and mathematical structure underlying some statistical methods that are frequently used in political science. Emphasis on understanding structure of the models rather than on gaining added experience using them to analyze data. Applied data analysis. Letter grading.

M200E. Advanced Regression Analysis. (4) (Same as Psychology M256.) Seminar, three hours. Diagnostics, robust regression, cross validation, resampling, outliers, missing data, geometry of regression, validity of assumptions, categorical dependent variables, transformation of variables. Access to Macintosh computer very helpful.

201A. Introduction to Formal Political Analysis. (4) Seminar, three hours. Survey of formal political theory to enhance literacy and provide analytical tools without presupposing mathematical background. Model building, collective goods, unanimity and the social contract, voting rules, paradoxes and impossibility theorems, stability, individual liberty and decentralization, strategic manipulation representation, vote trading.

201B. Theory of Collective Choice. (4) Seminar, three hours. Recommended preparation for political science students: course 201A. Open to any student of politics, economics, philosophy, or mathematics with ability for deductive reasoning. Introduction to abstract, deductive study of voting systems and other collective-choice processes. Axiomatic method applied to politics and political economy, concept of rationality, and agenda control, choice-set or solution concepts.

202. Mathematics for Political Science. (4) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: working knowledge of high school algebra. Survey of mathematical methods useful in political science. Topics include differential and integral calculus, differential equations, optimization, and linear algebra.

203A. Economic Theory and Methods for Political Science I. (4) Discussion, three hours. Preparation: knowledge of elementary calculus. Introduction to techniques of economic analysis and survey of major topics in formal political economy. Investigation of models of regulation, trade protection, collective bargaining, and economic growth as time permits.

203B. Economic Theory and Methods for Political Science II. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisite: course 203A. Continuing survey of microeconomic techniques used in formal political science, with focus on market failures and on modeling individual choice in nonmarket situations. Specific topics include externalities, public goods and allocation mechanisms, collective action, spatial models, structure-induced equilibrium, and information asymmetries.

204. Game Theory in Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours. Survey of game theory, with emphasis on utilizing mathematical models to understand political and economic phenomena. Applications concern political participation, public goods, legislatures, industrial regulation, bureaucracies, interest groups, and party competition. Designed to help students become informed consumers of game-theoretical literature in political science.

M208A. Game Theory. (4) (Same as Economics M214B and Mathematics M261.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate economics, mathematics, and political science students. Bargaining theory, the core, the value, other solution concepts. Applications to oligopoly, general exchange and production economies, and allocation of joint costs. S/U or letter grading.

M208B. Topics in Applied Game Theory. (4) (Same as Economics M215.) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: calculus or introductory probability. Designed for graduate economics and political science students. Survey and applications of major solution concepts to models of bargaining, oligopoly, cost allocation, and voting power. S/U or letter grading.

M208D. Multivariate Analysis with Latent Variables. (4) (Same as Psychology M257.) Lecture, three hours. Introduction to models and methods for analysis of data hypothesized to be generated by unmeasured latent variables, including latent variable analogues of traditional methods in multivariate analysis. Causal modeling: theory testing via analysis of moment structures. Measurement models such as confirmatory, higher-order, and structured-means factor analytic models. Structural equation models, including path and simultaneous equation models. Parameter estimation, hypothesis testing, and other statistical issues. Computer implementation. Applications.

M208E. Bayesian Econometrics. (4) (Same as Economics M232A.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: Economics 231A, 231B. Subjective probability, introduction to decision theory, Bayesian analysis of regression, sensitivity analysis, simplification of models, criticism. S/U or letter grading.

209. Special Topics in Formal Theory and Quantitative Methods. (4) Seminar, three hours.

Political Theory

210A-210B. Introduction to Political Theory. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of major texts and issues in political theory. 210A. Classical and Medieval Formulations from Plato through Aquinas; 210B. Early Modern Period from Machiavelli through the Enlightenment.

M211. Morality of Capitalism. (4) (Same as Management M293B.) Lecture, three hours. Examination of major philosophical writings that defend or criticize capitalism on basis of principles of right conduct and just social arrangements (i.e., on moral grounds).

212. Seminar: Political Theory. (4) Seminar, three hours.

214. Political Theory in Transnational Context. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Critical analysis of selected text from postcolonial, spatial, feminist, postmodern, and post-structuralist theories that assess impact of processes of globalization on such major concepts and problems of traditional social and political theory as sovereignty, citizenship, rights, community, representation, and democracy. S/U or letter grading.

215. Liberalism and Its Critics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Examination of works of one or more major contemporary liberal theorists (Rawls, Dworkin, Habermas, Nussbaum, etc.) in light of alternatives which have been proposed to the liberal position (communitarianism, post-structuralism, group rights theories, etc.). S/U or letter grading.

C217. Selected Texts in Political Theory. (4) Discussion, three hours. Critical examination of major texts in political theory, with particular attention to their philosophic system, their relations to contemporary political and intellectual currents, and importance of the system for present-day political analysis. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197A.

C218. Selected Topics in Political Theory. (4) Discussion, three hours. Critical examination of a major problem in political theory. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197A.

219. Workshop: Political Theory. (4) Discussion, three hours.

International Relations

220. International Relations Theory. (4) Discussion, three hours. Approaches to and central problems of international relations theory.

C221. Advanced International Relations Theory. (4) Discussion, three hours. Introduction to contemporary problems in international relations theory. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197B.

222. Seminar: Strategic Interaction. (4) Seminar, three hours. A strategic move influences the other person's choice by affecting his expectations of how we will behave. Discussion of theories of deterrence, coercive diplomacy, crisis management, war termination, and negotiation. Use of various theoretical approaches to explaining strategic interaction, including psychology, bargaining theory, and game theory.

C223. Politics and Strategies of Modern War. (4) Seminar, three hours. Analysis of various national security problems in both their military/technical and political dimensions. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197B.

225. American Foreign Policy. (4) Discussion, three hours. Discussion of approaches used to explain foreign policy-making at individual, small group, bureaucratic, and domestic politics levels. Application to selected cases in American foreign policy.

C226. The Making of American Foreign Policy. (4) Seminar, three hours. Intensive analysis of policy formulation process and substance of selected contemporary problems in foreign policy. Political and institutional factors affecting foreign policies; analysis of policy options. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197B.

C227. Foreign Policy Process. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisites: courses 120, 220. Political science and policy science approaches to national foreign policy process, with primary focus on formulation and implementation of American foreign policy. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197B.

230. Contending Perspectives on International Political Economy. (4) Discussion, three hours. Survey of various theoretical approaches to international political economy.

231. International Political Economy I. (4) Seminar, three hours. Interaction between international trade and investment and domestic political economies of both industrialized and industrializing societies.

232. International Political Economy II. (4) Seminar, three hours. Designed to develop Ph.D. students' skills in setting up and solving simple institutional design, political economy macro, signaling, and participation models, as well as two-level game models of domestic politics and international conflict and cooperation, with emphasis on applications in international political economy and comparative politics.

233A-233B-233C. Political Economy Workshops (4-4-4). Discussion, two hours. Preparation: successful completion of major field examinations. Workshops for students writing or preparing to write dissertations. Reading and discussion of research in progress presented by UCLA faculty, visiting scholars, and advanced graduate students. Research paper of publishable length and quality required. S/U or letter grading.

234A-234B-234C. Workshops: National Security, Foreign Policy, and International Relations (0-0-12). Discussion, two hours. Preparation: successful completion of major field examinations. Course 234A is requisite to 234B, which is requisite to 234C. Courses must be taken in sequence. Workshops for students preparing for or working on dissertations. Reading and discussion of research in progress presented by UCLA faculty, visiting scholars, and advanced graduate students. Major research paper required. In Progress grading.

C239. Selected Topics in International Relations. (4) Discussion, three hours. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197B.

Comparative Politics

240A-240B. Seminars: Comparative Politics. (4-4) Seminar, three hours. Course 240A is not requisite to 240B. Letter grading. 240A. (Formerly numbered 240.) Survey of ideas and approaches that have been historically important in field of comparative politics, with a selection of theories and methodologies that have comprised the field over time. 240B. Survey of contemporary research approaches and problems in field of comparative politics, with a range of theories and methodologies used by practitioners in the field.

C241. African Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). May be concurrently scheduled with course C197D.

C242. Chinese and East Asian Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). May be concurrently scheduled with course C197D.

C243. Japanese and Western Pacific Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). May be concurrently scheduled with course C197D.

C244. Latin American Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). May be concurrently scheduled with course C197D.

C245. Middle Eastern Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). May be concurrently scheduled with course C197D.

C246A. Western European Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). May be concurrently scheduled with course C197D.

246B. Political Development of Modern Europe. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Principal phases of political development from high feudalism to the present, together with theories of causation.

C247. Politics of the Soviet Union and Post-Soviet Region. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). May be concurrently scheduled with course C197D.

247A. Evolution of Soviet and Russian Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Discussion seminar surveying political evolution of Soviet Union and its transformation.

C247B. Domestic Context of Russian Foreign Policy. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Examination of domestic social, political, bureaucratic, and organizational sources of Russian foreign and strategic policy. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197B.

C248. South Asian Politics. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). May be concurrently scheduled with course C197D.

251. Political Economy of Economic Reform. (4) Discussion, three hours. Some familiarity with economics helpful. Principal political and economic arguments for economic reform and consideration of political issues that arise from this process. Letter grading.

252. Parties and Party Systems. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Theories and practices of political parties, party systems, and elections in comparative perspective.

253. Political Change in Communist Systems. (4) Discussion, three hours. Examination of political context and consequences of structural reform in Communist systems; theories of post-Leninist political pluralization and convergence.

254A-254B. Institutions and Comparative Politics. (4-4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled):

254B. Political Institutions, Delegation, and Policy-Making. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Analysis of political foundations of policy-making. Characterization of democratic institutions as a series of delegations, from voters to elected officials, within parties and legislatures, and from elected politicians to unelected bureaucrats. Examination of implications of different institutional designs for how those delegations are made and controlled.

255. Seminar: Political Change. (4) Seminar, three hours. Interdisciplinary seminar directed toward comparative analysis of political development and modernization.

256. External Sources of Domestic Politics. (4) Discussion, three hours. Theoretical and historical studies of impact of war and trade on domestic cleavages, policy, and institutions.

257. Labor and Working-Class Politics. (4) Discussion, three hours. Questions and topics on comparative labor and working-class politics.

259. Selected Topics in Comparative Politics. (4) Discussion, three hours. Critical examination of a major problem in comparative politics.

American Politics

260A. Survey Course in American Politics: Political Parties and the Electoral Process. (4) Discussion, three hours.

260B. Survey Course in American Politics: American Political Institutions. (4) Discussion, three hours.

M261A. Proseminar: Political Psychology. (4) (Same as History M236A and Psychology M228A.) Discussion, three hours. Introduction to political psychology: psychobiography, personality and politics, mass attitudes, group conflict, political communication, and elite decision making.

C261B. Mass Attitudes and Political Behavior. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisite: course 141B or 260A. Analysis of development and change of political attitudes in mass publics and their relationship to voting, protest, and violence. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197C.

261C. Political Communication. (4) Discussion, three hours. Broad survey of research bearing on role of mass media in the American political process. Topics include theories of persuasion, evolution of "media effects" research, reporting and advertising as determinants of election outcomes, adversarial versus deferential journalism, and analyses of media bias.

M261D. Seminar: Political Psychology. (4) (Same as Psychology M228B.) Discussion, three hours. Requisite: course M261A or Psychology 220A. Examination of political behavior, political socialization, racial conflict, mass political movements, and public opinion.

M261E. Critical Problems in Political Psychology. (4) (Same as Psychology M228C.) Discussion, three hours.

C262. Political Parties. (4) Discussion, three hours. Critical examination of literature on party systems and organization. Special attention to political functions, electoral campaigns, and party cadres. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197C.

C264. Politics and Society. (4) Discussion, three hours. Application of selected classical and contemporary sociological theories to politics. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197C.

265. Politics and Economy. (4) Discussion, three hours. Analysis of theoretical and practical relationships between economic organization and governmental institutions. Development and political implications of the market system, banking and finance, corporate enterprise, and organized labor.

266. Group Theories of Politics. (4) Discussion, three hours. Critical appraisal of "group theory" approaches to study of political decision making, with special attention to empirical research problems and findings.

268. Seminar: Political and Electoral Problems. (4) Seminar, three hours. Preparation: two graduate courses in politics.

269. Seminar: Political Behavior. (4) Seminar, three hours.

C270. Legislative Behavior. (4) Discussion, three hours. Analysis of major approaches to study of representative institutions, with special emphasis on assumptions, concepts, methods, and theoretical implications associated with each approach. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197C.

C271. Executive Politics and the Presidency. (4) Discussion, three hours. Analysis of executive organization and leadership, with emphasis on the American Presidency. Special attention to theories of organization and personality and relationship between the executive and other institutions and groups. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197C.

272. Political Environment of the Federal Executive. (4) Discussion, three hours. Examination of political environment of the federal executive in the U.S. Special attention to executive/legislative relations.

273. American Political Development. (4) Discussion, three hours. National political institutions in historical perspective, theories of state building, state-societal relations, political culture.

275. Seminar: American Political Institutions. (4) Seminar, three hours.

C279. Seminar: Public Law. (4) Seminar, three hours. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197C.

C281. Public Policy Studies. (4) Discussion, three hours. Systematic analysis of nature and scope of public policy and its programmatic implications. Special emphasis on government organizations and process, as well as types of government intervention and stages of the policy process. Substantive focus primarily on American public policy and analysis. May be concurrently scheduled with course C197C.

284. Seminar: Bureaucracy and Organization. (4) Seminar, three hours. Exploration of topics in analysis of public and private bureaucracies and organizational theory. Topics include empirical theories of bureaucratic behavior; bureaucratic growth; bureaucratic behavior and political culture; organizational structures and strategies; and function of the executive.

Special Studies

290. Modern Political Economy. (4) Discussion, three hours. Discussion of implications for understanding politics of the thinking of politicians, bureaucrats, producers, consumers, and nations as utility maximizers. Topics include microfoundations for macro models, forms of political participation, the state, government regulation, growth of government, bureaucracy elections, public policy, inflation.

M291A-M291B. Social Theory and Comparative History. (4-4) (Same as History M203A-M203B and Sociology M296A-M296B.) Colloquium, three and one-half hours every other week. Introduction to historically rooted social theory and theoretically sensitive history, following the program of the Center for Social Theory and Comparative History. Each course may be taken independently for credit.

292A-292B. Introduction to Political Inquiry. (4-4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). 292A. Problems of Scientific Inquiry and Normative Discourse; 292B. Research Design. Requirement: course 292A. Major conceptual frameworks and approaches to political science.

293. Great Ideas in Social Sciences. (2) Seminar, two hours. Vehicle for faculty and visitors to teach research seminars of variable length. Special training opportunities on advanced quantitative methods, including complexity theory, agent-based modeling, experimental economics, social cognitive neuroscience, and evolutionary psychology, to be offered at irregular intervals. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

375. Teaching Apprentice Practicum. (1 to 4) Seminar, to be arranged. Preparation: apprentice personnel employment as a teaching assistant, associate, or fellow. Teaching apprenticeship under active guidance and supervision of a regular faculty member responsible for curriculum and instruction at the University. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

495. Teaching Political Science. (4) Seminar, to be arranged. Seminar in teaching techniques, including evaluation of each student's own performance as a teaching assistant. Normally to be taken by all new teaching assistants in first term of their assistantships. May be taken only in term in which students are teaching assistants. May not be applied toward M.A. or Ph.D. course requirements. S/U grading.

501. Cooperative Program. (2 to 8) Preparation: consent of UCLA graduate adviser and graduate dean, and host campus instructor, department chair, and graduate dean. Used to record enrollment of UCLA students in courses taken under cooperative arrangements with USC. S/U grading.

596. Directed Individual Study or Research. (2 to 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be applied only three times toward minimum course requirement in first two years. May be repeated.

597. Preparation for Ph.D. Qualifying Examinations. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be repeated. S/U grading.

599. Research for and Preparation of Ph.D. Dissertation. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be repeated. S/U grading.

Scope and Objectives

The Department of Psychiatry and Biobehavioral Sciences offers interdisciplinary courses related to the mental health professions of the biobehavioral sciences in addition to its programs for psychiatry interns and residents and for medical students.

Enrollment in department courses is limited to registered UCLA students, students registered in programs officially affiliated with UCLA, and students enrolled concurrently through UCLA Extension. Students who meet these requirements, but who are not affiliated with a departmental training program, must also meet required course requisites determined by specific educational programs. Additional information is available from the department office.

Developmental Disabilities Immersion Program

The Developmental Disabilities Immersion Program (DDIP), cosponsored by the Department of Psychology, the Department of Psychiatry and Biobehavioral Sciences, and the Office of Instructional Development — Center for Experiential Education and Service Learning (CEESL), provides a community learning environment for undergraduate students who devote two quarters to the intensive study of developmental disabilities. Each year a group of 30 students is selected for the program which runs during Winter and Spring Quarters. Students participate in courses, fieldwork, and research at selected University and community facilities serving persons with developmental disabilities.

Required courses include Psychology/Psychiatry M180A, M180B, M181A, M181B. Courses are designed to foster discussions integrating students' field and research experiences. Lectures and discussions explore biological, psychological, and social questions concerning causes and treatment of developmental disabilities. Also covered is an analysis of programs for the care and training of individuals with development disabilities. The fieldwork component gives students the opportunity to apply theories and concepts learned in their coursework to actual settings involving individuals with developmental disabilities. Students also undertake a two-quarter research project under the guidance of a UCLA faculty member.

Students interested in the program should contact the DDIP coordinator at the Center for Experiential Education and Service Learning, 160 Powell Library, (310) 825-7867, for information regarding admission and an application.

Clinical Psychology Internship

The department offers a 12-month Clinical Psychology Internship, which is a Graduate Division certificate program. Students enrolled in clinical psychology programs at APA-approved universities are eligible to apply. Applications are accepted through December 1. The primary goals of the internship are to provide a year of intensive exposure to a wide variety of clinical and human services experiences and to maximize the personal growth of each professional. Students interested in this certificate program should contact David Crawford, C8-746 NPI&H, (310) 206-8100, e-mail: dcrawford@mednet.ucla.edu.

Information on clinical practicums which are offered in conjunction with other educational institutions and UCLA departments may be obtained from the department office.

Psychiatry and Biobehavioral Sciences

Lower Division Courses

88. Lower Division Seminar: Special Topics in Psychiatry and Biobehavioral Sciences. (4) Seminar, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. Variable topics seminar which examines specific issues or problems and ways that professionals in psychiatry and biobehavioral sciences approach study of them. Students define, prepare, and present their own research projects with guidance of a professional school faculty member. Letter grading.

98D. Violence in America. (4) Seminar, three hours. Enforced requisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. Freshmen/sophomores preferred. Survey of scope and variety of violence in the U.S., including comparisons with other developed countries. Epidemiology of various life-threatening behaviors; consideration of possible causes and potential approaches to reduction, intervention, and prevention of both interpersonal and collective violence. Letter grading.

98P. Recovery from Madness. (4) Seminar, four hours. Enforced requisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. One percent of world's population suffers from schizophrenia, the most disabling of mental disorders. Recent advances in diagnosis, treatment, and rehabilitation have opened pathways to recover from this brain disorder. Students share experience of schizophrenia and trace biobehavioral stepping stones to overcoming symptoms and disability through readings, videos, and live interactions with persons who have recovered from this illness. Letter grading.

98R. Two Centuries of Psychiatric Thought. (4) Seminar, three hours. Enforced requisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. Examination of key historical events, controversies, and personalities, some well-known and others forgotten. Participation in ongoing psychiatric history projects that show promise of actually influencing contemporary neuroscience and conquest of mental illness. Letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

M180A. Contemporary Problems in Mental Retardation. (4) (Same as Psychology M180A.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: Psychology 10, 100A, and 127 or 130 or 133A through 133I. Corequisite: course M181A. Limited to Immersion Program students. Presentation of concepts, issues, and research techniques in the area of mental retardation. Biological, psychological, and community questions concerning causes and treatment of developmental disabilities, as well as systems for care and training of retarded individuals. Lectures, directed reading, and discussion. P/NP or letter grading.

M180B. Contemporary Issues in Mental Retardation. (4) (Same as Psychology M180B.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course M180A. Corequisite: course M181B. Limited to Immersion Program students. Psychoeducational issues in mental retardation relating literature to ongoing field experiences through lectures, discussions, media, and six student papers. P/NP or letter grading.

M181A-M181B. Research in Contemporary Problems in Mental Retardation. (4-4) (Same as Psychology M181A-M181B.) Corequisites: courses M180A, M180B. Research experience. In Progress and P/NP or letter grading.

185. Social Psychology of Urban Student Education. (6) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes; fieldwork, six to eight hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Students interested in study of urban youth and their education acquire comprehensive and first-hand knowledge of factors affecting these students' achievement. Field study component requires students to intern with youth in schools and after-school programs. P/NP or letter grading.

M191. Biological Bases of Psychiatric Disorders. (4) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M191, Neuroscience M130, Physiological Science M181, and Psychology M117J.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: Neuroscience M101A (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A or Physiological Science M180A or Psychology M117A) or Physiological Science 111A or Psychology 115. Underlying brain systems involved in psychiatric symptoms and neurological disorders, including schizophrenia, depression, bipolar disorder, obsessive/compulsive disorder. Provides basic understanding of brain dysfunctions that contribute to disorders and rationales for pharmacological treatments. P/NP or letter grading.

199. Special Studies in Psychiatry. (2 to 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: submission of written proposal outlining course of study (to be structured by instructor and student at time of initial enrollment). Additional information and course proposal forms are available in Office of Education, C8-237/C8-238 NPI&H.

Graduate Courses

207A-207B-207C. Hypnosis Seminars. (2-2-2) Experiential seminars to prepare mental health professionals for adult and child clinical applications, involving didactics, demonstrations, trainee practice, and feedback. Following training in inductions and development of classic hypnotic phenomena (e.g., age regression, hypnoanesthesia, self-hypnosis), focus on psychotherapeutic applications, including direct symptom removal, behavioral methods, and hypnoanalysis. Emphasis on acquiring skills for clinical practice. S/U grading.

208A-208B. Clinical Neuropsychology. (2-2) Lecture, 90 minutes. Designed for graduate and post-graduate students. Introduction and review of neuropsychological concepts, including functional neuroanatomical systems of the brain, analytic and synthetic activities of the brain, effects of generalized and focal brain impairment on behavior, and introduction to use of neuropsychological test instruments. Letter grading.

M209. Introduction to Neural Networks: Modeling and Applications. (4) (Same as Biomathematics CM208C.) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: calculus. Introduction to theory of neural networks and their applications. Survey of current neural-network models of cognitive functions. S/U or letter grading.

M210. Seminar: Psychocultural Studies and Medical Anthropology. (4) (Same as Anthropology M234.) Seminar, three hours. Devoted to present state of research in psychocultural studies. Survey of work in child development and socialization, personality, psychobiology, transcultural psychiatry, deviance, learning, perception, cognition, and psychocultural perspectives on change. S/U or letter grading.

M213. The Individual in Culture. (4) (Same as Anthropology M235.) Seminar, three hours. Designed for graduate students.

M214. Cross-Cultural Studies of Socialization and Children. (4) (Same as Anthropology M236P.) Seminar, three hours. Selected topics in cross-cultural study of socialization and child training. Methods, ethnographic data, and theoretical orientations. Emphasis on current research.

M222. Transcultural Psychiatry. (4) (Same as Anthropology M234P.) Lecture, three hours. Consideration of psychiatric topics in cross-cultural perspective, such as studies of drug use, deviance, suicide, homicide, behavioral disorders, "culture specific" syndromes, non-Western psychiatries, and questions of "sick" societies. May be repeated for credit.

226A-226B. Childhood Psychopathology Research Seminars. (2-2) Seminar, 90 minutes. Current research in causes and behavioral manifestations of childhood psychopathology. Discussion on diagnosis and etiology of childhood disturbances.

M230. Communication of Science. (2) (Same as Biomathematics M262.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Presentation of various types of scientific writings and their good practice. Details of writing specific articles: methods, results, discussion. Writing of review article. Grant submissions: aims, background, results, design. Role of appendices. Communication with lay public. S/U or letter grading.

M231. Hispanic Mental Health Issues and Treatment. (2) (Same as Social Welfare M203E.) Mental health issues and needs of Hispanics through seminars and videotapes dealing with historical comparison of psychiatry in Mexico and the U.S., analysis of various theoretical perspectives regarding biopsychosocial behavior; distinguishing psychodynamic from cultural factors in treatment of Spanish-speaking patients; treatment of Hispanic families, couples, undocumented persons, and criminal justice system clientele.

M232. Causal Inference. (4) (Same as Biostatistics M235.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: Biostatistics 200A. Selection bias, confounding, ecological paradox, contributions of Fisher and Neyman. Rubin model for causal inference, propensity scores. Analysis of clinical trials with noncompliance. Addressing confounding in longitudinal studies. Path analysis, structural equation, and graphical models. Decision making when causality is disputed. Letter grading.

M234. Affective Disorders. (2 or 4) (Same as Psychology M280.) Seminar, two hours. General topics related to primary affective disorders (depression, manic depressive illness), including diagnosis, pharmacology, epidemiology, psychology, phenomenology, biology, and treatment. Students enrolled for 4 units are assigned a more intensive reading list and required to make a presentation or prepare a research paper.

236A-236B-236C. Psychology Interns Seminars. (1-1-1) Seminar, 90 minutes. Current topics in clinical psychology. Group-selected topics for discussion pertaining to psychopathology, diagnostic evaluation, and modalities of treatment. S/U grading.

237. Seminar: Behavioral Neuroimmunology. (1) Seminar, one hour per month; discussion, 30 minutes per month. Series of lectures presented the second Wednesday of each month throughout academic year by invited speakers. S/U grading.

M238. Survey Research Techniques in Psychocultural Studies. (4) (Same as Psychology M238.) Seminar, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Techniques for conceptualizing, conducting, and analyzing survey data; instruction in qualitative strategies for enhancing survey research on psychocultural problems.

M240. Assessment and Treatment of African American Families. (3) (Same as Afro-American Studies M240.) Seminar, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Course aids mental health professionals and trainees in evaluation and treatment of African American families in terms of their cultural milieu, historical background, and economic status. Didactic presentations by instructors and invited guests form basis for supervised evaluation and case management with an African American child and family.

M246. Psychological Aspects of Mental Retardation. (4) (Same as Psychology M246.) Lecture, 90 minutes. Discussion of psychological aspects of mental retardation, including classification, description, etiology, theory, prevention, treatment, assessment, modern and future developments, and input from other disciplines (ethics, law, religion, welfare systems).

M251. Mental Health Services. (4) (Same as Health Services M249J.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: Health Services 200A, 200B. Designed for doctoral students. Survey of contemporary American delivery of health services to emotionally and mentally ill and retarded. Analysis of characteristics of such services, with historical background of their evolution and projections of their future prospects. Letter grading.

253. Seminar: Child Development. (1) Theories of development, systems of child development, and chronological aspects of child development. Presentation of assigned readings by students plays major role in each session.

M254. Supporting Families of Children with Special Needs. (2) (Same as Social Welfare M203D.) Techniques and issues in counseling families through evaluation, feedback, and treatment. Social and psychological stresses on family unit, professional's reactions, community resources, and issues of genetic counseling, placement, and developmental crises. S/U grading.

M255. Functional Organization of Behavior. (2) (Same as Neuroscience M255.) Changes in neuronal properties supporting changes in learned behavior. Different types of learning. Role of neurotransmitters and second messengers in changing ion channels of neurons to support associative learning versus long-term potentiation of neurotransmission. S/U or letter grading.

256. Basic Clinical Child Psychopathology. (1) Weekly seminar covering basic clinical aspects of child psychopathology. Readings provided for basis of discussion on topics including interviewing of parents and children, diagnosis, and related syndromes. S/U grading.

259. Legal and Ethical Issues with Vulnerable Populations. (3) Lecture, 90 minutes; laboratory, three and one-half hours. Discussion of current laws dealing with vulnerable populations (e.g., children, developmentally disabled people, elderly people); philosophies, ethics, ethical codes, issues, and how to resolve them. Use of videotapes and discussion of cases.

261. Advanced Seminar: Child and Adolescent Psychopharmacology. (1) Use of problem-based teaching methods and critical reviews of medical literature as basis for rational pharmacotherapy in children and adolescents. Major focus on development of a clinical decision-making process, given the limited scientific evidence supporting pharmacological practice in the field. S/U grading.

262A-262B-262C. Clinical Fieldwork in Developmental Disabilities and Chronic Illness. (1 to 4 each) Requisites or corequisites: courses 243A, 243B, 243C. Placement and supervision of clinical and consultation activities of interdisciplinary trainees in various community agencies, hospitals, or other related settings serving developmentally disabled or chronically medically ill children, youth, or adults. Supervision done jointly by community personnel on site, in collaboration with interdisciplinary faculty. S/U grading.

M263. Clinical Pharmacology. (2) (Same as Biomathematics M263 and Medicine M263.) Lecture, two hours. Preparation: completion of professional health sciences degree (M.D., D.D.S., D.N.Sc., or Ph.D.). Overview of principles of clinical pharmacology, especially as they relate to clinical and translational medicine and to advances in contemporary medicine such as targeting, gene therapy, and genomics. Letter grading.

M266. Advanced Magnetic Resonance Imaging. (4) (Same as Biomedical Physics M266 and Neuroscience M267.) Lecture, four hours. Starting with basic principles, presentation of physical basis of magnetic resonance imaging (MRI), with emphasis on developing advanced applications in biomedical imaging, including both structural and functional studies. Instruction more intuitive than mathematical. Letter grading.

M270. Neural Basis of Memory. (4) (Same as Neuroscience M273.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Anatomical, physiological, and neurological data integrated into models for how behavioral phenomena of memory arise. Discussion of invertebrate memory, cortical conditioning, hippocampus and declarative memory, and frontal lobes and primary memory.

M272. Psychological Anthropology. (4) (Same as Anthropology M234Q.) Lecture, three hours. Various psychological issues in anthropology, both theoretical and methodological. Areas of interest include such things as culture and theory, culture and personality, and culture psychiatry. Discussion of questions relating to symbolic and unconsciousness process as they relate to culture. Topics vary from term to term. May be repeated for credit.

M273. Advanced Seminar: Medical Anthropology. (2 to 4) (Same as Anthropology M263Q, Community Health Sciences M244, and Nursing M273.) Seminar, three hours. Limited to 15 students. Examination of interrelationships between society, culture, ecology, health, and illness. Bases for written critical analysis and class discussion provided through key theoretical works. S/U or letter grading.

274A-274B-274C. Research Seminar: Psychoneuroimmunology. (2-2-2) Seminar, two hours. Research foundations for basic and clinical psychoneuroimmunology and clinical implications of relationship between brain, behavior, and immunity. S/U grading.

M277. Cognitive Behavior Therapy with Children: Treatment and Systems of Care. (2 or 4) (Same as Psychology M285.) Seminar, 90 minutes. Designed for graduate students. Cognitive/behavioral approaches to prevention and treatment of mental health problems in children. Examination of service delivery systems for treating troubled youth and discussion of issues with respect to current systems of care. Major problems include conduct disorders, attention deficit disorder, depression, anxiety, and learning disabilities.

M280. Politics of Reproduction. (2 to 4) (Same as Anthropology M269P.) Seminar, three hours. Examination of various ways that power, as it is structured and enacted in everyday activities, shapes human reproductive behavior. Case materials from diverse cultures illuminate how competing interests within households, communities, states, and institutions influence reproductive arrangements in society. Letter grading.

281A-281B-281C. Behavioral Therapy in an Educational Setting. (4-4-4) (Formerly numbered 281.) Lecture, one hour; laboratory, seven hours. Supervised experience in classroom working with exceptional children in conducting systematic observations, administering formal assessments, and developing and carrying out individualized educational and behavioral programs. Theoretical background furnished through one-hour weekly lecture. S/U or letter grading.

M282. Anthropology of Human Body. (2 to 4) (Same as Anthropology M234T.) Seminar, three hours. Exploration of how sociocultural and political dynamics shape perceptions of and understandings about the human body, and how, reciprocally, those perceptions and understandings influence social processes. Includes materials from both non-Western and Western societies. Letter grading.

M283. Anthropology of Genetic Knowledge. (2 to 4) (Same as Anthropology M265.) Seminar, three hours. Exploration of how sociocultural and political dynamics shape our understandings of genetic discoveries and how genetic information is used to create conceptions of the self and society. Letter grading.

M285. Functional Neuroimaging: Techniques and Applications. (4) (Same as Biomedical Physics M285.) In-depth examination of activation imaging, including PET and MRI methods, data acquisition and analysis, experimental design, and results obtained thus far in human systems. Strong focus on understanding technologies, how to design activation imaging paradigms, and how to interpret results. Laboratory visits and design and implementation of a functional MRI experiment. S/U or letter grading.

M286A-M286B-M286C. Statistics in Psychiatric and Biobehavioral Research. (2-2-2) (Same as Biostatistics M206A-M206B-M206C.) Seminar, 90 minutes. Requisite: Biostatistics 100B. Designed for graduate students. Examples from psychiatric literature used to illustrate statistical ideas and analysis strategies. Topics include experimental designs, sample size calculations, parametric versus nonparametric tests, regression, ANOVA, factor analysis, defining composite variables, causal inference. Computer used to illustrate basic data analysis. S/U or letter grading.

287. Small Group Cognitive/Behavioral Interventions. (4) Lecture, three hours. Presentation of brief therapeutic interventions for adults and children at risk for suicide, depression, conduct problems, and HIV, with didactic and experiential techniques.

M288. Social and Behavioral Factors of HIV/AIDS: Global Perspective. (4) (Same as Community Health Sciences M294.) Lecture, four hours. Requisites: Community Health Sciences 100 and Epidemiology 100, or prior social sciences courses. Overview of social and behavioral factors which influence both transmission and prevention of HIV/AIDS throughout the world. Letter grading.

M289. Intervention to Reduce HIV and Its Consequences. (4) (Same as Community Health Sciences M299.) Lecture, three hours. Examination of interventions to reduce HIV/AIDS transmission. Review of theory and research supporting efficacy of HIV interventions for a variety of high-risk populations. Letter grading.

290. Los Angeles HIV-Community Colloquia. (1) Lecture, two hours. Examination of emerging scientific HIV-related research. Discussion of policy issues, theories, and designs of HIV-related services and programs and shifting epidemiology of the virus and disease. S/U grading.

291. Seminar: Behavioral Biology — Rage. (4) Seminar, three hours. Graduate and professional seminar focusing on proximate causation, development, and evolution of human behavior and vertebrate social organization. Emphasis on deviant and rage behavior. S/U or letter grading.

295A-295B-295C. Advanced Seminars: Substantive Issues in Substance Abuse I, II, III. (2-2-2) S/U grading:

295A. (2) Neurobiology and psychopharmacology of drug abuse, as well as epidemiology and prevention. Discussion of pros and cons of various treatment modalities for drug dependence. S/U grading.

295B. (2) Drug use patterns and treatment issues in specific populations such as women, adolescents, the homeless, the multiply diagnosed, as well as different ethnic populations. Exploration of relationship between drug abuse, sexuality, and HIV/AIDS. S/U grading.

295C. (2) Theoretical perspectives on drug use and abuse as well as policy and ethical aspects of drug abuse research. Research design and analysis issues pertinent to drug abuse research. S/U grading.

298. Current Topics in Biobehavioral Sciences. (1 to 4) Current issues in biobehavioral sciences offered on selective basis depending on instructor interest and topical relevancy of problems. Consult Schedule of Classes for topics and instructors. May be repeated for credit.

402. Journal Club. (1) Seminar, two hours; outside study, two hours. Presentation of participants' current research. Critical review of recent articles on drug abuse. Training sessions included in areas in which fellows believe they have a recognized need. S/U grading.

403. Individual Case Supervision. (1 to 4) Preparation: submission of written proposal to be structured by instructor and student prior to enrollment; additional information and proposal forms available in Office of Education, C8-237/C8-238 NPI&H. One-to-one supervision of individual therapy cases, including analyses of patient data, supervision of ongoing treatment, informal didactic sessions on personality theory, and applications to patient management.

M424. Functional Magnetic Resonance Imaging Journal Club. (2) (Same as Biomedical Physics M424.) Discussion, 90 minutes. Limited to 10 students. Current topics in functional neuroimaging, with emphasis on novel applications, analysis, and acquisition methods. Presentation and critique of student papers. Overall emphasis on magnetic resonance imaging. Example areas include tractography through diffusion tensor imaging, jittered event-related experimental designs, parallel receiver MR imaging, integrated electrophysiological and image acquisition. S/U grading.

425. Teaching Case Conference. (1) Review of diagnosis and treatment of full spectrum of disorders, with expert off-unit consultants.

429. Child Outpatient Team. (1) Weekly team meetings to coordinate clinical activities of trainees in Child Outpatient Department. Discussion of literature and theories related to selected cases. S/U grading.

449. Parent Training Intervention Workshop. (2) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, one hour. Advanced clinical trainees learn behavioral techniques of assessment and treatment of parent/child problems. Lectures, case presentations, and workshops on various skills necessary.

479. Genetics Clinic Presentation. (No credit) Weekly clinical teaching session on patients seen in preceding genetics clinic. In-depth discussion on genetics of each disorder.

480. Analysis of Human Chromosome Studies. (1) Chromosome karyotypes prepared in cytogenetics laboratory during preceding week presented and discussed with reference to clinical findings. Teaching includes interpretation of abnormal karyotypes and technical aspects of routine and special chromosome stains.

482. Clinical Practicum in Childhood Anxiety and Related Disorders. (3) Clinic, two hours. Training in cognitive/behavioral assessment and treatment of children and adolescents with anxiety and related disorders. Didactic and experiential training, including direct patient care, clinical supervision, and participation in weekly team meetings. Letter grading.

485. Human Genetics Seminar. (No credit) Seminar, one hour. Preparation: introductory genetics course. Weekly lecture series intended for those interested in human genetics or in specific topic to be presented. Speakers are invited for their expertise or research in some special area related to human genetics and may be from UCLA or elsewhere. No grading.

M490. Educational Advocacy. (2) (Same as Law M431.) Clinic, two hours (12 weeks). How to provide educational advocacy based on IDEA, ADA, and Section 504 of Rehabilitation Act on behalf of children with learning disabilities, behavior disorders, and mental retardation. S/U or letter grading.

596P. Individual Studies in Psychiatry. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: submission of written proposal outlining course of study (to be structured by instructor and student at time of initial enrollment). Additional information and course proposal forms available in Office of Education, C8-237/C8-238 NPI&H. Directed individual research and study in psychiatry at graduate level.

Scope and Objectives

Psychology is a subject of considerable interest to most people — we all tend to practice some form of intuitive psychology in an attempt to understand ourselves and the people and groups with whom we interact. The curriculum offered by the UCLA Department of Psychology presents psychology as a scientific discipline that employs systematic methods of inquiry to study and explain human and animal behavior — both normal and abnormal — in terms of a variety of underlying variables, including neural, physiological, and cognitive processes; developmental factors and individual differences; and social and interpersonal influences and contexts. According to recent surveys, the UCLA Psychology Department is ranked as one of the top departments of its kind in the country.

The structure of the undergraduate curriculum has been designed to reflect the extensive breadth of psychology — in terms of both the range of behavioral phenomena studied and the variety of methods and theoretical approaches employed — while allowing students to pursue in greater depth those areas in which they become most interested. Beyond basic core courses, students can take many specialized courses in areas such as psychobiology, animal behavior, learning and memory, motivation, perception, cognition, measurement, personality, and clinical, social, developmental, community, and health psychology. The curriculum also provides excellent opportunities for research experience — either in the form of laboratory courses or by participation with faculty and graduate students in a wide variety of research projects.

A choice of three undergraduate majors is offered: a B.A. degree in Psychology and B.S. degrees in Cognitive Science and in Psychobiology. While the majors overlap in certain fundamental and basic knowledge bases, they differ considerably in their focus (i.e., the extent to which certain areas of psychology and related disciplines are studied) and in terms of the different student interests and needs they satisfy. For nonmajors, the department offers many courses that can give them new and valuable insights into the understanding of human behavior, including their own.

At the graduate level, the department offers training leading to the Ph.D. degree with emphases in areas such as behavioral neuroscience, clinical, cognitive, developmental, learning and behavior, measurement, and social psychology. The program is designed to prepare future psychologists for careers as scientific investigators, college and university teachers, and professional psychologists.

Psychology B.A.

The Psychology major is the most general of the three majors and offers both broad and in-depth coverage of the fundamental and traditional areas of psychology. It provides students with a strong foundation for postgraduate education in psychology and can serve as excellent background to prepare them for further training in such fields as law, education, government and public policy, business, and many of the health-related professions. Its basic liberal-arts orientation also provides excellent foundation for immediate postbaccalaureate careers in many areas, particularly ones in which an understanding of human behavior and its diversity of expression would be an asset.

The requirements described below represent the minimum requirements in satisfaction of the preparation and the major. Additional courses in psychology, statistics, and related sciences, as well as other types of research and fieldwork experiences, are highly recommended if students plan to pursue graduate work in psychology and related fields. Under special circumstances, graduate-level courses can be taken by undergraduate students, although such courses may not be applied toward degree requirements for the major. For additional information, contact the Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall.

Prepsychology Major

Students need to file a petition in the Undergraduate Advising Office to declare the Prepsychology major. They are then identified as Prepsychology majors until they (1) satisfy the preparation for the major requirements and (2) file a petition to declare the Psychology major.

Preparation for the Major

The following required courses must be taken for a letter grade (a C– or better in each course and a 2.3 overall grade-point average in the preparation courses) before students reach 110 total units (transfer students must complete all remaining preparation courses by the end of the first year of enrollment): Anthropology 7 or 12; Life Sciences 1 or 15 or Physiological Science 3; Chemistry and Biochemistry 2 or 14A or 20A (if students have completed one year of high school chemistry with a C or better, this requirement is waived); one course from Computer Science 2, Mathematics 2, Program in Computing 10A, Statistics 10, or one term of calculus; Physics 10 or 1A or 6A; one course from Philosophy 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 21, 22, 22W, 31, 32; Psychology 10, 100A, 100B. Students cannot take Psychology 100B until they have passed course 100A with a grade of C– or better. Psychology 100A and 100B should be taken early in the career; these courses are open only to students who have declared the Prepsychology major before the term in which they plan to enroll. It is recommended that students with no background in introductory statistics take Statistics 10 before enrolling in course 100A.

Repetition of more than two preparation courses in which a grade of D or F was received or of any preparation course more than once results in automatic denial of admission to the major.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Psychology majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: one human evolution course, one biology course equivalent to Life Sciences 1 or 15 or Physiological Science 3, one general chemistry course (or one year of high school chemistry with a C or better), one general physics course, one philosophy course, one introduction to psychology course, and one course from statistics (recommended), finite mathematics, calculus, computer science theory, or computer programming in C++.

The Major

After satisfying the preparation for the major requirements, students need to petition to enter the major at the Undergraduate Advising Office.

Required: (1) Five core courses selected from Psychology 110, 115 (or M117A, M117B, and M117C), 120A, 120B, 127 or 128, 130 (or one course from 133A through 133I), 135; (2) one laboratory/fieldwork course from 101, 111, 113, 116, 121, 126, 131, 136A, 136B, 136C, 171A, 174, 186A, 186B, 186C; (3) four additional upper division elective courses (16 units) in psychology.

Students who complete Psychology M117A, M117B, M117C receive equivalent credit for course 115 and two upper division psychology electives.

All upper division courses must be taken for a letter grade. A C– or better is required in each core course and in at least one laboratory/fieldwork course. Students must have a 2.0 grade-point average in all upper division courses selected to satisfy major requirements.

Cognitive Science B.S.

The Cognitive Science major focuses on the study of intelligent systems, both real and artificial. While including a strong foundation in the traditional areas of psychology, the major is interdisciplinary in nature and emphasizes subject matter within cognitive psychology, computer science, mathematics, and related disciplines.

The requirements described below include sufficient preparation if students plan to pursue graduate work in cognitive science or related fields; however, they may want to include additional advanced courses in psychology and fields related to cognitive science (e.g., computer science, linguistics, mathematics, philosophy, and statistics) as well as other types of research and fieldwork experiences. Under special circumstances, graduate-level courses can be taken by undergraduate students, although such courses may not be applied toward degree requirements for the major. For additional information, contact the Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall.

Precognitive Science Major

Students need to file a petition in the Undergraduate Advising Office to declare the Precognitive Science major. They are then identified as Precognitive Science majors until they (1) satisfy the preparation for the major requirements and (2) file a petition to declare the Cognitive Science major. Questions about the major should be directed to the Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall.

Preparation for the Major

The following required courses must be taken for a letter grade (a C or better in each course and a 2.5 overall grade-point average in the preparation courses) before students reach 130 total units: Life Sciences 1 or 15 or Physiological Science 3; Chemistry and Biochemistry 2 or 14A or 20A (if students have completed one year of high school chemistry with a C or better, this requirement is waived); Mathematics 31A, 31B; Philosophy 7 or 8 or 9; Physics 10 or 1A or 6A; Program in Computing 10A, 10B, and one course from 15 or 20A or 40; Psychology 10, 85, 100A, 100B. Students cannot take Psychology 100B until they have passed course 100A with a grade of C or better. Psychology 100A and 100B should be taken early in the career; these courses are open only to students who have declared the Precognitive Science major before the term in which they plan to enroll. Students with no background in introductory statistics should take Statistics 10 before enrolling in course 100A.

Repetition of more than two preparation courses in which a grade of D or F was received or of any preparation course more than once results in automatic denial of admission to the major.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Cognitive Science majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: one biology course, one general chemistry course (or one year of high school chemistry with a C or better), two calculus/analytical geometry courses, one general physics course, one philosophy course, one introduction to psychology course, one introduction to cognitive science course, one psychological statistics course, one psychology research methods course, one computer programming course in C++, and one other computer programming course.

The Major

After satisfying the preparation for the major requirements, students need to petition to enter the major at the Undergraduate Advising Office.

Required: (1) Psychology 115 (or M117A, M117B, and M117C), 120A or 120B, and one course from 124A through 124G; (2) one course from 186A or 186B or 186C and one course from 121, 186A, 186B, 186C, or Computer Science 161; (3) three upper division elective courses (12 units) from Psychology 110, 112A through M119N, 123, 124A through 124G (if taken for the major, may not be applied as an elective), 130, 133B, 135, 142H, 150, 151, 187A, 189, 190B or 190C (if content is approved by the Undergraduate Advising Office and courses have not been applied toward the Psychology 188A or 188B requirement), 197 (content must be approved by the Undergraduate Advising Office before elective credit may be granted), Communication Studies 156, Computer Science 111 through M196B, Ethnomusicology 172A, Linguistics 103 through C185B, Mathematics 110A through 171, Philosophy 124 through 136, Statistics 100A, 100B, 100C, CM120A, CM120B; (4) two terms of Psychology 188A or 188B (may be fulfilled by taking any two courses from 188A, 188B, or 190C, provided content is approved by the Undergraduate Advising Office).

Students who complete Psychology M117A, M117B, M117C receive equivalent credit for course 115 and two upper division cognitive science electives.

Students must have a 2.0 grade-point average in all upper division courses selected to satisfy major requirements. With the exception of Psychology 188A and 188B, each course must be taken for a letter grade.

Psychobiology B.S.

The Psychobiology major is designed for students who plan to go on to postgraduate work in physiological psychology, neuroscience, behavioral aspects of biology, or the health sciences. Psychobiology involves the study of brain-behavior relations and laboratory training in standard brain research techniques.

The requirements described below include sufficient preparation if students plan to pursue graduate work in any of the above fields; however, they may want to include additional advanced courses in psychology and related sciences as well as other types of research and fieldwork experiences. Under special circumstances, graduate-level courses can be taken by undergraduate students, although such courses may not be applied toward degree requirements for the major. For additional information, contact the Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall.

Prepsychobiology Major

Students need to file a petition in the Undergraduate Advising Office to declare the Prepsychobiology major. They are then identified as Prepsychobiology majors until they (1) satisfy the preparation for the major requirements and (2) file a petition to declare the Psychobiology major.

Preparation for the Major

Life Sciences Core Curriculum

Required: Life Sciences 1, 2, 3, 4; Chemistry and Biochemistry 14A, 14B, 14BL, 14C, 14CL, and 14D, or 20A, 20B, 20L, 30A, 30AL, 30B, and 30BL; Mathematics 3A, 3B, and 3C, or 31A, 31B, and 32A; Physics 1A, 1B, 1C, 4AL, and 4BL, or 6A, 6B, and 6C.

Also required are Psychology 10, 100A, 100B. Students cannot take Psychology 100B until they have passed course 100A with a grade of C– or better. Psychology 100A and 100B should be taken early in the career; these courses are open only to students who have declared the Prepsychobiology major before the term in which they plan to enroll. Students with no background in introductory statistics should take Statistics 10 before enrolling in course 100A.

All core curriculum courses must be taken for a letter grade (a C– or better in each course and a 2.0 overall grade-point average in the core curriculum) before students reach 150 total units. Psychology 100A and 100B must be completed before students reach 130 total units. Students receiving a grade of D or F in two core curriculum courses, either in separate courses or repetitions of the same course, are subject to dismissal from the major.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Psychobiology majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: one year of general biology with laboratory for majors, preferably equivalent to Life Sciences 1 and 2, one year of calculus, one year of general chemistry with laboratory for majors, one semester of organic chemistry with laboratory, one introduction to psychology course, one psychological statistics course, and one psychology research methods course. A second semester of organic chemistry or one year of calculus-based physics is strongly recommended but not required for admission.

The Major

After satisfying the preparation for the major requirements, students need to petition to enter the major at the Undergraduate Advising Office.

Required: (1) Organismic Biology, Ecology, and Evolution 129 or Psychology 118 or Anthropology 128A and 128B, and Psychology 110, 115 (or M117A, M117B, and M117C), 116, 120A or 120B; (2) one course from Psychology 127 or 128, 130, 133A through 133I,

(3) 16 units of graded elective courses from the following list: Organismic Biology, Ecology, and Evolution 112, 113A, 114 (no more than one from this group), Psychology M117A, M117B, M117C, M117J, 119A through M119O, 190C (only if content is approved by the Undergraduate Advising Office), 197 (content must be approved by the Undergraduate Advising Office before elective credit may be granted), Chemistry and Biochemistry 153A, 153L, Cybernetics M196L, Microbiology, Immunology, and Molecular Genetics 185A, Molecular and Medical Pharmacology M110A, 110B, Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology 104, 138, C139, CM156, 171, Neuroscience 151, Organismic Biology, Ecology, and Evolution 102, C104, 105, 106, 110, 111, C115, 117, C119, 120, 121, 122, 124 (only 4 units may be applied toward the major), 131 (only 4 units may be applied toward the major), C135, 146, M158, 164, M166, 167, 179, Physiological Science 142, C144, 147, M173.

Students who complete Psychology M117A, M117B, M117C receive equivalent credit for course 115 and 10 units of upper division psychobiology electives.

Students must have a 2.0 grade-point average in all upper division courses selected to satisfy major requirements, and each must be taken for a letter grade.

Fieldwork and Research Opportunities

Many research and fieldwork opportunities are open to students who wish to expand their knowledge and broaden their background in the field of psychology. These experiences can be enriching and help bring undergraduates closer to understanding research and its applications in the everyday world. At least one of the following courses is recommended for students planning postgraduate study: Psychology 188A, 188B, 192, 193, 194A, 194B, 194C, 196, 199, or the Student Research Program (SRP) through the College of Letters and Science. Information about these courses and programs is available from the Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall.

Only one 4-unit 199 course may be taken per term, and only 16 units of course 199 may be applied toward the degree. Only one 199 course may be taken for a letter grade (additional 199 courses may be taken on a P/NP basis). If approved in advance by the Undergraduate Advising Office, 4 units of course 199 may be applied toward the elective course requirements for the Psychology major and toward the Psychology 188 requirement for the Cognitive Science major.

Honors

Honors Courses

Each year the department offers a selection of honors courses, designated with an H suffix. The courses provide close contact with faculty members, emphasize readings in the original literature, student reports, and small group discussions, and may include field or research experience. Enrollment priority in honors courses is given to students in the departmental honors program. Consult the College of Letters and Science for information on requirements for College Honors.

Honors Program

Psychology, Cognitive Science, and Psychobiology majors intending to continue study at the graduate level are encouraged to apply for the departmental honors program. Students work for one year with a faculty sponsor on a research project that is the basis of a formal honors thesis. During that year they also participate in a weekly seminar (Psychology 190A, 190B, 190C) in which thesis projects are presented and discussed and other topics of interest are explored with invited faculty members and other guests. Other requirements may apply. Consult the Undergraduate Advising Office during Spring Quarter for further information and application forms. Satisfactory completion of the program and the other requirements for the major leads to awarding of the degree with honors or highest honors.

Psychology Research Opportunity Programs

The Psychology Research Opportunity Programs (PROPS) represent a vital effort to identify and mentor underrepresented minority and/or low-income students. The purpose of PROPS is to encourage such students to participate in research and pursue graduate studies leading to careers in academia. The recruitment and application process for PROPS takes place each Fall Quarter. Students selected to participate are awarded stipends for Winter and Spring Quarters, during which time they do research under the mentorship of a psychology faculty member. In addition, students are required to attend weekly seminars covering such topics as graduate school, careers in academia, and research opportunities in various fields of psychology. Prior research experience is not required. This is an excellent opportunity for students to begin their research careers and acquire the needed experience to pursue advanced studies.

Developmental Disabilities Immersion Program and Concentration

Program

The Developmental Disabilities Immersion Program (DDIP), cosponsored by the Department of Psychology, the Department of Psychiatry and Biobehavioral Sciences, and the Office of Instructional Development — Center for Experiential Education and Service Learning (CEESL), provides a community learning environment for undergraduate students who devote two quarters to the intensive study of developmental disabilities. Each year a group of 30 students is selected for the program which runs during Winter and Spring Quarters. Students participate in courses, fieldwork, and research at selected University and community facilities serving persons with developmental disabilities.

Required courses include Psychology/Psychiatry M180A, M180B, M181A, M181B. Courses are designed to foster discussions integrating students' field and research experiences. Lectures and discussions explore biological, psychological, and social questions concerning causes and treatment of developmental disabilities. Also covered is an analysis of programs for the care and training of individuals with developmental disabilities. The fieldwork component gives students the opportunity to apply theories and concepts learned in their coursework to actual settings involving individuals with developmental disabilities. Students also undertake a two-quarter research project under the guidance of a UCLA faculty member.

Concentration

To earn a concentration, majors in Psychology, Cognitive Science, and Psychobiology must be accepted into the Developmental Disabilities Immersion Program. Information and applications are available from the Center for Experiential Education and Service Learning, 160 Powell Library. Applications are due the Spring Quarter prior to the academic year in which students wish to participate in DDIP.

The following courses are required for the concentration: Psychology 127 (may also be applied as one of the three upper division electives required for the Psychology major), 130 or one course from 133A through 133I (also satisfies a core requirement for the Psychology major), M180A, M180B, M181A, M181B, 193 (two terms). With the exception of course 193, each course must be taken for a letter grade. If a psychology major earns the DDIP concentration, upper division elective credit for Psychology M180A, M180B, M181A, M181B does not apply toward the major. Students in the department who complete the requirements receive a departmental certificate of completion at graduation; they must notify the department during the term they plan to graduate to receive the certificate. The concentration does not appear on the diploma or transcript.

Interested students should contact the DDIP coordinator at the Center for Experiential Education and Service Learning, 160 Powell Library, (310) 825-7867, for information regarding admission and an application.

Computing Specialization

Majors in Psychology, Psychobiology, and Cognitive Science may select a specialization in Computing by (1) satisfying all the requirements for a bachelor's degree in the specified major, (2) completing Program in Computing 10A, 10B, and at least one course from 10C, 15, 20A, 30, 40, or 60, and (3) completing at least three courses from Psychology 85, 121, 142H, 150, 186A, 186B, 186C (one 199 course may be substituted for one of these courses provided project has been approved by vice chair). A grade of C or better is required in each course. Students graduate with a bachelor's degree in their major and a specialization in Computing. Students planning to enter this specialization should consult the Undergraduate Advising Office.

Applied Developmental Psychology Minor

The Applied Developmental Psychology minor is designed to (1) provide a coherent academic program with focus on issues central to improving the well-being of children and their families, (2) teach undergraduates how to apply theories, research methods, and research findings to practical concerns, and (3) prepare students to join or receive further training in various child-related professions.

The minor is open to all enrolled UCLA students (including Cognitive Science, Psychobiology, and Psychology majors) who have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better and have been accepted into an approved applied developmental psychology internship program. For further information about applying to the internship program, contact the director of the Infant Development Program, 1611 Franz Hall, (310) 825-2896. For questions about additional course requirements for the minor, contact a counselor in the Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, (310) 825-2730.

Required Lower Division Course (4 units): Psychology 10.

Required Upper Division Courses (24 units): Psychology 133X and 133Y (to be taken concurrently with the two-term internship described below) and four additional courses, of which at least three must be upper division, from Education 125A, 181A, 181B, Psychology 129F, 131, 132, 133B through 133I, 197 (content must be approved by the Undergraduate Advising Office), 199 (content must be approved by the Undergraduate Advising Office), Sociology 136, M174. One of the four additional courses must include either Psychology 130, one course from 133B through 133I, or 197 (content must be approved by the Undergraduate Advising Office).

Internship Requirement: Students work as interns for two consecutive academic terms at an approved daycare center/school and enroll concurrently in Psychology 133X and 133Y. The internship provides hands-on experience working with young children as teacher's aides and opportunities for observing children.

No more than two courses may be applied toward both the students' majors and this minor. All minor courses, except for the internship courses, must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Cognitive Science Minor

The Cognitive Science minor is designed to introduce students to cognitive science topics as addressed in a number of different disciplines, such as biology, computer science, engineering, linguistics, mathematics, philosophy, and psychology, while allowing them to pursue a more in-depth study of cognitive science topics within specific areas of their own choice.

The minor consists of two parts. In the first part students complete background courses and satisfy a computer programming experience requirement. In the second part they select a primary cluster from four clusters of upper division courses that have been organized to reflect different aspects of cognitive science. Students take three courses within their primary cluster and two additional courses from the remaining clusters (secondary clusters).

The minor is open to all enrolled UCLA students, other than Cognitive Science majors, who have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Students must make an appointment with a counselor in the Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, (310) 825-2730, to enter the minor and receive counseling on how to select a primary cluster.

Required Courses (28 units): Psychology 85 and one course from 15, 100B, Computer Science 2, Linguistics 1, 20.

The computer programming experience requirement is satisfied by petition based on coursework (e.g., completion of Program in Computing 10A) or other relevant programming experience.

Students must also select (with approval of the Undergraduate Advising Office) and complete one of the following four primary clusters: (1) biological basis of cognition cluster — three courses from Linguistics C135, Psychology 115, 116, M117C (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175C or Neuroscience M101C or Physiological Science M180C), 119B, 119F, M119L, M119N; (2) computation and modeling cluster — three courses from Biomathematics 108, Computer Science 161, 163, Psychology 150, 151, 186A, 186B, 186C (at least one course must be from Computer Science 161, Psychology 186A, 186B, 186C); (3) human cognition cluster — Psychology 121 and two courses from 112C, 120A or 120B, 124A through 124G, 133B, 133BH, 133C, 133E; (4) mind and language cluster — three courses from Linguistics 120A, 120B, 125, C130, C132, C135, C185A, Philosophy 124, 125, 126, 127A, 127B, 129, 170, 172, Psychology 122, 123, 124A.

Students must also fulfill a secondary cluster requirement of two additional courses from one or more of the clusters not selected as the primary cluster.

No more than two courses may be applied toward both the students' majors and this minor. All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of

2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Infant Development Program

The Megan E. Daly Infant Development Program (IDP) is designed as a teaching and research facility for the department and is set up to accommodate both cross-sectional and longitudinal investigation of infants, toddlers, their families, and caregivers. In addition, the program provides an opportunity for undergraduate students in developmental psychology and other areas to acquire firsthand experience working with infants and toddlers on an individual basis or in a group setting. The program has two primary functions: (1) to offer quality group care for infants and toddlers of the students, staff, and faculty of the Psychology Department and other UCLA departments and (2) to serve as a teaching and research facility for the Psychology Department and the UCLA community.

Since the program was established in May 1983, it has served approximately 15 children and their parents each year and has trained an average of 15 students per term. The program is located in Franz Hall and accommodates children from three months to three years old, operating year-round from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Clinic for the Behavioral Treatment of Children

The Clinic for the Behavioral Treatment of Children carries out diagnosis, treatment, and research on children with severe psychological problems, such as children with autism and those with severe developmental disorders. The treatment philosophy is largely behavioral/educational, with emphasis on language acquisition, peer and school integration, and parent training. Students are taught behavioral treatment procedures and work in an apprenticeship relation to senior staff. Prior research has focused on variables controlling self-destructive behavior, perceptual deficits, language acquisition, and emotional/social attachments. The clinic serves as a teaching and research environment for both graduate and undergraduate students.

UCLA Psychology Clinic

The UCLA Psychology Clinic in the Department of Psychology is a major training center for students in the clinical psychology Ph.D. program, one of the top-ranked programs in the country. It provides a broad range of psychological services to children and adults, including assessment and individual, couples, family, and group therapy. Clients cover the entire age range and represent diverse populations in the community.

Student therapists receive very close supervision and are encouraged to relate their case material to academic learning and current research. Students and faculty members are also involved in a variety of research projects through the clinic.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Psychology offers Master of Arts (M.A.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Psychology.

Psychology

Lower Division Courses

10. Introductory Psychology. (4) Lecture, four hours. General introduction including topics in cognitive, experimental, personality, developmental, social, and clinical psychology; six hours of psychological research. P/NP or letter grading.

15. Introductory Psychobiology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for nonmajors. Survey of genetic, evolutionary, physiological, pharmacological, and experiential factors affecting behavior. Using comparative approach where appropriate, emphasis on relevance of biological mechanisms to understanding of humans and their interaction with their environment. P/NP or letter grading.

85. Introduction to Cognitive Science. (4) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of computer metaphor of mind as an information-processing system, focusing especially on perception, knowledge representation, and thought based on research in cognitive psychology, neuropsychology, and artificial intelligence. Many examples from visual information processing.

88A-88Z. Lower Division Seminars. (4 each) Seminar, three hours. Enforced prerequisite: course 10. Limited to freshmen/sophomores. Intensive analysis in seminar situations of selected topics of current psychological interest. Consult Schedule of Classes for topics and instructors. May be repeated for credit.

88A. Stress, Adaptation, and Coping. Limited to freshmen. Physiological and psychological processes related to stresses and strains of daily living and potential relation of these processes to disease states. Examination of multifaceted nature of coping with stressors and exploration of strategies for stress management. P/NP or letter grading.

97. Variable Topics in Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Enforced prerequisite: course 10. Study of selected topics in psychology at introductory level; lecture format designed for freshmen/sophomores. P/NP or letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

100A. Psychological Statistics. (4) Lecture, four hours. Requisites: course 10, and one course from Computer Science 2, Mathematics 2, Program in Computing 10A, Statistics 10, or one term of calculus. Designed for premajors. Basic statistical procedures and their application to research and practice in various areas of psychology. Letter grading.

100B. Research Methods in Psychology. (6) Lecture, two hours; laboratory, four hours. Enforced requisites: courses 10, 100A with grades of C- or better for prepsychology and prepsychobiology, C or better for precognitive science. Introduction to research methods and critical analysis in psychology. Lecture and laboratory topics include experimental and non-experimental research methods, statistical design and analysis as applied to a broad range of basic and applied research issues. P/NP or letter grading.

101. General Psychology Laboratory. (4) Lecture, one hour; laboratory, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B. General laboratory course for psychology students to acquire key concepts in psychology through active participation in enriched environment. Use of current technologies (e.g., Web-based teaching, interactive computer demonstrations) in challenging atmosphere to learn how mind works. Letter grading.

M107. Asian American Personality and Mental Health. (4) (Same as Asian American Studies M117.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Foundations of personality development and mental health among Asian Americans. Topics include culture, family patterns, achievements, stressors, resources, and immigrant and minority group status. P/NP or letter grading.

110. Fundamentals of Learning. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Designed for juniors/seniors. Experimental findings on animal and human conditioning; retention and transfer of training; relation of learning and motivation. Intended to provide empirical basis for theory and research in this area. P/NP or letter grading.

111. Learning Laboratory. (4) Lecture, two hours; laboratory, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, 110. Designed for departmental majors. Laboratory experience with techniques in study of learning, especially with animals. Letter grading.

112A. Basic Processes of Motivated Behavior. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 110. Designed for juniors/seniors. Examination of some basic processes underlying motivated behavior, stressing environmental determinants of behaviors such as feeding, drinking, and reproduction-related behavior. Discussion of physiological mechanisms that contribute to such behaviors. Consideration of topics such as reinforcement, acquired motivation, and drug addiction. Evaluation of evidence obtained in laboratory studies conducted with animals. P/NP or letter grading.

112B. Psychobiology of Fear and Anxiety. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 110. Recommended: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Presentation of biological and behavioral approaches to fear and anxiety, taken from laboratory and applied research. In addition to overview of major principles from each approach, emphasis on areas in which significant research advances have recently occurred. Examination of concordance and discordance between results from laboratory and applied research. P/NP or letter grading.

112C. Principles of Skill Acquisition. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 110 or 120A or 120B (recommended). Designed for Psychology majors. Investigation into principles of human skill learning, with focus on general principles of skill learning derived from laboratory settings. These principles have relevance to various industrial or occupational settings, musical performances, vehicle control, sport, and other activities in which complex perceptual-motor skills must be acquired with practice. Major topics include laboratory measurement procedures, effective structure of practice settings, feedback and knowledge of results, learning of automaticity, individual differences, and evaluation of various theories of skill learning. P/NP or letter grading.

112D. Animal Cognition. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 110. Designed for juniors/seniors. Investigation of scientific study of cognition and behavior in animals. Topics include perception and attention, working and reference memory, spatial cognition, timing and counting, concept formation, and abstract reasoning. Most discussions focus on laboratory findings with animals, as viewed from evolutionary framework concerned with natural histories of animals. P/NP or letter grading.

113. Behavior and Alcohol Laboratory. (4) Discussion, two hours; laboratory, four hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B. Students conduct an experiment studying effects of alcohol on learning and complex processes using paid volunteers. Examination of set and setting and role of individual differences in relation to current theories of alcohol use and abuse. P/NP or letter grading.

113H. Behavior and Alcohol Laboratory (Honors). (4) Discussion, two hours; laboratory, four hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B. Honors course parallel to course 113. P/NP or letter grading.

114. Alcoholism. (4) Designed for juniors/seniors. Theories and research on impact, causes, characteristics, and treatment of alcoholism considered from a biobehavioral point of view.

115. Principles of Behavioral Neuroscience. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: course 100A, Life Sciences 2 or 15. Not open to students with credit for course M117A. Designed for juniors/seniors. Nervous system anatomy, physiology, pharmacology, and their relationship to behavior. P/NP or letter grading.

116. Behavioral Neuroscience Laboratory. (4) Lecture, one hour; laboratory, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, 115. Designed for Psychobiology and Psychology majors. Laboratory experience with various topics in behavioral neuroscience. P/NP or letter grading.

M117A-M117B-M117C. Neuroscience: From Molecules to Mind. (5-5-5) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A-M175B-M175C, Neuroscience M101A-M101B-M101C, and Physiological Science M180A-M180B-M180C.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, 90 minutes. P/NP or letter grading:

M117A. Cellular and Systems Neuroscience. (5) Lecture, four hours; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: Chemistry 14C or 30A or former course 30 (14C may be taken concurrently), Life Sciences 2, Physics 1B or 6C. Not open for credit to students with credit for Physiological Science 111A. For Physiological Science majors only, a grade of C- or better is required to proceed to Physiological Science 111B. Cellular neurophysiology, membrane potential, action potentials, and synaptic transmission. Sensory systems and motor system; how assemblies of neurons process complex information and control movement. P/NP or letter grading.

M117B. Molecular and Developmental Neuroscience. (5) Lecture, four hours; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: course 115 or M117A (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A or Neuroscience M101A or Physiological Science M180A) or Physiological Science 111A, Life Sciences 3, 4. Molecular biology of channels and receptors: focus on voltage dependent channels and neurotransmitter receptors. Molecular biology of supramolecular mechanisms: synaptic transmission, axonal transport, cytoskeleton, and muscle. Classical experiments and modern molecular approaches in developmental neurobiology. P/NP or letter grading.

M117C. Behavioral and Cognitive Neuroscience. (5) Lecture, four hours; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisite: course 115 or M117A (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A or Neuroscience M101A or Physiological Science M180A) or Physiological Science 111A. Neural mechanisms underlying motivation, learning, and cognition. P/NP or letter grading.

M117J. Biological Bases of Psychiatric Disorders. (4) (Same as Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M191, Neuroscience M130, Physiological Science M181, and Psychiatry M191.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 115 or M117A (or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology M175A or Neuroscience M101A or Physiological Science M180A) or Physiological Science 111A. Underlying brain systems involved in psychiatric symptoms and neurological disorders, including schizophrenia, depression, bipolar disorder, obsessive/compulsive disorder. Provides basic understanding of brain dysfunctions that contribute to disorders and rationales for pharmacological treatments. P/NP or letter grading.

119A. Neuropsychopharmacology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Analysis of basic pharmacologic principles to include interaction of drugs with neurochemically significant substances in the brain.

119AH. Neuropsychopharmacology (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Honors course parallel to course 119A.

119B. Human Neurophysiology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Exploration of biological basis of human cognitive processing, with emphasis on function of cerebral cortex.

119D. Behavioral Pharmacology. (4) Requisite: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Experimental and theoretical treatment of drug-behavior relationships. Particular emphasis on behavior and pharmacological mechanisms of drug action and interaction with neuronal function.

119DH. Behavioral Pharmacology (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Experimental and theoretical treatment of drug-behavior relationships; pharmacological approaches to mood, aggression, learning, motivation; experimental studies of addiction.

119F. Neuron Circuitry and Behavior. (4) Requisites: course 115, Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology 171. Designed for juniors/seniors. Presentation of current data and theory concerning how neuron circuits produce behavior. Mechanisms of perception, response selection, motor pattern generation, learning, and motivation, with emphasis on operation of these processes in well-defined neural circuits.

119G. Psychobiology of Pain and Pain Inhibition. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 115. Designed for seniors. Lectures and discussions on neural mechanisms of pain and problem of chronic pain disease.

M119L. Human Neuropsychology. (4) (Same as Neuroscience M119L.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 115 (or M117A and M117C), 120A or 120B. Designed for juniors/seniors. Survey of experimental and clinical human neuropsychology; neural basis of higher cognitive functions. P/NP or letter grading.

119M. Physiological Psychology of Learning. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisite: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Introduction to classical and current literature on mechanisms of learning, considering both cell-biological mechanisms and brain circuitry.

M119N. The Visual System. (4) (Same as Neuroscience M119N.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 115 or Molecular, Cell, and Developmental Biology 171 or Neuroscience M101A or Physiological Science 111A. The ability to image and analyze the visual world is a truly remarkable feat. Coverage of anatomy and physiology of visual processing from the retina to visual cortex through lectures, extensive reading, and discussions.

M119O. Psychology of Aging. (4) (Same as Gerontology M119O.) Requisite: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Aging refers to developmental changes occurring at end stages of life. Some alterations that occur represent improvement, others are detrimental. Examination of impact of aging process on mental phenomena and exploration of ways in which positive changes can be maximally utilized and impact of detrimental alterations minimized. P/NP or letter grading.

119P. Mapping Mind through Its Molecules. (4) Lecture, four hours. Requisite: course 15 or 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Explanation of how neural molecules provide unique window into mind. Topics include neurotransmitters, receptors, ion channels, and signal transduction molecules. Roles these molecules play in information processing, consciousness, learning, memory, neural plasticity, degeneration, and psychiatric disorders. P/NP or letter grading.

119Q. Psychobiology of Sleep and Dreams. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Review of measurement and comparison of sleep in mammals and submammalian species, circadian rhythms and circadian control of sleep, development and aging of sleep, neural and neurochemical control of sleep, effects of sleep deprivation, sleep in psychiatric disorders, human sleep disorders, and function of dreams. P/NP or letter grading.

119R. Neurobiology of Visual Cognition. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Review of some recent advances in understanding of neurobiology of visual cognition. Topics include how is visual information processed by brain to generate actions? How do we recognize objects? How do we perceive emotions displayed by other subjects? P/NP or letter grading.

119S. Neural Basis of Learning and Computing with Neurons. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 115. Designed for juniors/seniors. Introduction to neural basis of learning and memory. Examination of current theories of what happens in brain when we learn and acquire new information. Introduction to how brain may use neural networks for learning and pattern recognition. How neural networks perform computations. P/NP or letter grading.

M119X. Biology and Behavioral Neuroscience of Aging. (4) (Same as Gerontology M119X.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Biologic mechanisms of aging process and its terminal phase, death, have been increasingly studied in recent years. Establishment of what is known experimentally about biology and behavioral neuroscience of aging and evaluation of theories developed to account for this knowledge. P/NP or letter grading.

120B. Sensation and Perception. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Designed for juniors/seniors. Acquisition of information about physical world through basic sensory mechanisms and perceptual processes. Perception of objects, surfaces, space, motion, and events. Connections between information, computations, and biological mechanisms in vision, audition, and other systems. P/NP or letter grading.

121. Laboratory in Cognitive Psychology. (4) Laboratory, four hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, 120A or 120B. Designed for Psychology and Cognitive Science majors. Laboratory experience with methods and phenomena from research on human perception, memory, and cognition. P/NP or letter grading.

122. Language and Communication. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Introduction to psychology of language and communication; verbal and nonverbal channels; interlinguistic and intralinguistic variation; animal communication; biological bases of language; production and comprehension of speech and writing; relation to perception, memory, and thought; conversational interaction; language development.

123. Psycholinguistics. (4) Designed for juniors/seniors. Current theory and research in psycholinguistics: survey of language acquisition, language perception, and language production; language physiology and pathology; problems of representation, sequencing, and timing in language and other cognitive skills; errors in speech production and perception.

124A. Advanced Topics in Sensation and Perception. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 120A or 120B. Designed for juniors/seniors. Contemporary research and theory about visual and auditory perception. Topics include physiological mechanisms, psychophysical studies and models, and computational approaches. P/NP or letter grading.

124AH. Sensation and Perception (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Honors course parallel to course 124A.

124B. Visual Information Processing. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 120A or 120B. Exploration of issues in visual information, such as storage and representation of visual information in memory, pattern recognition, nature and role of attention in visual processing, word and picture recognition, object perception, and imagery. Possible consideration of developmental aspects. P/NP or letter grading.

124C. Human Memory. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 120A or 120B. Designed for juniors/seniors. Analysis of recent research on basic processes and structural components that comprise the human memory system. Discussion topics include practical implications of such research for instruction, marketing, and witness testimony. P/NP or letter grading.

124D. Principles of Human Performance. (4) Designed for Psychology majors. Investigation into laboratory-based methods and principles of human performance. Major topics include research methods for human performance, central control of movements, anticipation and timing, automaticity, sensory involvement in action such as vision and kinesthesia, role of reflexes, speed-accuracy trade-offs, and individual differences and abilities. Principles discussed should have relevance for numerous real-world situations in which complex perceptual-motor skills are required, such as in industrial or occupational settings, musical performances, vehicle control, and sport.

124E. Language and Cognition. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, and 120A or 120B. Designed for juniors/seniors. Recent theories of language and cognition; nature of categories, feedback, and error detection in language and cognition; modularity; ambiguity; knowledge acquisition; processes and representations underlying perception, production, attention, and awareness in language and cognition. P/NP or letter grading.

124F. Thinking. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 120A or 120B. Analysis of experimental studies of human categorization, reasonings, decision making, problem solving, creativity, and related topics. P/NP or letter grading.

124FH. Thinking (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours. Honors course parallel to course 124F. P/NP or letter grading.

124G. Cognitive Aging. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 120A or 120B. Designed for juniors/seniors. Recent facts and theories on relations between normal aging and cognition, including perception, language comprehension, learning, memory, thinking, inhibitory processes in attention, sequential processes in action, general slowing phenomenon, and related neuropsychological issues. P/NP or letter grading.

126. Clinical Psychology Laboratory. (4) Laboratory, four hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, 127. Designed for departmental majors. Methods, designs, and issues in conduct of clinical psychology research. Students develop and conduct research. Content varies by instructor, with concentration on one of following: schizophrenia, mood disorders, anxiety disorders, childhood disorders, psychophysiological methods, observational methods with couples and families. Letter grading.

127. Abnormal Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Study of dynamics and prevention of abnormal behavior, including neuroses, psychoses, character disorders, psychosomatic reactions, and other abnormal personality patterns.

127H. Abnormal Psychology (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours. Overview of characteristics of major forms of psychopathology, theories and research on causes of disorder, types of treatment, social and legal issues in mental illness.

128. Psychopathology. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 10. Not open to students with credit for course 127. Overview of recent theories and research on different forms of psychopathology, such as depression, anxiety, schizophrenia, and childhood disorders. Discussion of assessment and treatment approaches. In-depth exploration of selected topics during discussion meetings. P/NP or letter grading.

129A. Personality Measurement. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Rationale, methods, and content of studies dealing with problems of describing persons in terms of a limited set of dimensions. Detailed consideration of research literature dealing with a few representative personality dimensions. P/NP or letter grading.

129B. Introduction to Psychoanalysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Development of Freud's ideas from 1895 to 1926, with emphasis on how his theory evolved from a drive-based reinforcement model to the structural theory in which unconscious fantasy plays a crucial role. Coverage of developments beyond Freud, especially work of the British school under leadership of Klein, Winnicott, and Bim. P/NP or letter grading.

129C. Culture and Mental Health. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Introduction to study of culture and human behavior in general, and culture and mental health in particular. Emphasis on cultural groups that comprise major U.S. ethnic groups (i.e., African Americans, Latinos/Chicanos, Asian Americans, and American Indians). P/NP or letter grading.

129D. Personality. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Survey of major topics in field of personality, including personality theory, personality assessment, and physiological, behavioral, and cultural role of perception, learning, and motivation in personality.

129E. Human Sexuality. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for senior Psychology majors. Overview of psychology of human sexuality. Psychological research, assessment, and therapy described in a format which highlights their significance for understanding human sexual functioning. Psychological mechanisms underlying expression of human sexuality.

129F. Clinical Psychology of Childhood and Adolescence. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 127. Survey of child and adolescent psychopathology and psychotherapy from a developmental perspective. Coverage includes such conditions as anxiety disorders, depression, conduct and attention problems, eating disorders, and autism, with information on prevalence, causes, common treatments and their effects. P/NP or letter grading.

130. Developmental Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Designed for juniors/seniors. Elaboration of developmental aspects of physical, mental, social, and emotional growth from birth to adolescence. P/NP or letter grading.

131. Research in Developmental Psychology. (4) Discussion, one hour; laboratory, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, and 130 or one course from 133A through 133I. Designed for Psychology and Cognitive Science majors. Forms of scientific writing; ethics of research, especially with minors; special advantages and problems of asking developmental research questions; relevant methodologies for experimental and observational work; data analyses and data presentation options. Letter grading.

132. Learning Disabilities in Perspective. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Exploration of different orientations to persons with learning problems, emphasizing assessment and intervention approaches and psychological impact of such approaches. Topics include interaction of learner and environment, sociopolitical nature of classroom, psychological impact of schooling, grades, and evaluations, process vs. goal focus in learning.

133A. Adolescent Development. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Examination of cognitive, social, physical, and physiological development of the adolescent. P/NP or letter grading.

133B. Cognitive Development. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Major theories, approaches, and issues in study of cognitive development. Readings include original research on important topics such as development of perception, language, thinking, and problem solving, and acquisition of concepts and domain-specific language. P/NP or letter grading.

133BH. Seminar: Cognitive Development (Honors). (4) Seminar, three hours. Honors course parallel to course 133B.

133C. Language Development. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Application of principles of cognitive development, learning, and perception to study of language development. Topics include first and second language acquisition (sounds, meanings, grammatical structures), learning mechanisms, communication skills, and relation between language and thought in children. P/NP or letter grading.

133D. Social and Personality Development. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Theory and research on social and personality development during childhood. Topics include parent/child attachment, temperament, self-control, aggression, sex-typing, self-concept, moral reasoning and behavior, social status and social skills, and peer group relations. P/NP or letter grading.

133E. Perceptual Development. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Topics include origins and development of human perceptual abilities, origins of knowledge about functionally important aspects of the environment, ecological and computational issues in perception, research and theory about initial perceptual capacities, and some sensory foundations. P/NP or letter grading.

133F. Psychology and Education. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Application of principles of cognitive development, learning, and perception to educational problems. Topics include general instructional issues, psychology of reading and mathematics, exceptional children, early childhood education, and education of the disadvantaged. P/NP or letter grading.

133G. Culture and Human Development. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Role of culture in human development through psychology, anthropology, and autobiography. Students relate material from lectures and readings, through empirical research projects, to diverse cultural backgrounds in class, at UCLA, and in the broader community. P/NP or letter grading.

133I. Applied Developmental Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Application of developmental psychology to issues pertaining to improving well-being of children and their families. Topics include quality of child care, patterns and ranges of normal child behaviors, developmental disabilities, safety, legal, and public policy issues, child-rearing practices. P/NP or letter grading.

133X. Applied Developmental Psychology. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisite: course 10. Designed for Applied Developmental Psychology minors. Issues on improving well-being of children and their families, relating research literature to ongoing fieldwork experiences through lectures and discussion, conducting and writing up assessment and observation of children, and designing daycare curricula. P/NP grading.

133Y. Advanced Applied Developmental Psychology. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: courses 10, 133X. Designed for Applied Developmental Psychology minors. Advanced issues on improving well-being of children and their families, relating research literature to ongoing fieldwork experiences through lectures and discussion, conducting and writing up assessment and observation of children, and designing daycare curricula. P/NP grading.

135. Social Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Designed for juniors/seniors. Interrelationships between the individual and his social environment. Social influences on motivation, perception, and behavior. Development and change of attitudes and opinions. Psychological analysis of small groups, social stratification, and mass phenomena. P/NP or letter grading.

136A. Social Psychology Laboratory. (4) Lecture, one hour; laboratory, four hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, 135. Designed for Psychology majors. Introduction to research designs and methods used to test social psychological hypothesis, including experiments, observation, content analysis, and/or questionnaires. P/NP or letter grading.

136B. Nonexperimental Methods in Social Psychology. (4) Lecture, two hours; laboratory, two hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, 135. Designed for Psychology majors. Research experience with nonexperimental methods for study of social attitudes or behavior, including fieldwork with survey research, naturalistic observation, or questionnaires. P/NP or letter grading.

136C. Survey Methods in Psychology. (4) Lecture, two hours; laboratory, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, 135. Designed for Psychology majors. Survey research in psychology, with particular emphasis on surveys of social and political attitudes. Actual experience in systematic survey research such as that done by media polling agencies, market research companies, and academic survey research centers. Topics include survey design, sampling, interviewing techniques, response rates, questionnaire design, data coding, and analysis. Training in telephone interviewing techniques in laboratories. P/NP or letter grading.

137AH. Sport Psychology (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Honors course parallel to course 137A.

137B. Attitude Formation and Change. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 135. Structure and functions of attitudes, their measurement, how they develop, and methods for changing them. P/NP or letter grading.

137C. Close Relationships. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 135. Examination of research and theory about friendship, dating, and marriage, with emphasis on how these relationships are affected by gender and changing sex roles. P/NP or letter grading.

137D. Introduction to Health Psychology. (4) Requisite: course 10. Areas of health, illness, treatment, and delivery of treatment that can be elucidated by understanding of psychological concepts and research, psychological perspective on these problems, and how psychological perspective might be enlarged and extended in the medical area.

M137E. Work Behavior of Women and Men. (4) (Same as Women's Studies M137E.) Lecture, two and one-half hours. Requisite: course 10 or Women's Studies 10. Designed for seniors. Examination of work behavior of women and men. Topics include antecedents of career choice, job findings, leadership, performance evaluation, discrimination and evaluation bias, job satisfaction, and interdependence of work and family roles. P/NP or letter grading.

137F. Introduction to Sport Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Survey of topics in sport psychology, including leadership and team dynamics, moral development and aggression, personality, motivation, fan behavior, and performance enhancement. Consideration of youth sport through world-class athletics. P/NP or letter grading.

137I. Interpersonal Influence and Social Power. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 135. Theory and research focusing on how people influence one another and resist such influence, and on the bases of social power. Motivations and effects of influence for the powerholder and target of influence. Applications to such problems and issues as power and leadership in organizations, interpersonal influence and health, power relationships in the family, interpersonal influence in everyday life, social power of political figures.

M137J. Psychology of Language and Gender. (4) (Same as Communication Studies M124 and Women's Studies M137J.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Designed for juniors/seniors. Examination of current topics at intersection of gender and language. Topics include sex differentiation in language cross-culturally; sex bias in lexicon and usage; sex differences in lexicon, syntax, phonology, and nonverbal behavior; development of sex-differentiated language in children; "women's" and "men's" language in various racial/ethnic/class/sexual preference groups; and conversational interaction. P/NP or letter grading.

M138. Electoral Politics: Political Psychology. (4) (Same as Political Science M141A.) Lecture, three or four hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Requisite: course 10. Designed for juniors/seniors. Examination of political behavior, political socialization, personality and politics, racial conflict, and psychological analysis of public opinion on these issues.

M140. Introduction to Study of Aging. (4) (Same as Gerontology M140 and Social Welfare M140.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Perspectives on major features of human aging — biological, social, psychological, and humanistic. Introduction to information on the range of influences on aging to prepare students for subsequent specialization. P/NP or letter grading.

142H. Advanced Statistical Methods in Psychology (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, two hours. Requisites: courses 100A, 100B. Survey of statistical techniques commonly used in psychology, education, and behavioral and social sciences: correlational techniques, analysis variance, and multiple regression. P/NP or letter grading.

144. Psychological Tests and Evaluation. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 100A. Further study of principles of measurement, stressing basic concepts. Application to problems of test construction, administration, and interpretation. P/NP or letter grading.

M147A. Psychology of Lesbian Experience. (4) (Same as Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender Studies M147A and Women's Studies M147A.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 10 or Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender Studies M114 or Women's Studies 10. Designed for juniors/seniors. Review of research and theory in psychology and women's studies to examine various aspects of lesbian experience, impact of heterosexism/stigma, gender role socialization, minority status of women and lesbians, identity development within a multicultural society, changes in psychological theories about lesbians in sociohistorical context. P/NP or letter grading.

M147B. Evolution of Interpersonal Communication. (4) (Same as Communication Studies M126.) Lecture, four hours. Examination of current topics in interpersonal communication from perspective of evolutionary psychology and biology. Topics include deception, miscommunication between sexes, and co-evolution of signaler and receiver adaptations. Letter grading.

150. Mathematical Models in Psychology. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Requisites: Mathematics 3C or 31B, Computer Science 10C or 10F. Review of theoretical models and experimental evidence for these models in various areas of psychology. Topics include mathematical computer models of learning, perception, cognition, and personality.

151. Computer Applications in Psychology. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Requisite: Computer Science 10C or 10F. Topics include hardware and software computer problems in design, control, and analysis of experiments; programming problems arising in evaluation of models of psychological processes of various content areas such as learning, perception, social, personality, and clinical.

M163. Death, Suicide, and Trauma. (4) (Same as Sociology M138.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for juniors/seniors. Definition and taxonomy of death; new permissiveness and taboos related to death; romanticization of death; role of the individual in his own demise; modes of death; development of ideas of death through life span; ways in which ideas of death influence conduct of lives; impact of dying on social structure surrounding the individual; preventive, interventive, and postventive practices in relation to death and suicide; developmental perspective on witnessing traumatic death, including posttraumatic and grief reactions; partial death; megadeath; lethality; psychological autopsy; death of institutions and cultures. P/NP grading recommended (letter grading required if course to be applied toward Psychology or Sociology major).

M165. Psychology of Gender. (4) (Same as Women's Studies M165.) Lecture, three hours. Consideration of psychological literature relevant to understanding contemporary sex differences. Topics include sex-role development and role conflict, physiological and personality differences between men and women, sex differences in intellectual abilities and achievement, and impact of gender on social interaction. P/NP or letter grading.

168. Environmental Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A. Research-oriented course which surveys theoretical and methodological issues which comprise the area of environmental psychology. Discussion of basic dimensions of emotional response to physical and social environments, measurement of information of rate of situations, and personality variables that are relevant to environmental theory. Residential, therapeutic, work, and recreational environments within a unified framework. P/NP or letter grading.

170A. Behavior Modification. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Applied behavior theory; study of application of principles derived from learning theory, as in classical and instrumental (operant) conditioning, to treatment of developmentally disabled, autistic, and schizophrenic children, adult schizophrenics, affective disorders, anxiety states, drug abuse, marital discord, etc. Lectures, discussions, and demonstrations.

170B. Fieldwork in Behavior Modification. (4) Discussion, two hours; fieldwork, six hours. Requisite: course 110 with a grade of A or 170A. Fieldwork in applied behavior theory, especially to problems of retarded and autistic children.

170C. Advanced Fieldwork in Behavior Modification for Nonpsychology Majors. (4) Lecture, two hours; fieldwork, six hours. Requisite: course 170B. Not open to students with credit for course 171A. Does not fulfill laboratory requirement for majors. Advanced fieldwork in applied behavior theory, especially related to problems of retarded and autistic children. Review of current research in the field. May not be applied as an elective toward any Psychology Department major.

171A. Advanced Fieldwork in Behavior Modification for Psychology Majors. (4) Discussion, two hours; fieldwork, six hours; to be arranged, 20 hours. Requisite: course 170B. Designed for Psychology majors. Advanced fieldwork in applied behavior theory, especially related to problems of retarded and autistic children. Students design and carry out individualized experimental study to evaluate behavioral interventions with developmentally disabled clients.

171B. Practicum: Design and Implementation of Behavioral Interventions. (4) Discussion, two hours; fieldwork, six hours; to be arranged, 20 hours. Requisite: course 171A. Design and implementation of behavioral interventions with developmentally disabled children. Topics include goal selection, ethical considerations, behavioral contracting, client right and human use procedures, home and community management, parent and staff training, working with schools, clinical issues.

M172. The Afro-American Woman in the U.S. (4) (Same as Afro-American Studies M172 and Women's Studies M172.) Lecture, two and one-half hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Impact of social, psychological, political, and economic forces which impact on interpersonal relationships of Afro-American women as members of a large society and as members of their biological and ethnic group. P/NP or letter grading.

173. Advanced Abnormal Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 127. Examination of research and theory concerning origins, course, and outcomes of disordered behavior. Focus on continuity and change in patterns of behavior, assessment methods, and research approaches. Concentration on one of following: childhood disorders, anxiety and stress, the schizophrenias, or mood disorders. P/NP or letter grading.

174. Interpersonal Process Analysis. (4) Lecture, two hours; laboratory, three hours. Requisites: courses 100A, 100B, 127. Designed for Psychology majors. Introduction to conceptual tools for analyzing interpersonal structures and functions in goal-oriented human interaction such as psychotherapy, persuasion, courtship, etc. Small group exercises integrated with lecture and discussion (additional laboratory work to be arranged). P/NP or letter grading.

175. Community Psychology. (4) Designed for junior/senior Psychology majors. Application of psychological principles to understanding and solution of community problems. Topics include community development, community mental health problems, drugs, racism, and rehabilitation of prisoners.

175H. Community Psychology (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Honors course parallel to course 175.

M176. Communication and Conflict in Couples and Families. (4) (Same as Communication Studies M116.) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 127. Examination of (1) dysfunctional communication and conflict in couples and families and (2) relationship of these processes to individual psychopathology, marital discord, and family disruption (e.g., separation and divorce). P/NP or letter grading.

177. Counseling Relationships. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 127. Designed for junior/senior Psychology majors. Conceptual and empirical foundations of psychological counseling; comparison of alternative models of counseling processes. Emphasis on counseling approaches in community mental health areas such as drug abuse, suicide prevention, and crisis intervention. P/NP or letter grading.

178. Human Motivation. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Examination of theories of human motivation, experimental findings supporting the theories, and history of study of motivation. Topics include sociobiology, conflict, aspiration level, achievement strivings, and causal attributions.

178H. Human Motivation (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Honors course parallel to course 178.

179A. Health Behavior and Health Status of Ethnic Groups: Behavioral Perspective. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Designed for juniors/seniors. Survey course of psychological aspects of health behavior and health status in major ethnic groups in the U.S. Emphasis on major diseases outlined by the U.S. Public Health Service (USPHS).

179B. Biomedical and Psychosocial Aspects of AIDS/HIV. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 137D or 179A or Health Services 100. Designed for juniors/seniors. Basics of epidemiology of the disease, routes of transmission, clinical characteristics of AIDS, neurological and psychological aspects of coping with HIV infection and AIDS. Presentation of biologic, behavioral, and therapeutic interventions.

M180A. Contemporary Problems in Mental Retardation. (4) (Same as Psychiatry M180A.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, and 127 or 130 or 133A through 133I. Corequisite: course M181A. Limited to Immersion Program students. Presentation of concepts, issues, and research techniques in the area of mental retardation. Biological, psychological, and community questions concerning causes and treatment of developmental disabilities, as well as systems for care and training of retarded individuals. Lectures, directed reading, and discussion. P/NP or letter grading.

M180B. Contemporary Issues in Mental Retardation. (4) (Same as Psychiatry M180B.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course M180A. Corequisite: course M181B. Limited to Immersion Program students. Psychoeducational issues in mental retardation relating literature to ongoing field experiences through lectures, discussions, media, and six student papers. P/NP or letter grading.

M181A-M181B. Research in Contemporary Problems in Mental Retardation. (4-4) (Same as Psychiatry M181A-M181B.) Corequisite for course M181A: course M180A; for course M181B: course M180B. Research experience. In Progress and P/NP or letter grading.

186A. Cognitive Science Laboratory: Introduction to Theory and Simulation. (4) Lecture, two and one-half hours; discussion, 30 minutes; laboratory, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 85, 100A, 100B, Program in Computing 15. Designed for junior/senior departmental majors. Models in several psychological domains (e.g., visual perception, categorization, reasoning, and problem solving). Types of models include semantic networks, search, production systems, connectionist networks, and mathematical models. Lectures and discussions interwoven with computer simulations written in common LISP. P/NP or letter grading.

186B. Cognitive Science Laboratory: Neural Networks. (4) Lecture, two and one-half hours; discussion, 30 minutes; laboratory, three hours. Recommended preparation: knowledge of calculus. Requisites: courses 10, 85, 100A, 100B, Program in Computing 10A, 10B (or PASCAL). Designed for junior/senior departmental majors. Lectures and laboratory work in neural network modeling of perception and cognition. Specific topics include essential neurophysiology, basic architectures, learning, and programming techniques. Principles illustrated and discussed in context of models of specific perceptual and cognitive processes. Simulations written in PASCAL. P/NP or letter grading.

186C. Cognitive Science Laboratory: Psychophysical Theories and Methods. (4) Lecture, two hours; laboratory, two hours. Requisites: courses 10, 85, 100A, 100B. Designed for junior/senior departmental majors. Lectures and laboratory work that examine perceptual measurement procedures (psychophysical methods) and cognitive processing and decision models on which procedures are based, with particular emphasis on signal detection theory and its applications. Letter grading.

186D. Neuroinformatics Studio. (4) Laboratory, four hours. Requisites: courses 10, 100A, 100B, 115. Limited to departmental majors. Neuroinformatics is application of informatic methods to study of neuroscience and behavior. In digital studio environment, application of such methods to problems in neuron electrophysiology, neural networks, neuroanatomy, and neurogenetics. Letter grading.

187A. Psychology and Law. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Study of new topics on legal psychology, including suspect identification, witness reports, and police procedures. Outside speakers utilized in presentation of these materials. Students participate in presentations and/or discussions.

187AH. Psychology and Law (Honors). (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Honors course parallel to course 187A.

187B. Advanced Psychology and Law. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 187A. Designed for juniors/seniors. Study of additional topics on legal psychology, including gang violence, theories of crime, corrections, repeat offenders, community policing, and interrogation. Outside speakers utilized in presentation of these materials. P/NP or letter grading.

188A. Research in Cognitive Science. (4) Seminar, two hours; laboratory, six hours. Limited to Cognitive Science majors. Practical applications of cognitive science through research. Consult Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, for contracts and further information. May be repeated once for credit. P/NP grading.

188B. Fieldwork in Cognitive Science. (4) Seminar, two hours; fieldwork, six hours. Limited to Cognitive Science majors. Practical applications of cognitive science through fieldwork. Consult Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, for contracts and further information. May be repeated once for credit. P/NP grading.

189. Ergonomics and Human Factors. (4) Lecture, three hours. Prerequisites: courses 10, and 120A or 120B. Designed for juniors/seniors. Examination of human capabilities and limitations in design of human/machine systems such as vehicles, workspaces, and computer software for goals of safety and efficiency. Topics include sources of error, information processing, manual control, training, and personnel selection. P/NP or letter grading.

189H. Ergonomics and Human Factors (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Honors course parallel to course 189. P/NP or letter grading.

190A-190B-190C. Honors Course. (4-4-4) Seminar, two hours. Limited to psychology honors program students. Opportunity for development and analysis of creative ideas through individual research projects with a faculty sponsor and discussion of student and faculty research presentations. Information and applications may be obtained from Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall. If approved in advance by Undergraduate Office, course 190C may be applied toward elective course requirement for any Psychology Department major.

192. Practicum in Teaching Psychology. (4) Laboratory, to be arranged. Limited to sophomores/juniors/seniors. Training and supervised practicum for advanced undergraduates in teaching courses related to psychology. Students assist in preparation of materials and development of innovative programs under guidance of faculty and teaching assistants. Consult Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, for contracts and further information. Only 12 units from courses 192, 193, 194, and 196 may be applied toward undergraduate degree. May not be applied toward course requirements for any Psychology Department major. P/NP grading.

193. Fieldwork in Psychology. (4) Seminar, two hours; fieldwork (approved community setting), six hours. Limited to sophomores/juniors/seniors. Fieldwork in applications of psychology. Consult Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, for contracts and further information. Only 12 units from courses 192, 193, 194, and 196 may be applied toward undergraduate degree. May not be applied toward course requirements for any Psychology Department major. P/NP grading.

194A. Research in Psychology. (2) Tutorial (approved research setting), seven hours. Limited to sophomores/juniors/seniors. Practical applications of psychology through research. Consult Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, for contracts and further information. Only 12 units from courses 192, 193, 194, and 196 may be applied toward undergraduate degree. May not be applied toward course requirements for any Psychology Department major. P/NP grading.

194B-194C. Ongoing Research in Psychology. (2-2) Tutorial (approved research setting), seven hours. Limited to sophomores/juniors/seniors. Minimum of two terms required. Practical applications of psychology through research. Consult Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, for contracts and further information. Only 12 units from courses 192, 193, 194, and 196 may be applied toward undergraduate degree. May not be applied toward course requirements for any Psychology Department major. In Progress and P/NP grading.

196. Research Seminar: Psychology. (2) Seminar, two hours. Corequisite: course 194A or 194B or 194C. Study of research methods, applications, and current literature through group discussion, presentation, and papers. Research fields and topics vary by instructor(s). Only 12 units from courses 192, 193, 194, and 196 may be applied toward undergraduate degree. May not be applied toward course requirements for any Psychology Department major. P/NP grading.

197. Current Issues in Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for junior/senior majors. Study of selected current topics of psychological interest. Consult Schedule of Classes for topics and instructors. Only one graded 197 course may be applied as an elective toward Psychology major. If content is approved in advance by Undergraduate Advising Office, Psychobiology and Cognitive Science majors can petition to use course to satisfy an elective requirement. May be repeated for credit with consent of department.

199. Directed Individual Research and Studies. (2 to 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Limited to junior/senior Psychology, Psychobiology, and Cognitive Science majors (juniors must have at least 3.0 grade-point average in major). Consult Undergraduate Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall, for further information and approval forms. P/NP or letter grading.

Graduate Courses

200A. Pavlovian Processes. (4) Lecture, three hours. Basic principles and characteristics of learning and behavior, including Pavlovian conditioning, instrumental learning, and species-specific behavior. S/U or letter grading.

200C. Representational Processes. (4) (Formerly numbered 204F.) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: undergraduate learning and physiological psychology courses. Review of experimental data on and models of construction of spatial, temporal, and numerical representations. Explicitly symbolic models compared and contrasted with associative models. Implications for neurobiology of learning and memory. S/U or letter grading.

201. Current Issues in Learning and Behavior. (1) Discussion, 90 minutes. Designed for graduate students. Required of learning and behavior students a minimum of four times (entire first year and winter of second year). Presentation of papers of current interest in learning, behavior, or applied behavioral analyses by experts in the field. Evaluation of their significance and methodology in detail. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

202. Research in Learning and Behavior. (2) Forum in which graduate students discuss the literature and methodological, analytical, and interpretational issues related to specific topics of research in learning and behavior. S/U grading.

204A. Basic Motivational Processes. (4) (Formerly numbered 204E.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Analysis, using a behavioral systems approach, of basic motivated behavior such as feeding, drinking, foraging, and reproduction. Same approach also applied to phenomena such as acquired motivation, reinforcement, and drug addiction. Historical survey of behavioral analyses of motivation and goal-directed behavior. S/U or letter grading.

204B. Theories of Learning. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisite: course 200A. Critical discussion and in-depth analysis of current major theoretical approaches to associative learning, with emphasis on recent experimental analyses of conditioning phenomena.

204C. Evaluative Processes. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate psychology students. Lectures and discussion on current research in application of learning principles to clinical and social problems such as alcohol and drug abuse, aggression, fear management, mental retardation, behavioral medicine, autism/schizophrenia, etc. S/U or letter grading.

204D. Fear and Anxiety. (4) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: graduate training. Presentation of theoretical and empirical advances, from biological and behavioral perspectives, in the area of fear and anxiety. Integration of animal and human research.

205A. Behavioral Neuroendocrinology. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Mechanisms of hormone action on the brain that influence behavior, including permanent actions in development and transient actions in adulthood. Using a comparative approach, topics include sexual differentiation, long-term effects of stress, seasonal and other changes in adulthood, and aging.

205B. Human Neurophysiology. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Examination of higher cognitive processes in terms of neural mechanisms that underlie them. Topics include cortical modularity and organization, coordinated sensory representation, language, regional functional specialization, attention, and regulation of cortical function by extracortical systems.

205C. Neurotransmitters in Human Disorders of Motor and Cognitive Function. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Detailed analysis of molecules involved in interneuronal communication processes (i.e., neurotransmitters, neurohormones, "neuromodulators," neurotropic agents). Discussion of their roles in normal brain physiology, followed by detailed analyses of their perturbations in various disease states. Particular emphasis on current and past thinking about Alzheimer's disease, Parkinsonism, Huntington's disease, and Down's syndrome dementia.

205D. Clinical Psychopharmacology. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. General principles of brain neurotransmitters, including synthesis, cell bodies and pathways, and receptor subtypes. General principles of drug administration and pharmacokinetics. Major classes of psychoactive drugs, animal models, and "atypical" compounds.

205E. Psychobiology of Emotion and Stress. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Overview of literature on role of the brain and autonomic and endocrine systems in emotion and stress-related responses. Some emphasis on involvement of neurotransmitters, neuropeptides, and hormones in emotional plasticity, visceral function, and bodily diseases.

205F. Physiology of Learning. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Search for anatomical loci of engrams. Cell biology of plasticity, including electrophysiological and molecular approaches. Theories of how neural circuitry might be organized to make learning possible.

205G. Pain. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Consideration of pain from both basic science and clinical perspectives. Discussion of nociceptors, spinal cord, brain mechanisms, pain inhibition, and role of endogenous opioids. Effects of pain and stress on immunity.

205I. Motor Coordination. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Elementary and complex units of behavior: reflexes, servomechanisms, oscillators, and central pattern generators. Principles of coordination: efference copy, oscillator coupling, potentiation, and depotentiation. Relation between levels of integration and anatomical levels: transections, lesions, focal stimulation, and single unit recording.

205J. Homeostatic Drive, Hunger, and Thirst. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Homeostasis used as framework within which ingestive behavior is discussed. Analysis of thirst on basis of depletions of body fluid compartments. Consideration of hunger, focusing on two theories — "Glucostatic" and "Energostatic."

205K. Vision Neurobiology. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Exploration of anatomy, physiology, and computation in visual system, focusing on retina, visual cortex, and overall performance.

205L. Cognitive Neuroscience. (2) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Overview of neural basis of higher cognitive functions, integrating anatomical, physiological, and behavioral approaches and incorporating clinical and experimental data. Systems covered include attention, perception, memory, language, and hemispheric specialization.

205M. Neuropsychology of Perception. (2) Lecture, three hours (five weeks). Designed for graduate students. Examination of neural substrates of high-level visual processing. Topics include agnosias and characteristics of electrophysiological responses recorded in primate temporal lobe. Discussion of issues regarding neural representation of knowledge. S/U or letter grading.

205N. Functional Neuroimaging. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Theory and practice of measuring neural activity in human brain. Methods include electroencephalography, positron emission tomography, and functional magnetic resonance imaging. Domains include memory, vision, language, attention, and emotion. S/U or letter grading.

207A-207B-207C. Seminars: Physiological Psychology. (4-4-4) Requisite: course 115.

210. Comparative Psychobiology. (4) Requisite: course 115. Survey of determinants of species-specific behavior, including genetic influences and learning.

212. Evaluation of Research Literature in Physiological Psychology. (1) Discussion, 90 minutes. Papers of current interest presented by members of seminar and their significance and methodology discussed and criticized in depth. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

M213. Neuroimaging and Brain Mapping. (4) (Same as Neuroscience CM272 and Physiological Science M272.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: Neuroscience M201, M202. Theory, methods, applications, assumptions, and limitations of neuroimaging. Techniques, biological questions, and results. Brain structure, brain function, and their relationship discussed with regard to imaging. Letter grading.

220A. Social Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate psychology students. Intensive consideration of concepts, theories, and major problems in social psychology.

220B. Research Methods in Social Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate psychology students. Research design and methodological issues in experimental and nonexperimental social research.

220C. Advanced Social Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 220A or 220D. Review of contemporary topics and issues in social psychological research and theory.

220D. Introduction to Social Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Introduction to theory and research in social psychology for students who are not psychology majors. Service course for graduate students in education, sociology, political science, management, public health, etc.

221. Seminar: Attitude Formation and Change. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisites: courses 220A, 220B. Social psychological research and theories on opinions and attitudes. Effects of mass communication, social factors in assimilation of information and influence.

222A. Interpersonal Relations. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisite: course 220A. Critical review of theory and research on interpersonal relations, with emphasis on friendship, dating, and marriage.

222B. Interpersonal Influence and Social Power. (4) Seminar, three hours. Preparation: advanced social psychology course (psychological or sociological). Review of theory and research on interpersonal influence and social power, with applications to various power relationships such as supervisor/subordinate, health care professional/patient, doctor/nurse, parent/child, wife/husband, teacher/student, political figures, etc.

223. Seminar: Social Survey Research. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisite: course 220B. Contemporary issues and topics in social survey research methodology.

225. Seminar: Critical Problems in Social Psychology. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisites: courses 220A, 220B. May be repeated for credit with consent of instructor.

226A-226B-226C. Current Literature in Social Psychology. (2-2-2) Discussion, 90 minutes. Course 226A is limited to first-year social psychology students. Courses 226B and 226C are open to nonsocial psychology students with consent of instructor. Recent and current research papers in social psychology presented by members of seminar and their significance and methodology discussed and criticized in depth. S/U grading.

227. Health Psychology. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Preparation: undergraduate degree or training in psychology. Psychological and social factors involved in etiology of illness, treatment and course of illness, long-term care and adjustment of chronically ill or disabled, and practice of institutional health care and self-care.

M228A. Proseminar: Political Psychology. (4) (Same as History M236A and Political Science M261A.) Discussion, three hours. Introduction to political psychology: psychobiography, personality and politics, mass attitudes, group conflict, political communication, and elite decision making.

M228B. Seminar: Political Psychology. (4) (Same as Political Science M261D.) Discussion, three hours. Requisite: course 220A or Political Science M261A. Examination of political behavior, political socialization, racial conflict, mass political movements, and public opinion.

M228C. Critical Problems in Political Psychology. (4) (Same as Political Science M261E.) Discussion, three hours.

229. Social Cognition. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, two hours. Social cognition is concerned with how people organize and interpret social information in their environment. Seminar provides broad background in the field and also gives depth and focus on particular research topics in the field. Weekly papers, as well as a lengthy final paper, required.

231. Psychology of Gender. (4) Seminar, three hours. Preparation: one prior course on gender/women's studies. Critical evaluation of current research and theory concerning psychology of gender, drawing on work from various areas of psychology to understand sources of gender differentiation and its consequences for human behavior and social interaction.

232. Human Sexuality. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Intended to teach students how to carry out research on human sexual behavior. Contents include theory construction, scale development, physiological and endocrinological implications, radioimmunoassay (measuring hormones in blood sample), ethical issues, methodological and statistical considerations, measurement of sexual arousal, fantasy, and sexual dysfunction therapy. Discussion-oriented, with emphasis on operationalizing predictions concerning human sexual functioning.

233. Seminar: Environmental Psychology. (4) Requisites: courses 235, 250A, 250B. Critical review of work in environmental psychology designed to identify basic dimensions for analysis of man/environment relationships. Use of human emotional responses to environments as intervening variables linking specific stimulus qualities to a variety of approach-avoidance behaviors. Individual differences and drug-induced states as these relate to emotional response dimensions used to explain within-individual differences in response to same environment over time or between-individual differences to same situation. Review of literature relating information rate from environments to arousal and preferences for those environments.

234. Social Psychological Aspects of Competitive Youth Sport. (4) Review of research concerning social psychological aspects of competitive sport for children. Sport is presented as a major achievement domain for young participants. Topics include sources and consequences of competitive stress, significant adult influences and interactions, predictors of performance, determinants of participation and dropping out, and socialization through sport.

235. Personality. (4) Survey of cognitive, analytic, and learning theory approaches to study of personality. Emphasis on intensive exploration of selected concepts and related research.

M238. Survey Research Techniques in Psychocultural Studies. (4) (Same as Psychiatry M238.) Seminar, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Techniques for conceptualizing, conducting, and analyzing survey data; instruction in qualitative strategies for enhancing survey research on psychocultural problems.

M239. Personality, Motivation, and Attribution. (4) (Same as Education M215.) Current research and theory relating personality variables (e.g., attributional styles, self-esteem) to motivational concerns such as persistence and intensity of behavior. Perceived causes of outcomes in achievement and affiliative domains.

240A-240B. Developmental Psychology. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: one undergraduate developmental psychology course. Designed for graduate students. Consideration of variables influencing cognitive social and emotional development of the human organism from conception through adolescence. Emphasis on research methodology and research base for current theories of development.

241. Current Developments in Developmental Psychology. (1) Discussion, 90 minutes. Designed for graduate developmental psychology students. Presentation of papers on current advances in developmental psychology and closely related areas by experts in the field. Emphasis on approaches to a problem, making it suitable to interweave presentations by graduate students. S/U grading.

242A-M242G. Seminars: Developmental Psychology. (4 each) Each course may be taken independently and may be repeated for credit.

242A. Perceptual Development. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisites: courses 240A, 240B. May be taken independently and may be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

242B. Cognitive Development. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisites: courses 240A, 240B. May be taken independently and may be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

242C. Socialization. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisites: courses 240A, 240B. May be taken independently and may be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

M242D. Social Development and Education. (4) (Same as Education M217A.) Seminar, four hours. Biological and familial, school, and other influences on the child; development in context of current research and theoretical models; consideration of theoretical and methodological research on family, peer group, and school; application of developmental theory and research to educational practice. S/U or letter grading.

242F. Development of Language and Communication. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisites: courses 240A, 240B. May be taken independently and may be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

M242G. Adolescent Development. (4) (Same as Education M217F.) Seminar, four hours. Designed for graduate students. Review of recent research on physical, cognitive, social, and psychological development during second decade of life. Topics include pubertal development, changes in parent/adolescent relationships, role of peers, identity development, high-risk behaviors, stress and coping, and school adjustment. Letter grading.

243A-243B. Seminars: Practical and Societal Issues in Developmental Psychology. (4-4) Seminar, three hours. Requisites: courses 240A, 240B. Socialization processes in human development and implication for social/political, educational, research issues, values, and societal change. In Progress grading.

244. Critical Problems in Developmental Psychology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 240A, 240B. Current problems; content varies depending on interest of class and instructor. May be repeated for credit with consent of instructor.

M245. Personality Development and Education. (4) (Same as Education M217C.) Review of research and theory of critical content areas in personality development that bear on school performance: achievement motivation, self-concept, aggression, sex differences, empathy, and other social behaviors; review of status of emotional behavior in personality theory and development.

M246. Psychological Aspects of Mental Retardation. (4) (Same as Psychiatry M246.) Lecture, 90 minutes. Discussion of psychological aspects of mental retardation, including classification, description, etiology, theory, prevention, treatment, assessment, modern and future developments, and input from other disciplines (ethics, law, religion, welfare systems).

249. Evaluation Research. (4) Requisites: courses 250A, 250B. Introduction to evaluation research in psychology, with emphasis on clinical, community, and social psychology applications. Survey includes policy and strategy issues, design of evaluative studies, data analysis, and utilization of findings.

250A. Advanced Psychological Statistics. (4) Review of fundamental concepts. Basic statistical techniques as applied to design and interpretation of experimental and observational research.

250B. Advanced Psychological Statistics. (4) Advanced experimental design and planning of investigations.

251A-251B-251C. Research Methods. (4-4-4) Designed for graduate psychology students. Students design and conduct original research projects under supervision of instructor in charge. It is anticipated that many students will complete their project in two terms (normally three terms allowed). S/U grading (course 251A only).

253. Factor Analysis. (4) Theory and practice of factor analysis in psychological research. Methods of factor extraction and rotation. Applications of computers to computations in factor analysis.

254A. Psychological Scaling. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Theory of measurement, law of comparative judgment, methods of unidimensional scaling, multidimensional scaling, and related topics of current interest.

254B. Cluster Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Quantitative methods for classification. Theories and assumptions underlying major clustering methods. Use of methods in exploratory data analysis.

255. Quantitative Aspects of Assessment. (4) Fundamental assumptions and equations of test theory. Current problems in assessment.

M256. Advanced Regression Analysis. (4) (Same as Political Science M200E.) Seminar, three hours. Diagnostics, robust regression, cross validation, resampling, outliers, missing data, geometry of regression, validity of assumptions, categorical dependent variables, transformation of variables. Access to Macintosh computer very helpful.

M257. Multivariate Analysis with Latent Variables. (4) (Same as Political Science M208D.) Lecture, three hours. Introduction to models and methods for analysis of data hypothesized to be generated by unmeasured latent variables, including latent variable analogues of traditional methods in multivariate analysis. Causal modeling: theory testing via analysis of moment structures. Measurement models such as confirmatory, higher-order, and structured-means factory analytic models. Structural equation models, including path and simultaneous equation models. Parameter estimation, hypothesis testing, and other statistical issues. Computer implementation. Applications.

258. Special Problems in Psychological Statistics. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 250A, 250B. Special problems in psychological statistics and data analysis.

259. Quantitative Methods in Cognitive Psychology. (4) Requisites: courses 250A, 250B. Number of nonstatistical mathematical methods and techniques commonly used in cognitive psychology. Topics include Markov chains, other stochastic processes, queueing theory, information theory, frequency analysis, etc.

260A-260B-260C. Proseminars: Cognitive Psychology. (1-1-1) Presentation of research topics by students, faculty, and visiting scholars. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

261. Perception. (4) Lecture, three hours. Concepts, theories, and research in study of perception. Considers the questions: Why do things look, sound, smell, taste, or feel as they do? What is the nature of perceptual systems? How do these systems process information?

262. Human Learning and Memory. (4) Lecture, three hours. Contemporary theory and research in human verbal learning and memory; verbal and non-verbal learning and memory processes, structure and organization of short- and long-term memory.

263. Psycholinguistics. (4) Lecture, three hours. Contemporary theory and research in psycholinguistics: coding and decoding, psycholinguistic parameters of language learning, speech recognition and perception.

265. Thinking. (4) Lecture, three hours. Contemporary theory and research in thinking, problem solving, inference, semantic memory, internal representation of knowledge, imagery, concepts.

266. Cognitive Science. (4) Lecture, three hours. Major issues in cognitive science. Representation of cognitive structures and higher-level processes. Specific areas include perception, learning and memory, problem solving, and reasoning. Relationships to artificial intelligence.

268A-268E. Seminars: Human Information Processing. (4 each) Seminar, three hours. Topics vary with interests of instructor. Each course may be taken independently and may be repeated for credit. 268A. Perception; 268B. Human Learning and Memory; 268C. Judgment and Decision Processes; 268D. Language and Cognition; 268E. Human Performance.

269. Seminar: Cognitive Psychology. (4) Seminar, three hours. Discussion of problems in cognitive psychology that encompass more than a single subfield of the area. May be repeated for credit.

270A-270B-270C. Foundations of Clinical Psychology. (4-4-4) Corequisites: courses 271A, 271B, 271C. Designed for graduate clinical psychology students. 270A. Analysis of phenomenological, theoretical, and research issues regarding etiology and mediating mechanisms in neurotic, affective, schizophrenic spectrum, and other personality disturbances. 270B. Principles and methods of psychological assessment and evaluation. 270C. Principles and methods of psychological intervention in individuals, families, and community settings.

271A-271B-271C. Clinical Psychological Methods. (2-2-2) Corequisites: courses 270A, 270B, 270C. Procedures in clinical psychology as applied in clinical and community settings. Supervised exposure to psychological attributes of psychopathology and procedures for psychological assessment, intervention, and research with clinical populations. Experience closely coordinated with content in courses 270A, 270B, 270C. S/U grading.

271D. Clinical Research Laboratory. (2) Discussion, one hour; laboratory, one hour. Corequisites: courses 270A or 270B or 270C, and 271A or 271B or 271C. Designed for graduate clinical psychology students. Acquaints students with faculty research interests and involves them in their course 251 research at an early stage to insure completion. S/U grading.

271E-271F. Clinical Research Laboratories. (2-2) Requisite: course 271D. Designed for graduate clinical psychology students. Required of first-year clinical psychology students. S/U grading. 271E. Brief overview of research design issued in clinical psychology and practical issues in students' own research activities. 271F. Discussions of students' particular research activities and issues, plus laboratories in computer analysis of statistical data.

272A-272G. Advanced Clinical Psychological Methods. (4 each) Each course may be taken independently for credit:

272C. Clinical Interventions for Psychological Problems of Children. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisite or corequisite: course 401 or 451. May be taken independently for credit.

272D. Family Therapy and Family Dynamics. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisite or corequisite: course 401 or 451. May be taken independently for credit.

272E. Special Problems. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisite or corequisite: course 401 or 451. May be taken independently for credit.

272F. Behavior Modification with Adults. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisite or corequisite: course 401 or 451. Designed for second-year graduate clinical psychology students. Current cognitive behavior modification principles and techniques. Major conceptual issues; specific techniques demonstrated and practiced by students to cover a range of adult problems such as depression, stress and anxiety, anger management, assertion problems. May be taken independently for credit.

272G. Marital Therapies. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour; laboratory, one hour. Requisites: courses 270A, 270B, 270C, 271A, 271B, 271C. Examination of assessment and treatment approaches for relationship problems in couples. Presentation, discussion, and illustration of procedures derived from social-learning, psychodynamic, and systems theories, with relevant research findings. May be taken independently for credit.

273A-273B-273C. Professional and Ethical Issues in Clinical Psychology. (2-2-2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Designed for graduate clinical psychology students. Year-long course sequence covering variety of topics necessary for clinical psychologists in their clinical work, including legal and ethical issues, child abuse, suicide assessment, issues in empirically validated treatments, psychiatric consultation and psychoactive medications, working with diverse client populations, etc. S/U or letter grading.

275. Family Process: Psychological and Social Perspectives on the Family. (4) Various theoretical perspectives applicable to analysis of family structure and dynamics. Critical issues in application of family constructs to clinical problems.

276. Clinical Approaches to Children with Learning and Related Behavior Problems. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for Ph.D. students. Theoretical and research issues and problems related to purposes of and practices involved in assessment and correction approaches for children with learning and behavior problems. Practicum experiences to illustrate course content and provide opportunities to improve research and clinical competence.

277. Advanced Clinical Assessment. (4) (Formerly numbered 277A-277B.) Lecture, four hours; laboratory, three hours. Designed for graduate clinical psychology students. Projective techniques, clinical interpretation, case studies, psychological test battery, psychopathology, and application of assessment to problems in psychotherapy. S/U or letter grading.

279. Seminar: Research in Psychopathology. (4) Seminar, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

M280. Affective Disorders. (2 or 4) (Same as Psychiatry M234.) Seminar, two hours. General topics related to primary affective disorders (depression, manic depressive illness), including diagnosis, pharmacology, epidemiology, psychology, phenomenology, biology, and treatment. Students enrolled for 4 units are assigned a more intensive reading list and required to make a presentation or prepare a research paper.

283. Psychopathology. (4) Survey of dominant psychological attributes of particular forms of psychopathology, including analysis of status of various theories concerned with etiology and mediating mechanisms of personality, neurotic, schizophrenic spectrum, and affective disturbances.

284. Seminar: Clinical Psychology and Communication. (4) Seminar, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

M285. Cognitive Behavior Therapy with Children: Treatment and Systems of Care. (2 or 4) (Same as Psychiatry M277.) Seminar, 90 minutes. Designed for graduate students. Cognitive/behavioral approaches to prevention and treatment of mental health problems in children. Examination of service delivery systems for treating troubled youth and discussion of issues with respect to current systems of care. Major problems include conduct disorders, attention deficit disorder, depression, anxiety, and learning disabilities.

286. Issues and Concepts of Clinical Psychology. (4) Open to graduate students in majors other than clinical psychology. Survey of major issues and alternatives in current practice. Emphasis on assessment and intervention, with consideration of historical, theoretical, and research bases for current trends.

287. Critical Problems in Clinical Research Methodology. (4) Requisites: courses 250A, 250B. Special problems of measurement and design in clinical research.

289A-289B-289C. Current Issues in Clinical Psychology. (1-1-1) Discussion, two hours. Designed for first-year graduate clinical psychology students. Presentation of research and applied topics relevant to clinical psychology. In Progress and S/U grading.

290. History of Psychology. (4) Philosophical and historical context of contemporary psychology. Major trends from the 19th century to contemporary issues.

291. Principles of Behavioral Pharmacology. (4) Intensive analysis of drug, brain, and behavior relationships. Discussion of nature and source of drugs, general aspects of pharmacology, neurotransmitters and basic neuropharmacology, principles of behavioral pharmacology, categories of psychopharmacological agents, and pharmacological approaches to study of drug addiction, schizophrenia, and other behavioral processes, both normal and pathological.

292. Biobehavioral Mechanisms of Stress and Disease. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate psychology students. Behavior/physiology interactions of some major bodily systems: nervous, cardiovascular, gastrointestinal, and endocrine systems. Usual and altered states of these systems (e.g., stress) as these can promote permanent tissue injuries, disease, or improved bodily function, health enhancement.

293. Behavioral and Psychophysiological Problems of Alcoholism. (4) Behavioral and psychophysiological characteristics of alcoholism, along with theories concerning their etiology and treatment. Experimental approaches.

M294. Seminar: Neural and Behavioral Endocrinology. (2) (Same as Neurobiology M255 and Physiological Science M255.) Seminar, one hour; discussion, one hour. Topics include hormonal biochemistry and pharmacology. Hypothalamic/hypophyseal interactions, both hormonal and neural. Structure and function of the hypothalamus. Hormonal control of reproductive and other behaviors. Sexual differentiation of brain and behavior. Stress: hormonal, behavioral, and neural aspects. Aging of reproductive behaviors and function.

297. Issues in Social Development of the Minority Child. (4) Seminar, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Critical evaluation and integration of existing research on social psychological development of the minority child. Emphasis on socialization of cognitive and personality style, with goal of empirically clarifying issues raised in this area of developmental study.

298. Special Problems in Psychology. (4) Content depends on interests of particular instructor. May be repeated for credit.

299. Developmental Methodology. (4) Coverage of both theory and methods in measuring age-related changes in behavior. Experimental designs and data-analytic solutions to problems in measurement of change. Some experience in analysis of actual data sets.

375. Teaching Apprentice Practicum. (1 to 4) Seminar, to be arranged. Preparation: apprentice personnel employment as a teaching assistant, associate, or fellow. Teaching apprenticeship under active guidance and supervision of a regular faculty member responsible for curriculum and instruction at the University. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

401. Fieldwork in Clinical Psychology. (1 to 12) Requisites: courses 271A, 271B, 271C. Students on practicum assignments are required to register for this course each term (except by consent of clinical program committee).

402. Clinical Research Practicum. (2) Faculty and graduate students who share interests discuss current literature, new ideas, methodological issues, and preliminary findings. Meetings include research presentations and opportunities for feedback on current and proposed research activity to encourage, support, and facilitate student research expertise. Assigned reading included. S/U grading.

403. Special Topics Study Course. (1 to 4) Under faculty supervision, group of students meets each week for a quarter in a self-led study group to pursue a specific topic of their choice that is not covered in other department courses. S/U grading.

410A-410B-410C. Clinical Teaching and Supervision. (4-4-4) Preparation: completion of Ph.D. comprehensive examinations, advancement to candidacy or preparation for dissertation research actively under way. Study and practice of knowledge, concepts, and theories on teaching and supervision of applied clinical psychology.

410D-410E-410F. Clinical Assessment Supervision. (4-4-4) Discussion, two hours; other, one hour. Designed for third-year graduate clinical psychology students. Study and practice of knowledge, concepts, and theories on teaching and supervision of psychological assessment.

420A-420B. Health Psychology Practicum. (2-2) Designed for graduate students. Determination of what areas of health, illness, treatment, and delivery of treatment can be elucidated by understanding of psychological concepts and research; psychological perspective on these problems; how psychological perspective might be enlarged and extended in the medical area. Through practical field placement, students apply knowledge acquired in class to research observation and/or clinical work in the field.

421. Research in Social Psychology. (2) Discussion, two hours; reading and group work, four to six hours. Forum for faculty and graduate students pursuing research on a common topic to share research ideas, make research presentations, and obtain feedback on study designs, procedures, and results to foster collaborative investigations in common research areas. S/U grading.

423. Social Survey Research Practicum. (4) Practicum, two hours; additional hours to be arranged. Methods of survey sampling, conduct and management of computer-assisted telephone interview surveys.

425. Health Psychology Lecture Series. (2) Clinicians and researchers in health psychology from Los Angeles area present their research, programs, and/or clinical work as part of a training program in health psychology. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

451. Internship in Clinical Psychology. (6 to 12) Preparation: successful completion of departmental qualifying examinations. Requisite: course 401. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

454. Internship in Industrial Psychology. (2 to 4) Fieldwork, to be arranged. S/U or letter grading.

495. Presentation of Psychological Materials. (4) Seminar, to be arranged. Supervised practicum in undergraduate teaching. Students serve as discussion section leaders in selected undergraduate courses. S/U grading.

501. Cooperative Program. (2 to 8) Preparation: consent of UCLA graduate adviser and graduate dean, and host campus instructor, department chair, and graduate dean. Used to record enrollment of UCLA students in courses taken under cooperative arrangements with USC. S/U grading.

596. Directed Individual Research and Study in Psychology. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. One 596 course is required during second year of graduate study, and one 596 or 599 course is required during each succeeding year of graduate study. (Terminal M.A. candidates are exempt from this requirement.) S/U grading.

597. Individual Studies. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed primarily as preparation for Ph.D. qualifying examinations. May be required by some area committees as a requisite for taking examinations. S/U grading.

PUBLIC HEALTH SCHOOLWIDE PROGRAMS

School of Public Health

UCLA
16-071 Center for the Health Sciences
Box 951772
Los Angeles, CA 90095-1772
(310) 825-5524
<http://www.ph.ucla.edu/sao/>

Scope and Objectives

The profession of public health is responsible for the protection, preservation, and promotion of the health of communities and populations. Although the health problems of today differ from those of the past and of the future, the professionals who make up the field need to be trained to respond to broad community problems utilizing the basic ideas of prevention of disease and promotion of well-being. This goal can be achieved only with an understanding of the health status of the population through data gathering and analysis, as well as knowledge of the complex relationships between disease process in the social and biological environment of the community.

The field of public health today needs practitioners from many disciplines. Candidates for graduate study may come from a wide variety of academic backgrounds, training, or experience, including both the natural and social sciences.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The School of Public Health offers Master of Public Health (M.P.H.) and Doctor of Public Health (Dr.P.H.) degrees.

For information on the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in Biostatistics, Environmental Health Sciences, Epidemiology, or Health Services, or the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in Public Health within the Department of Community Health Sciences, see the listings for those departments. For information on the interdepartmental D.Env. degree program housed in the Department of Environmental Health Sciences, see the listing for Environmental Science and Engineering. See the listing for Molecular Toxicology for information on the interdepartmental Ph.D. program in Molecular Toxicology.

The M.S. program in Preventive Medicine and Public Health is not admitting new students at this time.

Certain degrees within the School of Public Health are not offered by the individual departments but are administered on a schoolwide level: the Master of Public Health; the Doctor of Public Health; four concurrent degree programs: M.B.A./M.P.H. with the John E. Anderson Graduate School of Management, J.D./M.P.H. with the School of Law, and M.A./M.P.H. with Asian American Studies and with Islamic Studies; and three articulated degree programs: M.D./M.P.H. with the School of Medicine and M.A./M.P.H. with African Studies and with Latin American Studies.

Public Health

Lower Division Course

53. Introduction to Health of Underserved and Linguistic Minority Communities. (4) Lecture, three hours. Population projections, population characteristics, birth rates and outcomes, causes of death and death rates, patterns of reportable diseases, services utilization, patterns of immigration, health insurance, provider training, risk behaviors, and chronic diseases in Latino and other underrepresented minority communities in Los Angeles County. Letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

M106. Health in Chicano/Latino Population. (4) (Same as Chicana and Chicano Studies M106.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for juniors/seniors. Examination of Chicano/Latino health status through life expectancy, causes of death, reportable diseases, services utilization, provider supply, and risk behaviors within demographic/immigration changes. Binational review of health effects in the U.S. and Mexico. Letter grading.

150. Contemporary Health Issues. (4) (Formerly numbered Health Services 150.) Lecture, four hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Exploration of nation's health challenges, epidemiologic basis of public's health, organization and financing of health services in the U.S. and elsewhere, and current strategies for advancing people's health. Letter grading.

M151. Health Care in Transitional Communities. (4) (Same as Sociology M142.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Analysis of social, cultural, economic, and political processes affecting organization and accessibility of health care in transitional and disadvantaged communities. Fieldwork required. Letter grading.

Scope and Objectives

The School of Public Policy and Social Research offers an undergraduate minor in Public Policy.

Public Policy Minor

The Public Policy minor provides undergraduates with a systematic overview of public policy questions, deals with these questions in theoretical and conceptual ways, and exposes students to practical issues of public policy through the examination of specific policy issues and real-world policy questions.

To enter the minor, students must have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better, enroll in Policy Studies 10A, and file a petition at the School of Public Policy and Social Research Office of Academic Services, 3357 Public Policy Building. For further information, contact Professor Randall Crane at (310) 206-4613.

Required Core Courses (8 units): Policy Studies 10A and one course from 10B, M116, or Honors Collegium 82. Highly recommended: one statistics course.

Required Upper Division Courses (20 units): (1) Three courses from one of the following clusters: gender and multiculturalism cluster— Policy Studies M120, Social Welfare 101, 104A, 104B, M104C, 104F, M108, Urban Planning M194, 187; labor and work cluster— Policy Studies 141, C142, C144, 145, 148; policy studies cluster— three upper division policy studies courses (190 may be repeated for credit with topic change); social welfare cluster— three upper division social welfare courses; urban policy and planning cluster— three upper division urban planning courses (193 may be repeated for credit with topic change); (2) one elective course offered by the School of Public Policy and Social Research not used to satisfy the core or cluster requirement; (3) capstone project to be completed during the senior year which may be satisfied by one of the following: (a) Policy Studies 197, (b) one upper division or graduate course and one 199 course requiring a comprehensive policy paper to be taken concurrently with the same instructor in the School of Public Policy and Social Research, (c) Political Science M197DC, or (d) one 199 course taken in conjunction with a policy, planning, or social work internship, and a comprehensive policy paper written under the guidance of a School of Public Policy and Social Research faculty member.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Guy J.F. Juillard, M.D. (Jennifer Jones Simon Professor of Radiation Oncology), Vice Chair, Clinical Affairs
 William McBride, D.Sc., Vice Chair, Division of Experimental Radiation Oncology
 Timothy D. Solberg, Ph.D., Vice Chair, Physics

Scope and Objectives

The Department of Radiation Oncology includes clinical divisions at the UCLA Medical Plaza and Medical Center, West Los Angeles VA Medical Center, and divisions of experimental radiation biology and medical radiation physics. Research and teaching facilities are available at the UCLA Medical Plaza, UCLA Medical Center, and West Los Angeles VA Medical Center.

The primary clinical mission of the department is the management of patients who have cancer. The purpose of using radiation therapy, rather than or in addition to surgery, is to preserve function and/or cosmesis while eliminating the cancer. Other activities include total body irradiation before bone marrow transplantation and stereotactic radiosurgery for A-V malformations, meningiomas, and malignant intracranial lesions. Research interests include clinical trials, radiation biology, radiation modifiers, molecular biology, immunology, and applied physics. Knowledge of the disease in question, the comparative efficacy of radiation therapy and other methods, radiation biology and pathophysiology, and the physical characteristics of various radiations is essential.

The educational programs serve medical, dental, basic science (biology and physics), nursing, and radiation therapy students, and community and postgraduate physicians; there also is a four-year program for residents who are qualifying for certification in radiation oncology by the American Board of Radiology.

For further details on the Department of Radiation Oncology and a listing of the courses offered, see <http://www.radonc.ucla.edu>.

Radiation Oncology

Lower Division Course

98. Radiation and Medicine. (4) Seminar, three hours. Enforced requisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. Biomedical research is transforming medicine from an art to applied science. In radiological sciences, this transformation is affected by introduction of new technologies — computed tomography, magnetic resonance, imaging, ultrasonics, positron emission tomography, image processing, etc. — that have increased usefulness of various radiations for medical diagnosis and therapy. Introduction to these new technologies, to research that drives them, and to analysis of attendant benefits, costs, and risks. Letter grading.

Scope and Objectives

The medical student program in radiological sciences is designed to introduce students to the spectrum of diagnostic imaging modalities and their role in the clinical management of patients. It provides knowledge of essential radiographic anatomy and key imaging features of common diseases. The basic principles of all forms of diagnostic imaging pertaining to thoracic, musculoskeletal, gastrointestinal, genitourinary, cardiac, neuroradiology, mammography, pediatrics, emergency radiology, nuclear medicine, computed tomography, magnetic resonance imaging, ultrasound, and interventional radiology are provided. Students acquire interpretative skills by didactic instruction and interactive teaching sessions and through the use of Web-based teaching materials. A longitudinal core clerkship is offered during the third year, with a comprehensive examination at the end of the year.

Greater depth of experience is provided by the four weeks of elective clerkship offered to fourth-year medical students which emphasizes training in the subspecialties selected by students from the list above.

For further details on the Department of Radiological Sciences and a listing of the courses offered, see <http://www.radsci.ucla.edu:8000/academic/index.html>.

Scope and Objectives

The UCLA major in the Study of Religion is designed to give students a broad humanistic perspective. It introduces students to several religious traditions and thus to an appreciation of the very nucleus of civilization in various periods of history and various parts of the world, as well as to an understanding of fundamental human orientations. The program also provides opportunity to study one or more particular religious traditions in greater depth. Cohesion and integrity in the program are furthered by courses dealing with philosophical problems in religion, sociological analysis, and general anthropological theories and reflections.

Study of Religion B.A.

Preparation for the Major

Required: History 4; Philosophy 2; two courses from Anthropology 9, East Asian Languages and Cultures 60, History 1A, 1B, 1C, 9A, 9C, 9D, 10A, 10B, 11A, 11B.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Study of Religion majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: one history of religions course, one philosophy of religion course, and two courses from sociocultural anthropology, Buddhism, history of Western civilization, Asian civilizations, civilizations of Africa, and history of China.

The Major

Required: A minimum of 14 upper division courses from the list below, of which at least four (including Study of Religion 100 and Philosophy 175) must be from Group I, at least two must be from each of Groups II and IV, and at least three must be from Group III (at least one on each of the three religious traditions listed). No more than five of the 14 may be from any one group. A course may be taken twice, on different topics, for credit toward the major where repetition is allowed by the department offering the course. Variable topics courses not listed below (e.g., History 197) may be approved by the adviser as satisfying requirements for which their content is appropriate. A maximum of two upper division courses, not listed below, in an ancient language relevant to the course of study may be applied toward the major requirements (but not the group requirements) with consent of the adviser.

Special studies courses (199) may be applied toward the major but not toward a group requirement; a maximum of 12 units, approved by the adviser, may be applied. No course for the major or preparation for the major may be taken on a P/NP grading basis.

Honors Program

The honors program provides exceptional students with an opportunity to do independent research under the tutorial guidance of a faculty member. Students admitted to honors should take three 199 courses under the guidance of the sponsoring professor. The first 199 course should be taken in Spring Quarter of the junior year, the second during the following Fall Quarter, and the third during Winter Quarter of the senior year. The three courses count as part of the regular requirement of 14 upper division courses. The program culminates in an honors thesis.

To qualify for admission students should have a minimum grade-point average of 3.4. The 199 courses designed for the program and the thesis topic should be approved by the committee in charge of the major.

For further information, contact Professor S. Scott Bartchy at the program address.

Study of Religion

Upper Division Courses

100. Undergraduate Seminar: Study of Religion. (4) Limited to 20 students. Interdisciplinary approach to some major topics in study of religion, such as religion and politics, mysticism, ideas of revelation, myth and religion, worship and ritual. May be repeated for credit with consent of instructor.

110. Religion and Violence. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour. Exploration of capacity of religion to mobilize and legitimate violence. Materials include theoretical texts by Rene Girard, Walter Burkert, Jonathan Z. Smith, and David Rapoport and case studies dealing with religion and violence in India, Northern Ireland, Egypt, Lebanon, Israel, Palestine, Sri Lanka, and the U.S. Letter grading.

120. Abrahamic Religions: Traditions in Tension. (4) Seminar, three hours. Examination of Abrahamic tradition as received and developed by Jews, Christians, and Muslims according to rubrics of linkage and interaction, with view both to potential clashes in the 21st century and to resources inherent in these traditions for heading off such clashes and misunderstandings. Letter grading.

199. Special Studies. (2 to 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for juniors/seniors. Intensive directed research program. Twelve units may be applied toward the major. Letter grading.

The Romance Linguistics and Literature Program emphasizes modern linguistic and literary theories in the study of Romance languages. Linguistic and literary theories can be pursued independently or jointly; however, the integration of linguistic and literary knowledge is taken to be one of the highest aims of this interdepartmental graduate program.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Romance Linguistics and Literature Program offers Master of Arts (M.A.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Romance Linguistics and Literature.

Romance Linguistics and Literature*Graduate Courses

M202A-M202B. Comparative Romance Historical Grammar. (4-4) (Formerly numbered 202A-202B.) (Same as Italian M222A-M222B.) Lecture, three hours. Each course may be taken independently for credit. S/U or letter grading. M202A. Phonology. Principal sound changes from late Latin to main Romance dialects. M202B. Morphology and Syntax. Prime morpho-syntactic changes occurring between late Latin and main Romance dialects.

M204A-M204B. Romance Syntax: French. (4-4) (Formerly numbered 204A-204B.) (Same as Linguistics CM228A-CM228B.) Lecture, four hours. Preparation: some knowledge of French (or a Romance language). Requisite: Linguistics 120B. Course M204A is requisite to M204B. Aspects of structure of French language, with emphasis on properties of construction not found in English. S/U or letter grading.

206. Romance Language Structure. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: Linguistics 120B. Aspects of grammatical structure of a selected Romance language. May be repeated for credit with topic change. S/U or letter grading.

211. Comparative Romance Syntax. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: French 210A or Portuguese 204A or Spanish 204A. Comparative study of syntactic processes in Romance languages. Investigation of parameters underlying linguistic variation.

255. Topics in Romance Syntax. (1 to 4) Topics in syntax of Romance languages, with emphasis on recent development in comparative studies; theoretical innovations based on Romance syntax.

596. Directed Individual Study or Research. (4 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Study or research in areas or on subjects not offered as regular courses. Eight units may be applied toward M.A. degree requirements. S/U grading.

597. Preparation for Graduate Examinations. (4 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Individual preparation for M.A. comprehensive examination or Ph.D. qualifying examinations. May be taken only once for each degree examination and only in term that comprehensive or qualifying examinations are to be taken. S/U grading.

598. Research for M.A. Thesis. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Research in preparation of M.A. thesis. S/U grading.

599. Research for Ph.D. Dissertation. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: successful completion of Ph.D. qualifying examinations. Research for and preparation of Ph.D. dissertation. S/U grading.

ROTC PROGRAMS

College of Letters and Science

In accordance with the National Defense Act of 1920 and with the concurrence of The Regents of the University, a unit of the Army Senior Division Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) was established on the Los Angeles campus of the University in July 1920. Navy and Air Force units were established in 1938 and 1949 respectively.

This voluntary training allows students to qualify for an officer's commission in the Army, Navy/Marine Corps, or Air Force while completing their college education. ROTC courses are offered by three departments within the College of Letters and Science: Aerospace Studies (Air Force), Military Science (Army), and Naval Science (Navy and Marine Corps). They are not considered academic majors, but ROTC courses may be taken as free electives and applied toward the total course requirements of the major. The Naval Science Department offers a minor in Naval Science. The ROTC program is also available through UCLA Extension.

All three ROTC departments offer voluntary four-year programs for incoming freshmen and two-year programs for students who apply early in their sophomore year. All have leadership laboratories which teach leadership and management skills.

All commissions are reserve commissions. Active duty obligation following commissioning varies depending on branch of service and designated career field or occupational specialty.

Scholarships

ROTC Scholarships are awarded on a competitive basis to U.S. citizens regardless of parents' income. Scholarships provide tuition, a book allowance, fees, and a tax-free monetary allowance between $250 and $400 per month during the academic year. Applications for four-year scholarships may be obtained by calling the appropriate department at UCLA — Army, (310) 825-7381; Air Force, (310) 825-1742; Navy/Marine Corps, (310) 825-9075 — or by writing to Armed Forces Opportunities, P.O. Box 2865, Huntington Station, NY 11746-

2102. When writing, specify which service (Army, Navy/Marine Corps, Air Force) scholarship is desired. Applications for Army scholarships can also be obtained by calling (800) 872-7682. Completed applications should be submitted prior to August 15 (Air Force and Navy/Marine Corps) or by November 15 (Army) for early consideration, but no later than December 1 (all services) of the year preceding college matriculation. Two-year scholarship applications may be obtained from the appropriate UCLA department and are considered when received.

Scope and Objectives

Air Force ROTC provides selected students the opportunity to develop those attributes essential to positions of high responsibility as commissioned officers in the U.S. Air Force. This includes understanding Air Force history, doctrine, operating principles, and national security policies, demonstrating ability to apply modern principles of management and human relations in the Air Force environment, and mastering of leadership theory and techniques. Students must demonstrate dedication to their assignments, willingness to accept responsibility, and the ability to think critically and communicate with clarity and precision.

Four-Year Program

The four-year program is available to first-term freshmen and those full-time students with at least three and one half years of undergraduate and/or graduate study remaining and consists of an initial two-year General Military Course, or GMC (Aerospace Studies 1A, 1B, 1C, 20A, 20B, and 20C), followed by a two-year Professional Officer Course (POC) described under Two-Year Program. GMC participation requires one hour of academic class and two hours of leadership laboratory each week during the academic year. Students incur no military obligation for GMC participation unless they qualify and accept an Air Force

ROTC Scholarship during or after their sophomore year.

Students who complete GMC and wish to enter POC attend a four-week field training course the summer following GMC completion. At field training, students are provided meals, quarters, clothing, and travel and incidental expenses. Subjects covered at field training include junior officer training, aircraft and aircrew orientation, career orientation, survival training, base functions, Air Force environment, and physical training.

Two-Year Program

The two-year program is known as the Professional Officer Course (POC) and consists of Aerospace Studies 130A, 130B, 130C, 140A, 140B, and 140C. POC participation requires three hours of leadership laboratory and three hours of academic class each week during the academic year.

Requisites for the two-year program are successful completion of the GMC and a four-week field training course (see Four-Year Program above), or successful completion of a five-week field training program on an Air Force base during the summer preceding enrollment in the program.

Students interested in the five-week field training program must apply to the department chair early during Fall Quarter of their sophomore year. U.S. citizenship is required. There is no obligation to apply. Students are selected on a competitive basis with consideration given to academic major, grade-point average, aptitude examination scores, medical examination results, performance during an officer board interview, and a physical fitness test.

Students selected for the five-week summer field training are provided meals, quarters, clothing, and travel and incidental expenses. Subjects are the same as those in the four-week course plus the academic portion of the GMC (see Four-Year Program above).

Students enrolled in the POC incur a military obligation and are paid from $250 to $400 per month during the academic year. Additionally, they can qualify for up to $3,450 for tuition and textbooks. Graduation and successful completion of the POC leads to a commission as a second lieutenant. Cadets then report to one of the challenging assignments in the Air Force.

Aerospace Studies

Freshman-Year Courses

Z. Leadership Laboratory. (No credit) Laboratory, three hours. Mandatory for and limited to Air Force ROTC cadets. Provides cadets with practical command and staff leadership experiences through performance of various tasks within framework of an organized cadet corps. As integral part of aerospace studies curriculum, provides experiences designed to develop leadership potential and serves as orientation to active duty. No grading.

1A-1B-1C. Foundation of U.S. Air Force. (2-2-2) Lecture, one hour. Survey course designed to introduce students to the U.S. Air Force and Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps. Topics include mission and organization of the Air Force, officership and professionalism, military customs and courtesies, Air Force officer opportunities, group leadership problems, and introduction to communication skills. P/NP or letter grading.

Sophomore-Year Courses

20A-20B-20C. Evolution of U.S. Air Force Air and Space Power. (2-2-2) Lecture, one hour. Historical survey of air and space power designed to motivate students to transition from Air Force ROTC cadet to officer candidate. Featured topics include Air Force heritage and leaders; introduction to air and space power through examination of competencies, functions, and doctrines; and continued application of communication skills. P/NP or letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

130A-130B-130C. Air Force Leadership Studies. (4-4-4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 1A, 1B, 1C, 20A, 20B, 20C. Study of leadership and quality management fundamentals, professional knowledge, Air Force doctrine, leadership ethics, and communication skills required of an Air Force junior officer. Use of case studies to examine Air Force leadership and management situations as means of demonstrating and exercising practical application of concepts being studied. P/NP or letter grading.

140A-140B-140C. National Security Affairs/Preparation for Active Duty. (4-4-4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 1A, 1B, 1C, 20A, 20B, 20C. Study of national security processes, regional studies, advanced leadership ethics, and Air Force doctrine. Special topics focus on the military as a profession, officership, military justice, civilian control of the military, preparation for active duty, and current issues affecting military professionalism. Within this structure, continued emphasis on refining communication skills. P/NP or letter grading.

199. Special Studies in Aerospace Studies. (2 or 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Course of study for undergraduates who wish to engage in independent research under direct supervision of a department faculty member. P/NP or letter grading.

Scope and Objectives

Army ROTC is a program that enables students to become officers in the U.S. Army, Army Reserves, or Army National Guard while earning a college degree. The curriculum supplements students' academic majors by offering elective courses ranging from leadership and management to military law. Courses are augmented with leadership laboratories that stress practical skills such as first aid, land navigation, survival techniques, rappelling, military tactics, and scenario-driven leadership reaction courses. Non-ROTC students may enroll in many of the military science courses without enrolling in the ROTC program.

Additionally, students who decide to become Army officers can receive summer training in military parachuting (Airborne School at Fort Benning, GA), helicopter operations, which include rappelling from a hovering helicopter (Air Assault School in Hawaii), and mountaineering operations (Northern Warfare School in Alaska).

Scholarships are available for two, three, and four years of academic study and are awarded on a competitive basis. Army Scholarships pay for tuition and mandatory fees and provide a tiered stipend ranging from $2,500 to $4,000 per year and a $600 book allowance. Non-scholarship, contracted ROTC cadets also receive the tiered stipend of $2,500 to $4,000 per year. Students in the program also compete for over $35,000 in merit-based scholarships provided annually by various private organizations that support the Army ROTC program. Additionally, students may work part-time as officer trainees in local Army Reserves or National Guard units through the simultaneous membership program (SMP). Work-study opportunities are also available. Contracted students can fly free on military aircraft within the continental U.S. on a space-available basis.

Students may select a branch of the Army in which to be commissioned from 16 specialty fields, including military intelligence, aviation, signal communications, finance, logistics, and engineering. Prior to completion of the ROTC program, students may request to go on active duty or serve part-time in the Army Reserves or National Guard.

Undergraduate Study

Students aspiring to become Army officers follow prescribed course sequences with the Military Science Department and a physical fitness program. Generally, the courses consist of one 2-unit course per term and physical fitness sessions one to three times per week, depending on the participation-level requirements.

The military science curriculum is divided into two parts: (1) the Basic Course, two years of lower division study during which students must complete 12 units of military science coursework and (2) the Advanced Course, two years of upper division study consisting of 13 units of military science coursework, one of the history courses listed below, and a six-week summer camp.

Army ROTC students must satisfy military history requirements by completing History 125E, 125F, 127A, 127B, 130, 147A, 148A, 148B, 148C, 152A, or 152B in lieu of Military Science 110, with consent of the ROTC adviser.

Transfer students and others who were unable to enroll in the Basic Course can receive equivalent credit in several different ways (see Two-Year Program below).

Admission to the Advanced Course is limited to selected students who meet all academic and physical requirements. Students in this course receive a subsistence allowance between $350 and $400 a month for 10 months during each of the two academic years, plus military science books and uniforms. After completion of the Advanced Course and graduation, students have the opportunity to be commissioned as second lieutenants in one of the Army's 16 specialty areas in either the Army National Guard, Reserves, or Active Army. Students' preferences are a major factor in determining which specialty is awarded.

Students selected for Advanced ROTC must attend a six-week National Advanced Leadership Camp between their Military Science III and IV years. Cadets receive an allowance for travel expenses and are paid for attendance.

The active duty obligation for those students selected to enter the Reserves or National Guard is for initial training, and only for a period of several months. Students accepting ROTC Scholarships and a commission in the Regular Army, or who are selected to enter the Active Army, serve longer terms. ROTC students wishing to obtain advanced degrees may be granted a delay in reporting to their initial assignment.

Four-Year Program

Students are enrolled in the Basic Course (freshman and sophomore years) on a voluntary basis. After completion of the Basic Course and before entrance into the Advanced Course (junior and senior years), students are required to execute a contract with the Department of the Army agreeing to complete the Advanced Course and accept a commission if offered.

Two-Year Program

The two-year program is designed for students who receive placement credit for two years of ROTC and directly enter the Advanced Course. Placement credit may be given for completing three years of high school Junior ROTC, attending a paid ROTC Leaders' Training Course, membership in the Army Reserves or National Guard, completing two years of college-level Air Force or Navy ROTC, or previous active duty military service.

Commissioning

Successful completion of the Advanced Course program and a bachelor's degree may lead to a commission as a second lieutenant in the Army Reserves, National Guard, or Active Army. Distinguished graduates may qualify for a commission in the Regular Army.

Military Science

Lower Division Courses

Z. Leadership Laboratory. (No credit) Laboratory, three hours (lower division cadets) or four hours (upper division cadets). All cadets must be concurrently enrolled in a military science course; upper division cadets must also be under a contracted obligation with department. Designed to allow cadets to apply leadership techniques and military skills taught in classroom and to develop their confidence as future military officers. No grading.

10. Introduction to Leadership. (2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Introduction to leadership and motivational theory. Topics include nature of organizations, individual behavior, motivation and performance, values and organizational commitment, and influence processes.

11. U.S. Defense Establishment I. (2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Study of evolution and organization of U.S. Department of Defense, including study of military services, with emphasis on the U.S. Army. P/NP or letter grading.

12. U.S. Defense Establishment II. (2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Fundamentals of national security policy development. P/NP or letter grading.

18. Modern Guerrilla Warfare. (2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Limited to undergraduate students. Introduction to low intensity conflict and guerrilla strategies; explanation/discussion of political, economic, religious, and social factors contributing to civil unrest and/or insurgencies. Topics include non-military responses, military tactics, interrelationship of military and government, psychological warfare, and civic actions.

21. Psychology of Leadership I. (2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Study of relationship of individual differences, group dynamics, formal organizational constraints, and impact of society on leadership process. Introduction to external environmental pressures on a leader and psychology of the individual as a follower, examined in areas of motivation, peer pressure/conformity, and group norms.

24. Theory of Warfare. (2) Inquiry into theory, nature, causes, and elements of warfare, with attention also to evolution of weapons and warfare.

Upper Division Courses

110. U.S. Military History. (3) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Survey of American military history from 1860 to the present. Causes of war, strategy, tactics, and technological developments set against economic, political, and diplomatic concerns. Impact of warfare on society.

112. Psychology of Leadership II. (3) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Introduction to various individual leadership styles and personalities to assist students in development of their own individual style. Different philosophies of leadership, along with dimensions of leader behavior. Special consideration to counseling, management, and communication techniques that must be mastered to be an effective leader.

113. Theory of Learning Applied to Teaching. (2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Study of instructional processes, lesson content planning procedures, techniques of applicatory education, role of testing (including evaluation and analysis). Emphasis on development of training programs to maximize organizational effectiveness. P/NP or letter grading.

123. Military Legal Systems. (2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Introduction to theory and application of military law and legal systems, with emphasis on Uniform Code of Military Justice and rights of the accused under the constitution.

125. Decision Making. (2) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour. Designed to present students who become commissioned officers with new insight into modern methods of managerial decision making and into various steps involved in the process. Introduction to various components of leadership and functions of management in order to understand where areas of problem analysis and decision making impact and how they fit into leadership and management. Various steps which comprise the problem analysis and decision-making processes.

126. Military Professionalism and Ethics. (2) Lecture, 30 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Ethical concepts held by America's military institution. Classification of the military as a profession, special social responsibilities of those in the military, values related to and accepted by military society, and an ethical reasoning/decision-making process and model.

199. Supervised Independent Studies. (1 to 3) Tutorial, to be arranged. Limited to juniors/seniors. Supervised independent studies and research for undergraduate students who desire to pursue topics of their own selection.

Scope and Objectives

The Department of Naval Science provides professional training for students leading to a reserve commission at graduation in the U.S. Navy or Marine Corps. Through the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps (NROTC), scholarship students receive full tuition, fees, books, and subsistence pay of $250 to $400 per month. Nonscholarship students may apply to participate as members of the midshipman battalion under the NROTC College Program and, like NROTC Scholarship students, they also receive a reserve commission at graduation. Because of the rapid development of highly technical ship systems, aviation, and other military equipment, science and engineering majors are highly desirable; however, Navy/Marine Corps Scholarships are currently available to students pursuing any major offered by the University, as long as they agree to complete basic technical requirements. In addition to University requirements, Navy option midshipmen must complete 26 units and Marine Corps option midshipmen 18 units of naval science courses, physical fitness test, and summer training cruises, each about four to six weeks long. Both Navy and Marine Corps option students must also pass a swimming test. The department also conducts a sail training program for all Navy midshipmen. All naval science courses are open to students who are not in the program but have an interest in the Navy/Marine Corps and related fields, such as engineering, navigation and naval operations, history, and management.

Scholarship Program

The majority of naval science students attend the University on Navy/Marine Corps Scholarships which are awarded primarily on a four-year basis to high school seniors selected by a nationwide competition. A two-year upper division scholarship program is also available, with a similar selection process, to students who have not yet begun their junior year in college. Applications for both types of scholarships are due by December 1 and March 1, respectively, each year. In addition to tuition, fees, and uniforms, students receive subsistence pay of $250 to $400 per month and a book stipend. Scholarship students are obligated to serve on active duty for a minimum of four years following graduation and commissioning.

College Program (Nonscholarship)

Students attending the University who meet Navy/Marine Corps requirements but who do not have an NROTC Scholarship may enroll in the College Program during their freshman year. These students have the opportunity to compete for scholarships after the completion of one term of naval science courses. If they do not win a scholarship, or choose not to compete for one, they must compete for advanced standing prior to their junior year. A two-year College Program is also available to students who have not yet started their junior year. Students enter the two-year program with advanced standing after selection through national competition and completion of a six-week summer training period. Applications for the two-year program are due March 1 of the sophomore year. All College Program students receive uniforms, naval science textbooks and, once selected for advanced standing, monthly subsistence pay in their junior and senior years. College Program students serve on active duty for a minimum of three years following graduation and commissioning.

Marine Corps Option

Highly motivated NROTC students may request designation as Marine Corps option students and may also pursue any UCLA academic degree. The final summer cruise involves intensive Marine training. Marine Corps option students also participate, on a limited basis, in field training exercises during the academic year.

Naval Science Minor

The Naval Science minor is designed for students who wish to augment the major they are completing in another departmental program. Naval science courses are open to all students with an interest in history, national security, foreign policy, organizational leadership, management, ethics, and the military sciences.

To enter the minor, students must have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. For further information, contact Donna Tenerelli at (310) 825-9075.

Required Lower Division Courses (10 units):
Naval Science 1B, 20A, 20B.

Required Upper Division Courses (20 units):
Naval Science 101A, 101B, 102B, 103, 104.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with a grade-point average of 2.5 or better in each. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Naval Science

Lower Division Courses

A. Naval Science Laboratory. (No credit) Laboratory, one hour. Requisite: course 102C. Limited to Naval Science ROTC midshipmen. Designed to cover service-specific administrative processes that are requisite knowledge for newly commissioned Navy and Marine Corps officers. No grading.

Z. Leadership Laboratory. (No credit) Laboratory, to be arranged. Mandatory for and limited to Naval Science ROTC midshipmen. Provides midshipmen with general military training and practical command and staff leadership experiences through classroom instruction and performance of various tasks and interactive processes within framework of organized midshipmen-run military unit, with oversight by active-duty military staff. As integral part of naval science curriculum, provides professional experiences designed to develop leadership potential and orientation for active duty. No grading.

1A. Introduction to Naval Science. (2) Introduction to organization of the Naval Service, various components of the Navy, career opportunities, shipboard damage control, fire fighting, propulsion systems, and some customs and traditions of the Naval Service.

1B. Naval Ship Systems I. (4) Introduction to naval engineering, with emphasis on steam, nuclear, diesel, and gas turbine propulsion systems and their associated auxiliary components. Basic thermodynamic theory, electrical theory, stability, and buoyancy.

20A. Naval Ship Systems II. (4) Study of naval weapon systems, with emphasis on infrared, radar, and sonar principles. Target designation and acquisition, methods of solving fire control problem, target detection systems. Analysis of transfer and feedback functions inherent in weapon systems.

20B. Seapower and Maritime Affairs. (2) Conceptual study of seapower, emphasizing historical development of naval and commercial power. Seapower examined in relation to economic, political, and cultural strengths, focusing on current abilities of specific nations to use the oceans to attain national objectives.

Upper Division Courses

101A. Navigation I. (4) Study of principles of piloting, celestial, and electronic navigation employed in determining a ship's position at sea. Celestial and electronic theory, mathematical analysis, sextant sights, and use of navigational aids.

101B. Navigation II. (4) Requisite: course 101A. Study of rules of the road, shiphandling, and basic concepts of multiple ship formations and maneuvering. In-depth analysis of problems associated with operations on high seas and inland waters applying to civil and U.S. Naval craft.

102B. Naval Leadership and Management I. (4) Examination of current and classical leadership and management theories, with emphasis on their application to junior military officer's role as a leader/manager. Topics include managerial functions, performance appraisal, motivation theories, group dynamics, leadership theories, and communication.

102C. Leadership and Ethics. (2) Lecture, two hours. Requisite for Naval Science ROTC midshipmen: course 102B. Capstone course that examines principles of leadership and ethics relevant to military leaders through study and interactive discussion of classical and contemporary source documents and case studies. Letter grading.

103. Evolution of Warfare. (4) Study of evolution of warfare, including historical and comparative consideration of influence that leadership, political, economic, and sociological and technological development factors have had on warfare and influence they continue to exert in age of limited warfare.

104. Expeditionary Military Operations. (4) Study of historical use of expeditionary military operations, with particular emphasis on doctrine, tactics, and equipment used. Examination of topics through study of political and military objectives by focusing on historical examples, including Marathon, Gallipoli, World War II, Korea, Beirut, and Grenada. Examination of contemporary doctrine through study of recent operations.

199. Supervised Independent Studies. (1 to 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Limited to juniors/seniors. Supervised independent studies and research for undergraduate students who desire to pursue topics of their own selection. P/NP or letter grading.

Scope and Objectives

Scandinavia consists of five Northern European countries: Denmark, Finland, Iceland,

Norway, and Sweden. These countries form a geographic bridge between the American and European continents and a political bridge between Western and Eastern Europe. For all students of literature, language, the arts, and the social and physical sciences, Scandinavia is of particular interest.

The modern Scandinavian program educates students about Scandinavia through the study of its languages and literatures. The Scandinavian Section offers both undergraduate and graduate degrees in the languages and literatures of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden. Danish, Norwegian, and Swedish are mutually understandable languages, giving the student of one access to the literatures and cultures of the other two. Both undergraduate and graduate majors are expected to concentrate on one Scandinavian language, though they study the literatures of the other language areas.

Undergraduate Courses

No credit is allowed for completing a less advanced course after successful completion of a more advanced course in Danish, Norwegian, and Swedish grammar and/or composition. Students with demonstrated preparation may be permitted a more advanced program by the section or may be transferred to a more advanced course with consent of the instructor.

Native speakers of Norwegian, Swedish, and Danish may not enroll in any language course (including courses 105, 110, 115) in the Scandinavian Section except by petition in writing to the section. Non-Scandinavian students with knowledge of one of these Scandinavian languages may not take courses in the others except by petition in writing. Petitions must include a description of the student's linguistic background and the reason for wanting to take the language course in question.

Scandinavian Languages

B.A.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Scandinavian 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, or 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15, or 21, 22, 23, 24, and 25, or equivalent.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Scandinavian Languages majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: two years of either Swedish, Norwegian, or Danish.

The Major

Required: Twelve upper division Scandinavian courses, including 105 or 110 or 115, 141, 142, 143. As an option, three upper division courses in a related field may be taken if approved in advance by the undergraduate adviser. It is recommended that students who plan to do graduate work in Scandinavian take German 1 through 6.

Scandinavian Minor

To enter the Scandinavian minor, students must have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better.

Required Courses (28 units): Any seven Scandinavian courses, two of which may be lower division courses selected from Scandinavian 1 through 50.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degree

The Scandinavian Section offers the M.A. degree in Scandinavian.

Scandinavian

Scope and Objectives

The Bachelor of Arts degree in Russian Language and Literature is designed to provide students with basic mastery of the Russian language and familiarity with the classics of Russian literature. Within the major, students concentrate either in Russian literature and culture or Russian linguistics. Students typically begin to study Russian in their first year, but those contemplating a Russian major later in their academic program can fulfill the Russian language requirements by combining regular coursework with summer programs or with the University of California Education Abroad Program (EAP) in Moscow, which is open to students who have completed the equivalent of two years of study (American Council of Teachers of Foreign Languages — ACTFL — level 1). Students interested in this program should consult the undergraduate adviser as early as possible.

The Bachelor of Arts degree in Slavic Languages and Literatures is designed to provide students with basic mastery of two Slavic languages and familiarity with their literatures, as well as general background in the cultural, political, and social history of the Slavic peoples.

The department also offers a Bachelor of Arts degree in Russian Studies in which students achieve a basic mastery of the Russian language, as well as familiarity with Russian literature, history, and culture.

The graduate program provides advanced training in the Slavic literatures and linguistics leading to the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees. The primary task of the department faculty is to develop and refine the critical and analytic skills of its students in preparation for productive careers in college teaching and research in the Slavic field. Alternative careers include language teaching, business, translation, interpreting, librarianship, and government service.

Undergraduate Study

The department offers three majors: (1) Russian Language and Literature, with concentrations in Russian literature or Russian linguistics, (2) Slavic Languages and Literatures, and (3) Russian Studies. The equivalent of a major in Slavic or Russian Language and Literature is normally required for admission to the department's graduate program and is used to determine the number of courses in Russian literature and/or linguistics that students majoring in Russian Studies are expected to make up in order to receive graduate degrees in the department. Students not majoring in Slavic or Russian Language and Literature who intend to pursue graduate study in the department are strongly encouraged to take courses in Russian literature and linguistics during their undergraduate years to reduce the number of makeup courses required. Qualified seniors may also take graduate courses numbered below 220 with consent of the instructor and the graduate and undergraduate advisers.

Scope and Objectives

The primary objectives of the Department of Social Welfare graduate program are to prepare leaders for the profession of social work and to develop the empirical base for all facets of practice. In response to changing demographic trends and the emergence of new social problems, the department provides leadership in the areas of policy, practice, and research and in the development of an innovative curriculum for training students and professionals to meet the service needs of a multicultural clientele.

The educational program is based on the premise that all students need to acquire a common body of knowledge and basic skills, and a common understanding of the philosophy and values of the profession. These then form a sound foundation for the development of more specialized knowledge and skills along the lines of each student's interests and the needs of the field.

Students are encouraged to take advantage of the resources within the University by selecting elective courses in related disciplines. In addition, as a department within the School of Public Policy and Social Research, the program affords students instructional opportunities in the other affiliated departments — Policy Studies and Urban Planning.

Beyond national opportunities in the profession of social work, there is increasing demand for qualified and experienced social workers to serve in the international field, where many social service programs are conducted under the auspices of the United Nations, the U.S. government, and national sectarian organizations. Graduates of the doctoral program generally secure appointments at major universities or research centers.

The challenge to the department, the profession, and those who join us as students is to prepare to forge the paths, build the bridges, and shape the future to ensure that all individuals, families, and communities enjoy better education, better health care, better job training, and better economic futures.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Social Welfare offers the Master of Social Welfare (M.S.W.) degree and the Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) in Social Welfare degree. Three concurrent degree programs (Social Welfare M.S.W./Asian American Studies M.A., Social Welfare M.S.W./Law J.D., and Social Welfare M.S.W./Public Policy M.P.P.) are also offered.

Social Welfare

Lower Division Course

98D. Negotiating Conflict in Our Diverse Culture. (4) Seminar, three hours. Enforced prerequisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. Exploration of art and science of negotiations in addressing campus and community conflicts, with focus on analysis of positions and interests of the disputants, understanding cultural and political context of the dispute, and developing tactics and skills to effectively, realistically, and cooperatively address and learn from the conflict. P/ NP or letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

100A. Introduction to Social Welfare: Policies and Programs. (4) Origin and development of major U.S. social welfare programs and policies guiding them, with emphasis on analysis of policy developments/issues related to provision of social welfare services. Study of historical and current responses of the profession to major social problems.

100B. Social Welfare Policy: Overview. (4) Requisite: course 100A. Review of existing policy regarding major social issues in the field of social welfare. Examination of discrepancy between need and capacity of social agencies to address need. Exploration of differential impact of policy on various populations.

101. Social Welfare in a Multicultural Society. (4) Social policy viewed from perspective of various cultural groups. Students to become aware of their own cultural perspective and learn to recognize similarities and differences in values, perspectives, and beliefs across cultural groups.

102. Social Welfare Organizations and Community Systems. (4) Recommended prerequisites: courses 100A, 100B. Detailed demonstration of implementation of policy via the functioning of human service organizations. Examination of organizational structures/functions. Exploration of characteristics and organization of the community and forces that influence its development and change.

103. Introduction to Direct Practice with Individuals, Families, and Groups. (4) Requisites: courses 100A, 100B, 101. Description and demonstration of basic skills employed in direct social work practice via the casework process. Students practice these skills in written, role-play, small group, and video or audio exercises. P/ NP or letter grading.

104A. Filipino American Community and Family. (4) Examination of interaction of Filipino American families and communities within the larger social and political environment to understand importance of social, cultural, and political influences of Filipino American families and communities. (4) Examination of interaction of Japanese American families and communities within the larger social and political environment to understand importance of social, cultural, and political influences of Japanese American families and communities. P/ NP or letter grading.

105. Social Welfare Policy in Modern America: Historical Perspectives. (4) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Historical overview of American social policy dealing with three core societal problems: poverty, sickness, and joblessness. Programs developed by governments to ameliorate these problems have typically been public insurance programs or cash transfers such as unemployment insurance, welfare, and Social Security. Collectively these programs are known as "the welfare state"; examination of origins of the U.S. welfare state, its development over time, and features that make it distinctive as compared to welfare states in other nations.

106. Research Seminar and Field Observation: Social Welfare. (4) Seminar, three hours; discussion, one hour; outside study, eight hours. Didactic component with focus on development of basic skills in the areas of research. Students select one field of observation experience (module) from a number of field settings. P/ NP or letter grading.

107. Field Practicum: Social Welfare. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour; outside study, eight hours. Requisite: course 106. In field practicum students are placed in a specific agency where they combine observation of agency functions with participation in specific agency tasks and roles under instructional supervision of an agency mentor and a UCLA faculty member. P/ NP or letter grading.

M108. Violence against Women. (4) (Same as Women's Studies M187.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: Women's Studies 10, 110A. Factual information and theoretical analyses regarding various forms of violence against women and girls in their homes, workplaces, and communities through critical examination of social structures and social science research. Letter grading.

M140. Introduction to Study of Aging. (4) (Same as Gerontology M140 and Psychology M140.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Perspectives on major features of human aging — biological, social, psychological, and humanistic. Introduction to information on the range of influences on aging to prepare students for subsequent specialization. P/ NP or letter grading.

190A-190B. Community Research and Services Seminars. (4-4) Seminar, three hours; service learning, four hours; outside study, five hours. Limited to juniors/seniors. History and roles of social welfare policy within government, organizations, and communities. Reflections about service-learning site experiences, with application of issues related to lecture and seminar readings. Students to be assigned to two-term tutoring/mentoring site where they apply tutoring techniques as they assist middle school children living in impoverished areas of Los Angeles County. In Progress (course 190A) and letter (course 190B) grading.

199. Special Studies in Social Welfare. (2 or 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: 3.0 grade-point average. Designed for juniors/seniors. Intensive directed research in social welfare. P/ NP or letter grading.

Graduate Courses

201A-201B. Dynamics of Human Behavior. (3-3) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Biopsychosocial factors associated with individual and group behavior and development as applicable in social functioning of individuals and groups. Emphasis on theoretical issues and research evidence which contribute to a unified theory of human development. Letter grading.

202A-202B. Dynamics of Human Behavior. (2-2) Requisites: courses 201A, 201B. Deviations and pathologies or stresses in physical, emotional, and social areas of human functioning as those problems relate to role and function of the social worker.

Review of areas of research of concern to social workers, with special attention to design, instrument construction, data collection, data processing, data reduction, analysis, and interpretation. Designs studied include survey, panel, experimental observation, and theory development research. S/U or letter grading.

285D. Research in Child Welfare. (4) (Formerly numbered 285A.) Lecture, three hours. Integrated examination of development of empirical research in child welfare field. Critical assessment of current approaches to meet needs of children who come to attention of child welfare agencies. Examination of research and theory in child welfare field. Review of student knowledge of research methods and statistics. Letter grading.

285E. Research in Gerontology. (4) (Formerly numbered 285B.) Lecture, three hours. Overview of research in aging. Development of research questions, selecting appropriate theoretical frameworks, conducting literature reviews, selecting appropriate research design, identifying sampling methods. Special considerations in aging research, including sampling, questionnaire design, and recruitment issues. Letter grading.

285F. Research in Health. (4) (Formerly numbered 285C.) Lecture, three hours. Research in area of health policy and services. Discussions of readings about range of research from field of health services. Identification of research design issues, design of research instruments, analysis of strengths and limitations of current approaches to health services research, consideration of alternative roles for social work practitioners in arena of health services. Letter grading.

285G. Research in Mental Health. (4) Lecture, three hours. Research methods in mental health. Application of experimental designs, survey research methods, ethnographic methods, single-subject designs, and observational methods. Operational definition of variables and selection and design of appropriate measures for research in mental health. Practice in critiquing published research related to mental health issues. Letter grading.

285H. Program Evaluation Research. (4) Lecture, three hours. Discussion of differences and similarities between evaluation and other research, alternative program evaluation methods, roles and limitations of evaluation research in real world, development of proposals for feasible program evaluation research. Letter grading.

285I. Research in Youth Populations. (4) Lecture, three hours. Research methods as applied to problems, issues, and interventions pertaining to youth populations. Instruction and experience in applying experimental and quasi-experimental designs, survey research methods, ethnographic methods, single-subject designs, and observational methods. Operational definition of variables and selection and design of appropriate measures for research with children and adolescents. Letter grading.

286A. Survey of Research Methods. (4) Discussion, four hours. Basic concepts underlying research methods. Content includes theoretical and conceptual approaches to research problem formulation; research design, including experimental, comparative, and survey; sampling; statistical methods; methods of observation and techniques of data analysis. S/U or letter grading.

286B. Advanced Research Methods. (4) Discussion, four hours. Advanced concepts underlying research methods. Continuing study of theoretical and conceptual approaches to research problem formulation; research design, including experimental, comparative, and survey; sampling; statistical methods; methods of observation and techniques of data analysis. S/U or letter grading.

286C. Research Internship. (4) Discussion, four hours. Supervised study and training through participation in on-going research project or one initiated by students and carried out under faculty supervision, enabling students to apply research skills developed in prior courses. May be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

290A-290B-290C. Seminars: Social Work. (4-4-4) Seminar, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Series of seminars dealing with trends in social work and social welfare, with focus on current social problems affecting individuals, groups, and communities and new patterns of intervention based on recent demonstrations and research. ## Scope and Objectives

Sociology is the study of the organization, dynamics, and consequences of social life. The scope of the discipline is as broad and diverse as social life itself. Sociologists study social interaction and relationships, organizations and institutions, communities and whole societies. The methods of sociological investigation are also varied: sociologists immerse themselves in the daily life of groups, interview group participants, examine recorded interaction, interpret historical documents, analyze census data, and conduct large surveys. The methods and concepts of sociology yield powerful insights into the social processes shaping lives, problems, and possibilities in contemporary society. The capacity to identify and understand these processes — a capacity which C.W. Mills called the “sociological imagination” — is valuable preparation for personal and professional participation in a changing and complex world.

In addition to contributing to a liberal arts education, the Sociology major prepares individuals for a broad range of career options and graduate and professional studies. The analytic perspectives and skills gained in the major are a foundation for careers in law, social welfare, urban planning, business, education, and public health. The major also provides a foundation for students intending to pursue graduate work in sociology and related fields. Employment opportunities available to the graduate with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Sociology also include work in community service organizations and health agencies, government service, and human resources.

The Sociology Department faculty includes internationally renowned scholars who address topics ranging in scope from the organization of face-to-face interaction to the consequences of globalization. The department boasts outstanding teachers — five of whom have won Distinguished Teaching Awards — and excellently trained teaching assistants, many of whom have also won awards. The select honors program has a record for training students in the fundamentals of research and generating honors theses of substantial accomplishment. Over the past several years, a growing number of majors have won a variety of honors program scholarships, receiving grants each worth several thousand dollars. The Alpha Kappa Delta Sociological Honorary Society conference is an important annual event, and the Sociological Undergraduate Association (SUA) maintains an active, ongoing program.

The Ph.D. in Sociology usually leads to a career in research and/or teaching. Although most sociologists are employed by universities, there are increasing career opportunities in government and other nonuniversity research centers.

Undergraduate Study

Sociology B.A.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Sociology 1; one course from Mathematics 2, 3A, 31A; Sociology M18 (or Statistics 10, 11, or Psychology 100A).

All courses required for the major in Sociology, including lower division and allied field courses, must be taken for a letter grade. A 2.0 grade-point average is required for the preparation and for the major.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Sociology majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: one introduction to sociology course, one finite mathematics or calculus course, and one statistics course.

The Major

Required: Ten upper division sociology courses (42 units), including Sociology 101, 102, and one course from 104, 104H, 106A, 113. These courses, devoted to the systematic exploration of sociological methods and theories, should be completed as early as possible and before taking other upper division courses. Students must also take seven additional upper division sociology courses.

To complete the major, four upper division allied field courses (16 units) in other departments are required (the allied fields are anthropology, communication studies, economics, geography, history, political science, and psychology), as is one course from English Composition 100W, 110, 129A through 129D, 131A through 131D (may be taken on a P/NP grading basis).

Only 8 units of Sociology 199 are allowed. At least six of the sociology courses must be taken while in residence in the College of Letters and Science at UCLA.

Honors Program

The honors program in sociology provides opportunity for outstanding students to undertake an independent year-long research project under the guidance of a faculty member.

As preparation for the honors major, students must complete Mathematics 2, 3A, or 31A, and an honors section of Sociology 1 and M18.

Prior to taking other upper division sociology courses, students must complete an honors section of Sociology 101 and 102.

Also required are three undergraduate seminars from the Sociology 197 series; any two additional upper division sociology courses; courses 104H, 199HA, 199HB, 199HC (honors thesis seminars); four upper division allied field courses (16 units) in other departments (the allied fields are anthropology, communication studies, economics, geography, history, political science, and psychology); and one course from English Composition 100W, 110, 129A through 129D, 131A through 131D (may be taken on a P/NP grading basis).

Students must have a 3.5 overall grade-point average, have completed the sociology preparation requirements and, in most cases, have completed the required theory course. Applications are available from the Undergraduate Counselor's Office, 254E Haines Hall. Students should apply in the last term of their junior year.

Computing Specialization

Majors in Sociology may select a specialization in Computing by (1) satisfying all the requirements for a bachelor's degree in the major, (2) completing Program in Computing 10A, 10B, 10C, and (3) completing Sociology C112, 113. Students graduate with a bachelor's degree in sociology and a specialization in Computing.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Sociology offers Master of Arts (M.A.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Sociology.

Sociology

Lower Division Courses

1. Introductory Sociology. (5) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour. Survey of characteristics of social life, processes of social interaction, and tools of sociological investigation. P/NP or letter grading.

M5. Social Organization of Black Communities. (5) (Same as Afro-American Studies M5.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour; field trips. Analysis and interpretation of social organization of black communities, with focus on origins and development of black communities, competing theories and research findings, defining characteristics and contemporary issues. Letter grading.

M18. Introduction to Statistical Methods for Social Sciences. (5) (Same as Anthropology M80, Geography M40, and Statistics M12.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour; laboratory, one hour. Not open for credit to students with credit for Statistics 10, 11, or 13 (or former Economics M40, Organismic Biology M22, Statistics M11, or M13). Elements of statistical analysis for social sciences. Presentation and interpretation of data, descriptive statistics, theory of probability and basic sampling distributions, statistical inference including principles of estimation and tests of hypotheses, introduction to regression and correlation. P/NP or letter grading.

24. Conversation and Society. (4) Lecture, three hours. Examination of social norms that organize conversational interaction in everyday life. Consideration of relationship between conversation and other institutions in society. P/NP or letter grading.

88A-88Z. Lower Division Seminars. (1 each) Seminar, one hour. Limited to 15 freshmen/sophomores. Variable topics of current sociological interest. Consult Schedule of Classes or "Department Announcements" for topics and instructors. P/NP grading.

Upper Division Courses

101. Development of Sociological Theory. (5) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Comparative survey of basic concepts and theories in sociology from 1850 to 1920. P/NP or letter grading.

102. Contemporary Sociological Theory. (5) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Prerequisite: course 101. Critical examination of significant theoretical formulations from 1920 to the present. P/NP or letter grading.

104. Introduction to Sociological Research Methods. (5) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Not open to students with credit for course 104H. Introduction to issues of ethics, design, data collection, and analysis in sociological research. P/NP or letter grading.

104H. Honors Thesis Research. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, three hours. In-depth introduction to process of producing scholarly sociological research for students who intend to write an undergraduate honors thesis. Letter grading.

106A. Field Research Methods I. (6) (Formerly numbered 106.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours; fieldwork, eight to 10 hours. Research practicum in which students write field notes on their experiences in and observations of intensive internship field placement. Readings focus on fieldwork roles and relations, observing and describing, writing field notes, field interviewing, ethical issues, and preliminary data analysis. Fieldwork and extensive field notes required. Letter grading.

106B. Field Research Methods II. (6) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours; fieldwork, 10 hours. Prerequisite: course 106A. Collection and analysis of both field notes and unstructured interview data from student field placement. Use of techniques of qualitative data analysis, including qualitative coding, analytic memoing, and grounded theory methods, to analyze these materials and to write ethnographic paper. Letter grading.

110. Sociohistorical Methods. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for juniors/seniors. General problems of scientific abstraction, generalization, inference, and verification and particular problems of historical specification, comparison, and counterfactual reasoning in constructing and testing a replicable explanation of an historical event. P/NP or letter grading.

C112. Introduction to Mathematical Sociology. (4) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, two hours. Prerequisites: course M18, Mathematics 2, 3A (course whose content includes introductions to probability theory, matrix algebra, and differential and integral calculus). Mathematical treatment of several sociological phenomena, such as occupational mobility, population growth, organizational structure, and friendship patterns, each covered in some detail, including initial development and subsequent evaluation and modification (emphasizing both deductive and computational aspects of mathematics). Concurrently scheduled with course C243. Letter grading.

113. Statistical and Computer Methods for Social Research. (4) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Prerequisite: course M18. Continuation of course M18, covering more advanced statistical techniques such as multiple regression, analysis of variance, or factor analysis. Content varies. Students learn how to use the computer and write papers analyzing prepared data sets.

114A-114B. Introduction to Scientific Sociology. (4-4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. How to make testable arguments about social reality and how to test those arguments in context of study of social stratification, and ethnic and gender inequality. Introduction to elementary, robust analytic tools. P/NP or letter grading.

M115. Environmental Sociology. (4) (Same as Environment M133.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Relationship between society and environment. Analysis in detail of interrelations between social factors (such as class, race, gender, and religion) and environmental factors (such as pollution, waste disposal, sustainability, and global warming). P/NP or letter grading.

116. Social Demography. (4) Studies of past, present, and future trends in population growth. Sociological theories of causes and consequences of population growth and redistribution. Emphasis on correlates of fertility, mortality, and migration.

117. Family Demography. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Examination of demographic behaviors, such as marriage, divorce, and childbearing, associated with family and household organization. Sociological approach to understanding causes and consequences of trends and differentials in family formation and dissolution. P/NP or letter grading.

M118. Simulating Society: Exploring Artificial Communities. (5) (Formerly numbered M198A.) (Same as Honors Collegium M148.) Seminar, three hours; computer laboratory, one hour. Examination of social behavior through computer simulations of behavior in artificial communities. P/NP or letter grading.

CM124A-CM124B. Conversational Structures I, II. (4-4) (Same as Communication Studies M144A-M144B.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. May be concurrently scheduled with courses C244A-C244B. P/NP or letter grading. CM124A. Introduction to some structures which are employed in organization of conversational interaction, such as turn-taking organization, organization of repair, and some basic sequence structures with limited expansions. CM124B. Requisite: course CM124A. Consideration of some more expanded sequence structures, story structures, topical sequences, and overall structural organization of single conversations.

CM125. Talk and Social Institutions. (4) (Same as Communication Studies M125.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for juniors/seniors. Practices of communication and social interaction in a number of major institutional sites in contemporary society. Setting varies but may include emergency services, police and courts, medicine, news interviews, and political oratory. Concurrently scheduled with course C258. P/NP or letter grading.

126. Study of Norms. (4) Properties of norms, of normatively governed conduct, of lay and professional methods for describing, producing, using, and validating norms in contrasting settings of socially organized activities; relevance of these properties for programmatic problems of analytic sociology. Fieldwork required.

127. Mind and Society. (4) Lecture, two and one-half hours; discussion, one hour. Prerequisite: course 1. Study of social production of modes of thought and forms of knowledge. Study of ways in which bodies of knowledge and cognitive styles are produced, used, and transformed in everyday, organizational, and extraordinary contexts. P/NP or letter grading.

128. Sociology of Emotions. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Prerequisite: course 1. Designed for juniors/seniors. Sociological theories and explanations of social conditions shaping and producing emotional experiences; effects of individual expression of emotions on social conditions; relations between thought, sensations, and the emotions; the self and emotions; social construction of emotions.

129. Sociology of Time. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Conceptualizations of time seen from scientific, philosophical, historical, and sociological perspectives; "cyclical" and "linear" time in primitive, ancient, and medieval societies; ritual, the sacred, and experience of the eternal; structuring of urban, modern, and postmodern societies by clock, calendar, and schedule; future value orientation and notion of progress; time, labor, and social domination.

130. Self and Society. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Examination of social processes shaping experience, definition, and enactment of self and personal identity. P/NP or letter grading.

132. Social Psychology: Sociological Approaches. (4) Survey of contribution of sociologists to theory and research in social psychology, including theories of social control; conformity and deviation; reference groups; and interaction process.

133. Collective Behavior. (4) Prerequisites: courses 1, M18. Designed for juniors/seniors. Characteristics of crowds, mobs, publics, social movements, and revolutions; their relation to social unrest and their role in developing and changing social organization.

134. Culture and Personality. (4) Prerequisites: courses 1, M18. Designed for juniors/seniors. Theories of relation of variations in personality to culture and group life, in primitive and modern societies, and influence of social role on behavior.

135. Group Processes. (4) Systematic study of formation, structure, and functioning of groups; analysis of group processes and group products from a variety of theoretical viewpoints; implications of various research techniques.

136. Process and Socialization in the Family. (4) Prerequisites: courses 1, M18. Designed for juniors/seniors. Examination of processes of interaction, decision making, role differentiation, conflict, integration, and socialization within the family and their interrelations with society.

M138. Death, Suicide, and Trauma. (4) (Same as Psychology M163.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for juniors/seniors. Definition and taxonomy of death; new permissiveness and taboos related to death; romanticization of death; role of the individual in his own demise; modes of death; development of ideas of death through life span; ways in which ideas of death influence conduct of lives; impact of dying on social structure surrounding the individual; preventive, interventive, and postventive practices in relation to death and suicide; developmental perspective on witnessing traumatic death, including posttraumatic and grief reactions; partial death; megadeath; lethality; psychological autopsy; death of institutions and cultures. P/NP grading recommended (letter grading required if course to be applied toward Psychology or Sociology major).

M142. Health Care in Transitional Communities. (4) (Same as Public Health M151.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Analysis of social, cultural, economic, and political processes affecting organization and accessibility of health care in transitional and disadvantaged communities. Fieldwork required. Letter grading.

143. Human Health and Society. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Prerequisite: course 1. Exploration of long-run historical trends in relationship between human health and social organization, drawing on historical, anthropological, demographic, and sociological concepts, theories, and data.

145. Sociology of Deviant Behavior. (4) Examination of leading sociological approaches to study of deviation and general survey of major types of deviation in American society.

C146. Sociology of Interpersonal Conflict. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. P/NP or letter grading.

M175. Sociology of Education. (4) (Same as Education M108.) Requisite: course 1. Study of social processes and interaction patterns in educational organizations; relationship of such organizations to aspects of society, social class, and power; social relations within school, college, and university; formal and informal groups, subcultures in educational systems; roles of teachers, students, and administrators. Fieldwork may be required.

M176. Sociology of Mass Communication. (4) (Same as Communication Studies M147.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Studies in relationship between mass communication and social organization. Topics include history and organization of major media institutions, social forces that shape production of mass media news and entertainment, selected studies in media content, and effects of media on society. P/NP or letter grading.

182. Political Sociology. (4) Contributions of sociology to study of politics, including analysis of political aspects of social systems, social context of action, and social bases of power.

183. Comparative and Historical Sociology. (4) Requisite: course 1. Survey of central themes of comparative and historical studies in sociology. Various aspects of development of modern society, including development of nation-state, emergence of capitalism, industrialization, and population growth. Variation in contemporary society, viewed from a variety of theoretical perspectives.

184. Social Change. (4) Study of patterns of social change, resistance to change, and change-producing agencies and processes.

185. American Society. (4) Analysis of major institutions in the U.S. in historical and international perspective, with emphasis on topics such as industrialization, work, the state, politics, community, the family, religion, and American culture. Theories of social change, conflict, and order applied to the case of the U.S.

186. Latin American Societies. (4) Descriptive survey of major Latin American societies, emphasizing their historical backgrounds and their emergent characteristics, with special attention to relations between rural and urban life.

187. Population and Society in the Middle East. (4) Designed for juniors/seniors. Survey of Middle Eastern societies; their historic and environmental bases; contemporary demographic and cultural situation.

188. Comparative East Asian Societies before World War II. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for juniors/seniors. Introductory and comparative survey of traditional societies of East Asia, including China, Japan, Korea, and Vietnam, with focus on dynamic interactions between culture, state, and society in process of change.

189. Japanese Society. (4) Lecture, two and one-half hours; discussion, two hours. Prerequisite: course 1. Analysis of social-structural characteristics and functioning of contemporary Japanese society, with focus on (1) forms of social interaction and social structure, (2) work, family, and the life course, and (3) education and opportunity. Emphasis on structural perspectives, more than cultural perspectives.

191. Society and Politics in Korea. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Examination of society and politics in 20th-century Korea from a comparative/historical perspective; Korean case used to discuss major sociological and theoretical issues in social change and development (political and economic). P/NP or letter grading.

192. State and Society in China. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Thematic overview of post-1949 society and politics in China, with emphasis on long-term evolution of China's state and society from 1949 to the present.

193. Asia-Pacific Social Transformation since World War II. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Introductory and comparative survey of post-World War II development in Asia-Pacific region, with focus on ascent of Japan, newly industrialized capitalist countries, and emergence of socialist states.

M194. Senior Seminar: Language, Interaction, and Culture. (4) (Same as Anthropology M194 and Applied Linguistics and TESL M194.) Seminar, four hours. Limited to seniors in Language, Interaction, and Culture minor. Capstone course. Students carry out and present empirical research project that integrates methodologies and perspectives of at least two of the disciplinary areas (anthropology, applied linguistics, sociology) covered in course. Letter grading.

195A-195Z. Special Topics in Sociology. (4 each) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Limited to juniors/seniors. Study of selected topics of sociological interest. Consult Schedule of Classes for topics and instructors. May be repeated for credit and may be applied as elective units toward Sociology major. P/NP or letter grading.

M196A-M196B. Contemporary Issues in Urban Poverty Research. (4-4) (Same as Anthropology M196A-M196B.) Lecture, three hours. Prerequisites: Honors Collegium 7A, 7B. Two-term research seminar designed to engage students in ongoing faculty research projects focusing on models of urban poverty and underclass behaviors. P/NP or letter grading.

197A-197Z. Undergraduate Seminars. (5 each) Seminar, three hours. Limited to junior/senior Sociology majors. P/NP or letter grading.

M197DC. CAPP Washington Research Seminar. (8) (Formerly numbered M197W.) (Same as Political Science M197DC.) Seminar, three hours; laboratory, 24 hours. Limited to CAPP Program students. Seminar for undergraduates in Center for American Politics and Public Policy's program in Washington, DC. Focus on development and execution of original empirical research based on experiences from Washington, DC-based field placements. Study of variety of qualitative methods (observation, interviewing, etc.), with comparison to quantitative analysis. Examination of features of solid and significant research; intensive writing. Letter grading.

199. Special Studies. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: 3.0 grade-point average in major. Prerequisites: courses 1, M18. Limited to senior Sociology majors and graduate students. Course of independent studies designed for students who (1) desire a more advanced or specialized treatment of an area covered in regular course list and who present that course as a requisite or (2) desire work in an area of sociological analysis currently not covered by an upper division course. Only 8 units are allowed. See undergraduate counselor for course contract.

199HA-199HB-199HC. Special Studies for Honors. (4-4-4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Prerequisite: course 104H. Limited to sociology honors program students. Letter grading. 199HA. Design of research project to serve as student's honors thesis. Research proposal, detailed bibliography, and regular meetings with sponsoring faculty member required. 199HB. Continuation of work initiated in course 199HA. Series of progress reports are prepared in consultation with instructor. 199HC. Completion of written report or honors thesis.

199I. Independent Studies for Internships. (2 to 4) Independent studies course to be supervised jointly by Center for Experiential Education and Service Learning and faculty adviser. Further supervision to be provided by business for which student is doing internship. May not be applied toward major requirements. Normally only 4 units of internship are allowed. P/NP grading.

Graduate Courses

201A-201B-201C. Proseminars: Sociology. (2-2-2) Seminar, two hours every other week. Required of first-year graduate sociology students. Introduction to range of theoretical and research interests represented by department faculty members. S/U grading.

202A-202B. Theory and Research in Sociology. (4-4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Required of first-year graduate sociology students. Examination of interrelations of theory, method, and substance in exemplary sociological works, with analytical and skills-centered orientation. In Progress (course 202A) and S/U or letter (course 202B) grading.

203A. Social Survey Practicum. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour; laboratory, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Training through practice in basic techniques of survey research.

203B. Social Survey Research Seminar. (4) Seminar, one hour; discussion, one hour; laboratory, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Development of individual survey research projects under faculty supervision.

204. Topics in Sociological Theorizing. (4) Seminar, four hours. Examination of selected issues and problems in classical or contemporary sociological theory. S/U or letter grading.

205. Family and Social Change. (4) Lecture, three hours. Examination of sources of change in family and household organization, with major focus on relationships among economic institutions, family structure, and content of family life. Consideration of concepts, theories, and data about kinship. S/U or letter grading.

208A-208B. Social Network Methods. (4-4) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Prerequisites: courses 209A and 209B, or 210A and 210B. Techniques for measuring characteristics of networks and positions in networks. Centrality of positions, centralization and density of networks, structural equivalence, cliques. Readings of exemplars of network research. Computer programs. In Progress and letter grading.

209A-209B. Data Analysis for Social Scientists. (4-4) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Introduction to applied statistics and data collection for graduate social sciences students. In Progress grading.

209C. Mathematics for Social Statistics. (4) Lecture, three hours; computer exercises. Designed for graduate students. Discussion of elementary mathematical techniques needed for more advanced statistics courses in various social sciences, psychology, and education. Calculus of sets, sets of numbers, sequences of numbers, notion of a function, polynomials, differentiation, elementary matrices, and vectors.

210A-210B. Intermediate Statistical Methods I, II. (4-4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, two hours. Prerequisite: course M18. Intermediate statistical methods using computers: probability theory, sampling distributions, hypothesis testing, interval estimation, multiple regression and correlation, experimental design, analysis of variance and covariance, contingency tables, sampling theory. S/U or letter grading.

210C. Intermediate Statistical Methods III. (4) Lecture, four hours. Prerequisite: course 210B. Survey of advanced statistical methods used in social research, with focus on problems for which classical linear regression model is inappropriate, including categorical data, structural equations, longitudinal data, incomplete and erroneous data, and complex samples. S/U or letter grading.

211A-211B. Comparative and Historical Methods. (4-4) In Progress grading. 211A. Strategies of Research and Conceptualization. Topics include relationship of theory and fact to social sciences, logic of comparative and historical analysis, and substantive paradigms of comparative and historical analysis. Reading involves methodological examination of basic works in representative problem areas. 211B. Research Techniques. Prerequisite: course 211A. Topics include problem of evidence, quantitative and qualitative data. Techniques of data analysis, including use of manuscript census, content analysis, collective biography, and secondary analysis.

212A-212B. Survey Data Analysis. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Prerequisites: courses 210A, 210B. Analysis and interpretation of primarily nonexperimental quantitative data, focusing on sample survey and census data. Extensive practice at utilizing statistical methods encountered in previous courses, culminating in term paper in style of American Sociological Review or similar journal article. Topics include simple tabular analysis, log-linear analysis, ordinary least squares regression, robust regression, binomial and multinomial logistic regression, and scale construction. Logic of analysis and problems of statistical inference, including diagnostic procedures and methods for handling complex sample survey designs. In Progress and letter grading.

212C. Study Design and Other Issues in Quantitative Data Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate and undergraduate students who have had some exposure to statistics and quantitative methods. Introduction to study design, including experimental, longitudinal, cohort, time-series designs, contextual, and other designs. Discussion of suitability of various design classes for specific analytic goals, as well as their comparative strengths and weaknesses. S/U or letter grading.

M213A. Introduction to Demographic Methods. (4) (Same as Biostatistics M208 and Community Health Sciences M208.) Lecture, four hours. Preparation: one introductory statistics course. Introduction to methods of demographic analysis. Topics include demographic rates, standardization, decomposition of differences, life tables, survival analysis, cohort analysis, birth interval analysis, models of population growth, stable populations, population projection, and demographic data sources. Letter grading.

M213B. Applied Event History Analysis. (4) (Formerly numbered M286.) (Same as Statistics M213.) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: exposure to binary response models. Prerequisites: courses 210A, 210B. Introduction to regression-like analyses in which outcome is "time to event." Topics include logit models for discrete-time event history models; piecewise exponential hazards models; proportional hazards; non-proportional hazards; parametric survival models; heterogeneity; multilevel survival models. S/U or letter grading.

215A-215B. Experimental Sociology. (4-4) Requisite: course 210A. Basic fundamentals of experimental method, particularly as it is used in social psychology. In Progress grading.

216A-216B. Survey Research Design. (4-4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisite: course 210A. History of the survey method; facet metatheory and concept formation; questionnaire and item design; scales, indices typologies; data collection — planning and management; network, snowball, and experience sampling; multistage probability sampling, stratification and clustering. Students participate in survey research project. Letter grading.

217A. Analyzing Ethnographies. (4) Seminar, three hours. Analysis of ethnographic monographs. S/U or letter grading.

217B-217C. Ethnographic Fieldwork. (4-4) Seminar, three hours. Recommended requisite: course 217A. Theories and techniques of ethnographic fieldwork. Kinds of problems amenable to ethnographic approaches, methods, and techniques for doing fieldwork, and ethical problems involved in such research. In Progress grading.

218A-218B. Ethnomethodological Methods. (4-4) Examination of techniques used in ethnomethodological research, practice in critical evaluation of research, and directed experience in conduct of an extended investigation employing ethnomethodological procedures. In Progress grading.

220. Self and Society. (4) Lecture, three hours. Examination of social and cultural processes shaping definition and experience of the self, embodied interactional practices through which the self is constructed in everyday and institutional contexts, formation and transformation of self during life course, and construction of collective identity. Letter grading.

221. Social Ecology. (4) Requisites: courses M18, 116. Designed for graduate students. Examination of various approaches to both microecology and macroecology, including classical and neoclassical ecology, social area analysis, sociocultural ecology, city-size distributions, effects of population density on animals and humans, proxemics, territoriality, and effects of physical environment on humans.

222. Foundations of Ethnomethodological, Phenomenological, and Analytic Sociologies. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Basic issues, methods, and topics of ethnomethodological, phenomenological, conversation-analytic, and related varieties of inquiry. Central themes such as the world of everyday life, problem of rationality, rules/norms and tacit knowledge, problem of social order, speaking and discourse, constitutive practices, and production of ordinary interaction in first part; guest presentations by affiliated faculty in second part.

223. Phenomenological and Interactionist Perspectives on Selected Topics. (4) Lecture, three hours. Comparison of phenomenological and symbolic and perspectives by examining a particular body of live or currently unresolved substantive issues. Topics vary; attention on development of phenomenological and interactionist thought on topic of concern, with special concern for ambiguities and divergences both within and between the two approaches. When relevant, attention to logical and historical relations of phenomenology and interactionism of pragmatist, existentialist, and ordinary language philosophies.

224A. Major theoretical contributions to the field.
224B. Current work being done in department in several subfields.

225A-225B. Demographic Perspectives on Relationship of Family and Economic Systems. (4-4) Requisites: courses 210A, 210B. Examination of interrelationship of family and economic systems in societies at different levels of economic development, focusing particularly on the U.S. experience. Central to course: (1) analysis of how demographic factors affect economic and family systems; (2) how these systems, and changes in them, affect demographic variables; and (3) how this two-way process influences relationship of family and economic systems over time. 225A. Lectures and readings. 225B. Individual research projects involving term paper and classroom reports of results.

226A-226B. Introduction to Theory and Major Empirical Research in Social Demography. (4-4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 210A. Survey and critical examination of population theories and related major empirical research. Emphasis on interrelation of cultural, socioeconomic, and demographic factors. Introduction to elementary demographic methods utilizing microcomputers.

227. Sociology of Knowledge. (4) Designed for graduate students. Survey of theories and research concerning social determinants of systems of knowledge and role of intellectual and artistic elites in Western societies.

228A-228B. Critical Issues in Macrosociology. (4-4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for graduate students. Conceptual introduction to the area of macrosociology in which exemplary works are read, studied for substance and methods, and critiqued in seminar and in written papers. Usually team taught by faculty of varying orientations. In Progress grading.

C229A. Sociology of Interpersonal Conflict. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, two hours. Origins, development, and outcomes of interpersonal conflicts and troubles that arise in close relationships, households, workplaces, and public places in contemporary societies. Concurrently scheduled with course C146. Letter grading.

C229B. People Processing Institutions. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, two hours. Course C229A is not requisite to C229B. Theory and research analyzing operation and decision-making processes of a variety of people processing institutions, including police, courts, schools, psychiatry, human service agencies, and medicine. Concurrently scheduled with course C149. Letter grading.

230. Nations and Nationalism. (4) Lecture, three hours. Preparation for independent work in the area of nations and nationalism through close reading of key theoretical and empirical works in this or related areas. S/U or letter grading.

231. Race and Ethnicity: International Perspectives. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Role of race and ethnicity in political, economic, and social lives of nations other than the U.S., with emphasis on theoretical and methodological issues in comparative research.

232. Class, Politics, and Society. (4) Lecture, four hours. Nature of class structure and how it affects relation of class structure to politics and political power. Issue of salience of class versus other identities such as gender, age, race, and nationalism. Examination of contemporary "globalization" tendencies of capitalism. Letter grading.

233. Foundations of Political Sociology. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Survey of the field of political sociology, oriented around critical themes in major theoretical traditions and contemporary exemplars. Special attention to competing perspectives on power, theory of the state, and relationship of class structure to politics.

234. Sociology of Community Organization. (4) Designed for graduate students. Survey of recent and classical research and literature dealing with predominantly political institutions, problem of order, and organization of communal life in the village and metropolis.

236A-236B-236C. International Migration. (4-4-4) Lecture, three hours. S/U or letter grading:

236A. (4) (Formerly numbered 236.) Lecture, three hours. Comprehensive overview of key current theoretical debates in study of international migration, with focus on exploration of possibilities of comparative (historical and cross-national) research program in the field, linking North American, European, and other global experiences of immigration. S/U or letter grading.

236B. (4) Lecture, three hours. Further exploration of key current theoretical debates in study of international migration, with emphasis on exploring both theoretical debates of the field and empirical data and case studies on which those debates hinge, to encourage students to undertake research in the field. S/U or letter grading.

236C. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for students beginning or undertaking original research in field of international migration. Outside lectures, oral presentations of student projects, circulation of completed or draft student papers. S/U or letter grading.

237. Seminar: Theory and Research in Comparative Social Analysis. (2) Designed for graduate students. Emphasis on one issue of particular importance for comparative analysis of capitalism and socialism, North America and Western Europe, developed capitalist and socialist countries and the Third World, and implications for theory construction and social research. S/U grading.

238. Feminist Theory. (4) Designed for graduate students. Analysis of current American feminist theory relevant to sociologists. Exploration of critiques of second wave feminism by working class feminists and/or feminists of color, feminist scholars from other countries, and recent "antifeminist" feminists. Discussion of directions for future feminist sociology.

239A-239B. Quantitative Research on Social Stratification and Social Mobility. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 210A, 210B. Introduction to English language research literature on quantitative social stratification and social mobility in the U.S. and abroad. In Progress grading.

240. Mathematics of Population. (4) Preparation: prior knowledge of matrices, calculus, and probability theory. Discrete and continuous deterministic and probabilistic models of growth and composition of a one-sexed population classified by age, plus selected topics on more complicated population models.

241. Theories of Gender in Society. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, two hours. Gender stratification in society and sociology; extent of gender diversity in human societies past and present; why gender is absent in classical macrosociology; can masculinist paradigms make space for gender or does a feminist-informed sociology necessitate a fresh approach?

M242. Analysis of Data with Qualitative and Limited Dependent Variables. (4) (Same as Statistics M211.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 210A and 210B, or Statistics 100A, 100B, and 100C. Models for binary, polytomous, and ordered outcomes; censored and truncated dependent variables; sample selection bias and qualitative response models; count outcomes; multilevel models; log-linear models. S/U or letter grading.

C243. Introduction to Mathematical Sociology. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour; laboratory, two hours. Requisites: courses 210A, 210B. Mathematical treatment of several sociological phenomena, such as occupational mobility, population growth, organizational structure, and friendship patterns, each covered in some detail, including initial development and subsequent evaluation and modification (emphasizing both deductive and computational aspects of mathematics). Concurrently scheduled with course C112. Graduate students have additional readings, meet as a group one additional hour each week, and learn to use mathematical software such as MATHEMATICA. Letter grading.

C244A-C244B. Conversational Structures I, II. (4-4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. May be concurrently scheduled with courses CM124A-CM124B. Graduate students have additional assignments and/or meet as a group one additional hour each week. S/U or letter grading. C244A. Introduction to some structures which are employed in organization of conversational interaction, such as turn-taking organization, organization of repair, and some basic sequence structures with limited expansions. C244B. Requisite: course C244A. Consideration of some more expanded sequence structures, story structures, topical sequences, and overall structural organization of single conversations.

245. Cultural Sociology: Classical and Contemporary Approaches. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, two hours. Exploration of classical approaches to cultural dimension of social life — Weberian, Durkheimian, Parsonian, and critical — and living traditions they have spawned. Examination of contemporary efforts at constructing a new cultural sociology. Theoretical focus, with consideration of case studies.

246. Cultural Studies: Hermeneutic, Semiotic, and Poststructural Traditions. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, two hours. Examination of cultural analysis as it has evolved outside the discipline of sociology, on premise that these extra-sociological approaches provide critical resources in advancing the field of cultural sociology today. Theoretical and comparative emphasis, with consideration of case studies.

247. Sociology of Emotions. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for graduate students. Sociological theories of emotional expression; experiential approaches to emotions: motivational, cognitive, psychophysiological, and behavioral; repression, social oppression, and the emotions; creativity and expressed affect; thought, sensations, and the emotions; specific emotions; cultural differences in emotional expression; measurement of emotions.

248. Selected Topics in Culture and Society. (4) Seminar, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Seminar on selected topics on culture and society. Consult Schedule of Classes for topics and instructors. May be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

M249A. Health Professions. (4) (Same as Community Health Sciences M274.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: Community Health Sciences 210. Sociological examination of concepts "health" and "illness" and role of various health professionals, especially physicians. Attention to meaning of professionalization and professional/client relationships within a range of organizational settings. S/U or letter grading.

M249B. Health and Illness Behavior. (4) (Same as Community Health Sciences M275.) Lecture, four hours. Requisites: Community Health Sciences 210, Epidemiology 100. Sociocultural factors affecting differential patterns of health behavior, illness behavior, and sick-role behavior. S/U or letter grading.

250. Methodological Problems. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

251. Topics in the Problem of Social Order. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

252. Selected Topics in Sociology of Gender. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Seminar on selected topics in sociology of gender. May be repeated for credit.

253. Quantitative Methods in Sociology. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

254. Human Capital, Social Capital, and Cultural Capital. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Intellectual history of these concepts, points of difference and similarity among the concepts, current exemplars of research that utilize these concepts, and critical reflection on research traditions.

255. Cross-Cultural Perspectives on Gender. (4) Discussion, three hours. How does gender manifest itself in lives of different groups of women in the U.S. and abroad? Are universal analytical categories or united feminist movements possible or is gender too different cross-culturally? S/U or letter grading.

256. Demography. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

257. Demography of Marriage Formation and Dissolution. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisite: course 210A. Extensive and intensive critical examination of major approaches to analysis of marriage formation and dissolution, with focus primarily on demographic literature.

C258. Talk and Social Institutions. (4) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour. Practices of communication and social interaction in a number of major institutional sites in contemporary society. Setting varies but may include emergency services, police and courts, medicine, news interviews, and political oratory. Concurrently scheduled with course CM125. S/U or letter grading.

259. Social Structure and Economic Change: Historical and Comparative Perspectives. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

260. Economy and Society. Discussion, two hours. (4) Designed for graduate students. Review and critique of major analytical traditions in economy and society.

261. Ethnic Minorities. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

M262. Selected Problems in Urban Sociology. (4) (Same as Afro-American Studies M200C.) Seminar.

M263. Social Demography of Los Angeles. (4) (Formerly numbered 263.) (Same as Community Health Sciences M263.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Use of city of Los Angeles to examine major social and demographic factors that characterize cities in the U.S. Examination of role of these factors in affecting health outcomes. Letter grading.

264. Personal Identity in Historical Perspective. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Examination of distinctive features of personal identity in contemporary society through use of historical materials on various aspects of private life. Topics include home, food, clothing and appearance, personal odor, and cleanliness in everyday life.

265. Problems in Organization Theory. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

266. Selected Problems in Analysis of Conversation. (4) Requisites: courses C244A, C244B. Variable topics/formats course. Consult instructor for topics and formats to be offered in a specific term. May be repeated for credit with topic change. S/U or letter grading.

267. Selected Problems in Communication. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

268. Selected Problems in Psychoanalytic Sociology. (4) Discussion, three hours. Recommended preparation: at least one year of methods courses. Selected problems in interpretation of sociology and psychoanalysis, which may be substantive (group development, socialization, culture, deviance, collective behavior) or methodological; latter focuses on clinical fieldwork and experimental use of psychoanalytic and sociological techniques.

269. Collective Behavior and Social Movements. (4) Lecture, three hours. Characteristics of crowds, mobs, publics, social movements, and revolutions; their relation to social unrest and their role in developing and changing social organization. Impact of collective behavior and social movements on social and political changes. S/U or letter grading.

270. Selected Problems in Socialization. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

271. Ethnomethodology. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

272. Topics in Political Sociology. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

273. Attitudes and Social Structure. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

274. Social Change and Development in Korea. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisite: course 191. In-depth understanding of social change and development in 20th-century Korea. Discussion, in comparative/historical perspective, of major theoretical and empirical issues related to social, political, and economic Korean transformation.

M275. Contemporary Issues of the American Indian. (4) (Same as American Indian Studies M200C and Anthropology M269.) Introduction to most important issues facing American Indians as individuals, communities, tribes, and organizations in the contemporary world, building on historical background presented in American Indian Studies M200A and cultural and expressive experience of American Indians presented in American Indian Studies M200B.

276. Selected Topics in Sociology of East Asia. (4) Designed for graduate students. Selected problems in China, or in China and Japan comparatively. Possible topics include (1) China's Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution, (2) internal contradictions in Chinese society: male/female relations, city and countryside, minority nationalities, class struggle under socialism, etc., (3) China and Japan: two models of development.

277. Japanese Society: Selected Topics. (4) Lecture, two and one-half hours. Designed for graduate students. Social structural characteristics and functioning of contemporary Japanese society, with focus on comparison and evaluations of functional (or rational) and cultural explanations of selected social phenomena. Topics include forms of social interaction, work organization, family, education, and equality.

278. Sociology of Latin America. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Selected topics in sociological study of Latin America. Possible topics include social movements, race and ethnicity, stratification, and social development.

279. Seminar: Applied Social Research. (4) Seminar, two hours; discussion, one hour. Opportunities for applied research, distinctive features of applied work, and procedures commonly employed in various areas of research. Examination of representative work in specific areas of applied research.

280. Seminar: Evaluation Research. (4) Designed for graduate students. Technical and political aspects of implementing evaluation research studies. Role of evaluation research in social policy development, as well as procedures for undertaking process and impact evaluations. S/U or letter grading.

281. Selected Problems in Mathematical Sociology. (4) Exploration of some mathematical models of sociological processes. Possible topics include models of small groups, social mobility, kinship relations, organizations, social interaction.

282. Organizations and the Professions. (4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

283. Applied Sociology. (4) Discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Examination of roots and intellectual traditions underlying contemporary interest and work in applied sociology. Discussion of range of methodological perspectives used in applied research, utility of social research in various substantive domains and conflicts and controversies related to ideological activities, competence and performance requirements, and identification with and participation in the discipline.

284. Topics in Mental Health and Illness. (4) Requisite: course 148. Designed for graduate students.

285A-285Z. Special Topics in Sociology. (4 each) Seminar, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Seminars on selected current topics of sociological interest. Consult Schedule of Classes for topics and instructors. May be repeated for credit.

287. Topics in Chinese Society. (4) Seminar, three hours. Preparation: at least two upper division courses on China in any social sciences discipline. Introduction to current research questions in Chinese sociology, as well as major themes in study of Chinese society, both historical and contemporary, including demographic, economic, political, and social change before and after 1949. S/U or letter grading.

288A-288B-288C. Mental Health Services for Persons with AIDS. (4-4-4) Designed for graduate students. Analysis of current research on mental health service systems for persons with AIDS. S/U grading.

289A-289B. Practicum in Conversation Analysis. (2-4) Requisites: courses C244A, C244B. S/U grading. 289A. Data Analysis. Laboratory, two hours. Practice in analysis of conversational data. 289B. Developing Work in Progress. Seminar, three hours. Opportunity to advance research projects in progress and to develop skills of constructive criticism in discussing work of others.

291. Moral Solidarity in Communities. (4) Comparative analysis of social solidarity and collapse of social solidarity in voluntary and traditional communities. Contrasts more and less solidarity types, with special reference to utopian communities and developmental processes.

292A-292B-292C. Research Development. (4-4-4) Lecture, four hours. S/U or letter grading.

295. Working Group in Sociology. (1 to 4) Discussion, two hours. Variable topics, including sociology of gender; ethnography; social networks; race, ethnicity, immigration; and social demography and stratification. Advanced study and analysis of current topics in specialized areas of sociology. Discussion of current research and literature in research specialty of faculty member teaching course. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

M296A-M296B. Social Theory and Comparative History. (4-4) (Same as History M203A-M203B and Political Science M291A-M291B.) Colloquium, three and one-half hours every other week. Introduction to historically rooted social theory and theoretically sensitive history, following the program of the Center for Social Theory and Comparative History. Each course may be taken independently for credit.

M296C. Theories in Cultural History. (4) (Same as History M203C.) Discussion, three hours. Introduction to social, linguistic, semiotic, or other new interpretive theories and practices developed in other fields and applied to historical material. Letter grading.

297B. Urban and Suburban Sociology. (4) Lecture, three hours. History and present condition of cities and suburbs in America. Today's urban/suburban neighborhoods contrasted with premodern cities. Examination of process of suburbanization as it began in the early 19th century and as it still continues; house and architectural styles and changing patterns of family and social life associated with them; patterns of racial, ethnic, income, and social class distribution in city and suburb; origin and nature of today's urban ghettos; politics of cities and suburbs. Focus on urban/suburban megalopolises associated with New York City, Los Angeles, Chicago, and Boston. GIS mapping. Letter grading.

298A-298B-298C. Workshops in Culture and Society. (2-2-2) Discussion, 90 minutes every other week. Interdisciplinary workshops for graduate students and faculty pursuing theory and research in topics related to interplay of culture and society, whether social, literary, or philosophical in nature. In Progress and S/U or letter grading.

299A-299B-299C. Seminars: Latin American Sociology. (2-2-2) Seminar, one hour; discussion, one hour. Regular forum for presentation, reading, and discussion of research on sociology of Latin America, including presentations by invited lecturers in Mellon Seminar in Latin American Sociology series. S/U grading.

375. Teaching Apprentice Practicum. (1 to 4) Seminar, to be arranged. Preparation: apprentice personnel employment as a teaching assistant, associate, or fellow. Teaching apprenticeship under active guidance and supervision of a regular faculty member responsible for curriculum and instruction at the University. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

M402. Practices of Evaluation in Health Services: Theory and Methodology. (4) (Same as Health Services M422.) Lecture, four hours. Requisites: Health Services 200A, 200B. Introduction to evaluation of health services programs and policies. Exposure to basic theoretical concepts and specific evaluation methodologies and designs. Letter grading.

Scope and Objectives

The Southeast Asian region includes the present-day countries of Burma, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philippines, Singapore, Brunei, and East Timor. This is a massively heterogeneous grouping of societies, ethnicities, languages, cultures, histories, and environments. Southeast Asia in its present geographical configuration has been studied as a region since the 1940s, but it has been recognized as an influential crossroads of humanity for considerably longer. The cultural richness of Southeast Asia and the value of its study present themselves in many guises. For example, it is not uncommon for scholars to interpret Southeast Asia as a region marked by strong traditions in religion, music, the arts, and social relations. And yet, from early times to the present, Southeast Asia has also been at least as noteworthy for its peoples' capacities for change, international connection, and creative adaptation.

The program approaches Southeast Asia as a region of deep local particularities and transregional engagements. In this sense, in addition to the prominence of the region in many recent international issues (democratization, the Cold War, decolonization, global capital flows, natural resource and environmental regulation, ethnic tensions, etc.), Southeast Asia is also a prominent site for reflection on enduring questions about culture and human diversity. Southeast Asia is taught as a region, with emphasis on the particular languages, cultures, politics, and topographies of individual nations, ethnic groups, subnational regions, and associations. Yet, it is nearly impossible to teach about any part of Southeast Asia without at least occasionally engaging a range of transregional connections that date back to ancient times. Historically, the peoples of Southeast Asia have been engaged with each other as well as with India and China, the Middle East, Europe, and the Americas and with global contexts of economics, politics, migrations, and communications. When approached from the point of view that holds Southeast Asia to be a locus of shifting transactions and human connections (rather than a reified and timeless region of common culture), the study of the region speaks powerfully to critical issues across many disciplines. Thus construed, Southeast Asian studies addresses major contemporary concerns in the humanities, social sciences, arts, business, the professions, government policy, and international affairs.

The Southeast Asian Studies Program offers a Bachelor of Arts degree and an undergraduate minor.

Southeast Asian Studies B.A.

The major is designed for students who are deeply interested in the study of Southeast Asian languages, cultures, and societies. It requires the intermediate-level study of one Southeast Asian language, three lower division core courses on Southeast Asia as a region, and at least 14 upper division courses, including a capstone senior seminar. Majors are expected, whenever possible, to study for at least one term at a university in Southeast Asia.

Admission

To enter the major, students must (1) be in good academic standing (minimum 2.0 grade-point average), (2) have completed 45 units and at least one lower division core course in Southeast Asian studies, and (3) file a petition with the student affairs counselor in 10375 Bunche Hall. All interested students should meet with the counselor to discuss the program requirements.

Preparation for the Major

Required: History 9E, Southeast Asian Studies 1, 99; completion of six terms of either Vietnamese, Thai, Filipino/Tagalog, or Indonesian language courses (South and Southeast Languages and Cultures 50A through 51C, or 60A through 61C, or 70A through 71C, or 80A through 81C) or demonstrated proficiency as determined by a placement examination. Proficiency in other Southeast Asian languages may be accepted by petition, pending completion of a placement examination or approval of an alternative course of language study.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Southeast Asian Studies majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: either one course on Southeast Asia or one year of study of a Southeast Asian language (or demonstrated equivalent ability).

The Major

Required: At least 14 upper division courses (56 units) must be completed, including 10 courses that must have substantial Southeast Asian content, as follows:

Three humanities and arts courses must be selected from Art History 114F, Ethnomusicology C159, 191B, 191H, 191Z, South and Southeast Asian Languages and Cultures M130, 162A, 162B, 162C, 170A, 170B, 170C, 182A, 182B, 182C, Theater 102B, 102E, World Arts and Cultures 112B, 120, 133.

Three social sciences and policy courses must be selected from Anthropology 135B, 137, 197L, Asian American Studies 130A, 130B, M153, History M153, 190A through 190E, Political Science C197D.

Variable or selected topics courses (e.g., Asian American Studies 197, Ethnomusicology 197, History 197) fulfill major requirements only when the content focuses substantially on Southeast Asia or a subregion of it.

All majors must also successfully complete Southeast Asian Studies 196.

Three elective courses must be selected from the courses listed above and from those offered by the program. Other courses with substantial Southeast Asian content may be applied to the major pending approval of a petition filed with the student affairs counselor.

Four additional upper division courses on topics outside Southeast Asia must be taken to satisfy the breadth and methods requirement. The courses must be selected in consultation with and approved by the student affairs counselor. The requirement can be fulfilled either by (1) completing at least 16 units on subjects outside Southeast Asia from any one department whose methodology or discipline can be applied to the study of Southeast Asia (e.g., anthropology, comparative literature, ethnomusicology, history, public health); students may petition to include courses that contribute to strength in a common methodology (e.g., statistics courses offered in different departments or literature and literary history courses offered in different departments) or (2) completing at least 16 units on a region or topic of study outside Southeast Asia but related to it by theme, historical connection, or comparison; for example, students might study China or South Asia, religious studies or development studies, or a destination of migrants from Southeast Asia or a former colonial power in Southeast Asia (France, the U.S., Japan). All four courses must concentrate on the same theme, country, culture, or region.

Up to 20 units taken at an Education Abroad Program in Southeast Asia may be applied toward the major.

At least 20 upper division units must be in departments that offer a departmental major in the College of Letters and Science. All courses for the major must be successfully completed with a grade of C (2.0) or better. No more than two independent studies courses (199s) may be applied toward the degree.

Study in Southeast Asia

Students are expected, whenever possible, to study in Southeast Asia for at least one term during their junior or senior year. The program considers study in Southeast Asia an important cultural experience and an opportunity to advance language proficiency, as well as a way to expand the range of formal classroom education.

The University of California operates Education Abroad Programs (EAPs) in several Southeast Asian countries. See <http://www.international.ucla.edu/eap/> for the current list. Majors may enroll in any of the UC-sponsored EAPs in Southeast Asia or they may petition to attend a university in Southeast Asia by making arrangements directly or by enrolling through another American university's study abroad program. Majors may be eligible to apply for financial assistance, awarded on a competitive basis, to help support at least one term of study abroad.

Students majoring or minoring in Southeast Asian Studies who attend an EAP are eligible to earn course credit (4 units) toward the upper division requirements by successfully completing Southeast Asian Studies 190 for a letter grade after they return to UCLA. The principal assignment in course 190 is to write a paper based on field experience or research collected while in Southeast Asia or to produce a creative work (fiction, memoir, art, performance) of equivalent note.

Honors Program

The honors program is designed for majors who wish to carry out a year-long independent research project that culminates in a senior honors thesis. To enter and graduate from the honors program, students must have a 3.5 grade-point average in the major and a 3.0 overall GPA. Students must also obtain agreement from a faculty member to supervise their honors thesis. Application should normally be made during the junior year, after students have completed more than 90 units of coursework. Consult the student affairs counselor for further details about the application, thesis requirements, and rules regarding the selection of a faculty thesis supervisor.

Students should begin to plan their thesis in the final term of their junior year. Formal research should begin in the first term of the senior year, if not earlier, under the direction of the faculty thesis supervisor. Students also enroll in Southeast Asian Studies 199HA, 199HB, and 199HC throughout their senior year. Only 8 units of 199H courses may be applied toward the upper division requirements of the major. Students are awarded highest honors, honors, or no honors based on an evaluation of the thesis by the faculty thesis supervisor and the program honors committee.

Southeast Asian Studies Minor

The Southeast Asian Studies minor is designed for students who wish to augment their major with concerted study of language, culture, and society in Southeast Asia. The minor includes the introductory study of one Southeast Asian language, two lower division core courses on Southeast Asia as a region, and five upper division courses that may focus on one or more Southeast Asian cultures or societies.

To enter the minor, students must (1) be in good academic standing (minimum 2.0 grade-point average), (2) have completed 45 units and at least one lower division core course in Southeast Asian studies, and (3) file a petition with the student affairs counselor in 10375 Bunche Hall.

Required Lower Division Courses (13 units): History 9E, Southeast Asian Studies 1, and completion of the third term of either Vietnamese, Thai, Filipino/Tagalog, or Indonesian language courses (South and Southeast Languages and Cultures 50C or 60C or 70C or 80C) or demonstrated proficiency as determined by a placement examination. Proficiency in other Southeast Asian languages may be accepted by petition, pending completion of a placement examination or approval of an alternative course of language study.

Required Upper Division Courses (20 units): Five courses, with (1) at least two humanities and arts courses selected from Art History 114F, Ethnomusicology C159, 191B, 191H, 191Z, South and Southeast Asian Languages and Cultures M130, 162A, 162B, 162C, 170A, 170B, 170C, 182A, 182B, 182C, Theater 102B, 102E, World Arts and Cultures 112B, 120, 133 and (2) at least two social sciences and policy courses selected from Anthropology 135B, 137, 197L, Asian American Studies 130A, 130B, M153, History M153, 190A through 190E, Political Science C197D.

Variable or selected topics courses (e.g., Asian American Studies 197, Ethnomusicology 197, History 197) fulfill minor requirements only when the content focuses substantially on Southeast Asia or a subregion of it. Other courses with substantial Southeast Asian content may be applied pending approval of a petition filed with the student affairs counselor. Up to 12 units taken at an Education Abroad Program in Southeast Asia may be applied toward the minor.

Independent studies courses (199s) may not be applied toward the minor. No more than two upper division courses may be applied toward both the students' majors and this minor. All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Southeast Asian Studies

Lower Division Courses

1. Introduction to Southeast Asian Studies. (5) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour (when scheduled). Introductory survey of diverse and dynamic societies of contemporary Southeast Asia, with strong focus on interdisciplinary themes in humanities and cultural studies. P/NP or letter grading.

99. Sophomore Seminar: Introduction to Interdisciplinary Study of Southeast Asia. (5) Seminar, three hours. Limited to majors. Introduction to methods of interdisciplinary and comparative study, providing students with opportunity to develop competence in using those approaches through investigation of critical issues in Southeast Asian studies. Letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

190. Seminar: Research and Fieldwork in Southeast Asia. (4) Seminar, three hours. Limited to majors. Designed to enable students returning from study abroad to analyze, write up, and/or perform knowledge derived from their experience in Southeast Asia. P/NP or letter grading.

196. Senior Seminar: Southeast Asian Studies. (4) Seminar, three hours. Limited to senior majors. Examination of classic literature and/or state of the field in Southeast Asian studies. Capstone course for majors who complete it by writing substantial literature review or paper based on original research. Letter grading.

199. Directed Study. (4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for juniors/seniors. Directed research program arranged in consultation with faculty members. P/NP or letter grading.

199HA-199HB-199HC. Directed Study: Honors Thesis. (4-4-4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Limited to senior honors program students. Independent research and writing of honors thesis under faculty supervision. Must be taken each term during senior year. In Progress and letter grading.

Scope and Objectives

The Department of Spanish and Portuguese is dedicated to the study and teaching of the languages, literatures, and cultures of the Hispanic heritage in all areas of the world, particularly on the continents of Europe and America. It maintains a strong commitment to the value of original research and professional instruction at all levels of its activities.

Whether studying for the B.A., M.A., or Ph.D. degree, students are given careful guidance in the choice of courses and in the preparation of a study program. The richness of Hispanic culture is amply represented in the extensive range of courses in language, linguistics, and literature. Although the literatures of Spain, Portugal, Brazil, and Spanish America predominate, courses are also offered in Chicano literature. The breadth of courses offered by the department allows undergraduate students to pursue many possible interests and enables graduate students to concentrate in depth in several areas of specialization.

The department's courses are primarily designed to serve the four B.A. programs: B.A. in Spanish, B.A. in Spanish and Linguistics, B.A. in Portuguese, and B.A. in Spanish and Portuguese, as well as to prepare students for its three graduate programs: M.A. in Spanish, M.A. in Portuguese, and Ph.D. in Hispanic Languages and Literatures. The courses are also functionally supportive of such interdepartmental programs as the California State Single Subject Credential in Spanish, B.A. and M.A. programs in Latin American Studies, and M.A. and Ph.D. programs in Comparative Literature and Romance Linguistics and Literature.

Undergraduate Courses

Spanish 1 through 3 use Garner, Rusch, and Domínguez' Claro que sí. The method is induc-tive. Selected examples are given to enable students to inductively grasp the rules and develop their own grammar. This enables students to use language effectively and creatively. The courses are taught entirely in Spanish — students simultaneously learn to understand, speak, read, and write Spanish.

Students with one or more years of high school Spanish who plan to enroll in Spanish 1 through 25 must take the departmental placement examination. Consult the Schedule of Classes or the department office for test dates and location.

No credit is allowed for completing a less advanced course after successful completion of a more advanced course in Spanish and Portuguese grammar and/or composition.

Spanish B.A.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Spanish 25 or 27 or equivalent, and M42 and M44 or equivalent as determined by the undergraduate adviser. The courses must be passed with an average grade of C or better prior to beginning upper division work in the major.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Spanish majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: two years of Spanish, one Spanish civilization course, and one Spanish American civilization course.

The Major

Required: (1) Seven core courses, including Spanish 100A or 100B, 105 or 107 (possible exemption granted by passing departmental writing proficiency examination), 119A or 119B, 120A, 120B, 120C, and 127 and (2) six upper division Spanish elective courses in literature, culture, or linguistics.

Spanish and Linguistics B.A.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Spanish 25 or 27 or equivalent as determined by the placement test; course M35 or Linguistics 20; course M42 or M44 or equivalent as determined by the undergraduate adviser; and three terms of study in one language other than Spanish and English, which may be taken concurrently with the major. The courses must be passed with an average grade of C or better.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Spanish and Linguistics majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: two years of Spanish, one introduction to linguistics course, one Spanish civilization course or one Spanish American civilization course, and one year of a language other than Spanish or English.

The Major

Required: (1) Spanish 100A, 100B, 105, Linguistics 103, 120A, 120B, (2) one course from Linguistics 160 or 165A or 165B, and (3) three upper division Spanish electives, two of which must be in Spanish linguistics.

Spanish and Portuguese B.A.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Spanish 25, Portuguese 3 or 102B, M42 or M44 or equivalent, 46 or equivalent.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Spanish and Portuguese majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: two years of Spanish, one year of Portuguese, one Spanish civilization course or one Spanish American civilization course, and one Brazilian culture course.

The Major

Required: (1) Four upper division courses in language and linguistics: Portuguese 100A, 100B, 105, Spanish 105; (2) four upper division courses in literature selected as follows: two courses from Spanish 119A, 119B or from 120A, 120B, 120C and two courses from Portuguese 120A, 120B or from 130A, 130B; (3) six upper division electives, three of which must be in Spanish and three in Portuguese (numbered 124 and above). Only upper division courses taught in the target language may be applied toward the major.

Portuguese B.A.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Portuguese 3, M35, M42 or M44, 46, or equivalent.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Portuguese majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: one year of Portuguese, one nature of language course, one Portuguese civilization course or one Brazilian civilization course, and one Brazilian culture course.

The Major

Portuguese Language and Literature Concentration

Required: Thirteen upper division courses, including Portuguese 100A, 100B, 105, either 120A and 120B, or 130A and 130B, and eight elective courses in Portuguese, or six electives in Portuguese plus two courses from areas that complement the program approved by the undergraduate adviser in Portuguese.

Portuguese and Linguistics Concentration

Required: Completion of six terms of study in one other foreign language or three terms in each of two other foreign languages, in addition to the preparation for the major courses. Spanish is recommended.

The concentration consists of 13 upper division courses, including Portuguese 100A, 100B, 105, M118A, M118B, Linguistics 100, 103, 110, 120A, 120B, and three electives, two of which must be in Luso-Brazilian literature.

Double Majors

Through judicious use of electives, students may find it possible to secure the B.A. degree with two complete majors (e.g., Portuguese/Spanish, Portuguese/History, Portuguese/Sociology, etc.). Interested students should consult the undergraduate adviser in Portuguese as early as possible in their B.A. program.

Study in a Portuguese-Speaking Country

Students are encouraged to spend up to one year in a Portuguese-speaking country to study in a university or conduct research. Appropriate credit may be granted in accordance with the individual program, arranged in consultation with the undergraduate faculty adviser in Portuguese. Proposals must be submitted in advance in writing and must be approved by the department.

Honors Program

The honors program is open to all departmental majors who have completed the required nine upper division core courses with a 3.5 grade-point average. Eligibility is verified by the departmental counselor.

Two honors projects and an honors thesis are required. To graduate with departmental honors, students must first complete an honors project in each of two of their upper division Spanish elective courses. The honors project is a 12- to 15-page term paper on a special topic, selected in consultation with the instructor, to be completed in addition to the normal course requirements. On the basis of the coursework and special interests, students then consult a faculty member in that field and formulate a research project which they pursue under the faculty member's guidance through Spanish 170. Students research and write an honors thesis (not to be confused with an honors project) of approximately 25 pages on the selected topic. Approval of the honors thesis is the final requirement for departmental honors.

Portuguese Minor

To enter the Portuguese minor, students must have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better and must complete Portuguese 3 or 102B.

Required Lower Division Course (4 units): Portuguese 46.

Required Upper Division Courses (24 units): Portuguese 105 and five Portuguese courses selected from 100A through 199 (except 102A, 102B). Only one 4-unit Portuguese 199 course may be selected.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of

Spanish Minor

To enter the Spanish minor, students must have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better and must complete or show proficiency equivalent to two years of college-level Spanish.

Required Lower Division Courses (8 units): Spanish 25 or 27, and M42 or M44.

Required Upper Division Courses (24 to 25 units): Six courses in literature, of which four (22 units) must be selected from Spanish 119A through 197 (one of the four must be from either 119A or 119B or from 120A, 120B, or 120C). Only one 4-unit Spanish 199 course may be selected, and only two upper division courses applied toward the minor may overlap with the major.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Spanish Linguistics Minor

To enter the Spanish Linguistics minor, students must have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better and must complete or show proficiency equivalent to two years of college-level Spanish.

Required Lower Division Courses (8 units): Spanish 25 or 25A, and M35.

Required Upper Division Courses (24 units): Spanish 100A, 100B, three courses from 107, 115, M118A, M118B, and one other upper division Spanish course.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Spanish and Portuguese offers the Master of Arts (M.A.) degree in Spanish, Master of Arts (M.A.) degree in Portuguese, and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degree in Hispanic Languages and Literatures.

Portuguese

Lower Division Courses

1. Elementary Portuguese. (4) Discussion, five hours; laboratory, one hour.

2. Elementary Portuguese. (4) Discussion, five hours; laboratory, one hour. Enforced requisite: course 1.

3. Intermediate Portuguese. (4) Discussion, five hours; laboratory, one hour. Enforced requisite: course 2.

8A-8B. Portuguese Conversation. (2-2) Discussion, three hours. Enforced requisite: course 3 with a grade of B or better.

25. Advanced Portuguese. (4) Enforced requisite: course 3.

M35. Spanish, Portuguese, and Nature of Language. (4) (Same as Spanish M35.) Lecture, three hours. Introduction to language study within context of Romance languages, focusing on Spanish and Portuguese. Nature of language: structure, diversity, evolution, social and cultural settings, literary uses. Study of language and its relation to other areas of human knowledge.

40A-40B. Portuguese, Brazilian, and African Literature in Translation. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Reading and discussion of selected works in translation. Papers and examinations in English. 40A. Portuguese and Portuguese-African Literature; 40B. Brazilian Literature.

M42. Civilization of Spain and Portugal. (4) (Same as Spanish M42.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Required of majors. Lectures conducted in English; discussion sections conducted in either Spanish or English. Highlights of civilization of Spain and Portugal, with emphasis on artistic, economic, social, and historical development as background for upper division courses. P/NP or letter grading.

M44. Civilization of Spanish America and Brazil. (4) (Same as Spanish M44.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Required of majors. Lectures conducted in English; discussion sections conducted in either Spanish or English. Highlights of civilization of Spanish America and Brazil, with emphasis on artistic, economic, social, and historical development as background for upper division courses. P/NP or letter grading.

46. Brazilian Culture and Civilization. (4) Lecture, three hours. Conducted in English. Topical analysis of cultural history of Brazil, with emphasis on physical environment, principal historical, social, and economic development, and artistic manifestations. P/NP or letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

239. Romanticism and Realism in Spanish-American Literature. (4) Lecture, three hours. Intensive study of Romanticism and realism in Spanish-American literature.

240. Major Currents in Modern Spanish-American Literature. (4) Lecture, three hours. Study of principal trends in modern Spanish-American literature, particularly naturalismo and modernismo.

241A-241B. Contemporary Spanish-American Short Story. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Study of important short story writers from modernism to the present.

243A-243B. Contemporary Spanish-American Poetry. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Intensive study of important poets of Spanish America from modernism to the present.

244A-244B. Contemporary Spanish-American Novel. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Study of important novelists from modernism to the present.

245. Contemporary Spanish-American Essay. (4) Lecture, three hours. Study of important Spanish-American essayists of the 20th century.

246. Contemporary Spanish-American Drama. (4) Lecture, three hours. Study of principal Spanish-American dramatists and theater movements in the 20th century.

247. Chicano Literature. (4) Lecture, three hours. Study of major movements and authors of Mexican American literature.

M249. Folk Literature of the Spanish and Portuguese Worlds. (4) (Same as Portuguese M249.) Lecture, three hours. Intensive study of folk literature of the Spanish and Portuguese cultures as represented in (1) ballad and poetry, (2) narrative and drama, (3) speech.

M251A-M251B. Studies in Galegan-Portuguese and Old Spanish. (4-4) (Same as Portuguese M251A-M251B.) Lecture, two hours. Study of problems related to historical development of Galegan-Portuguese and Old Spanish. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

256A-256B. Studies in Spanish Linguistics. (4-4) Lecture, two hours. Study of problems in analysis and description of the contemporary Spanish language. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

257. Studies in Dialectology. (4) Discussion, two hours. May be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

262A-262B. Studies in Medieval Spanish Literature. (4-4) Discussion, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

264A-264B. Studies in Golden Age Spanish Literature. (4-4) Discussion, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

265. Cervantes. (4) Discussion, two hours. May be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

270A-270B. Studies in 18th-Century Spanish Literature. (4-4) Discussion, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

271A-271B. Studies in 19th-Century Spanish Literature. (4-4) Discussion, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

272A-272B. Studies in 20th-Century Spanish Literature. (4-4) Discussion, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

277A-277B. Studies in Colonial Spanish-American Literature. (4-4) Discussion, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

278A-278B. Studies in 19th-Century Spanish-American Literature. (4-4) Discussion, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

280A-280B. Studies in Contemporary Spanish-American Literature. (4-4) Discussion, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

281. Studies in Chicano Literature. (4) Discussion, two hours. May be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

286A-286B. Studies in Hispanic Folk Literature. (4-4) (Formerly numbered M286A-M286B.) Lecture, two hours. Each course may be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

290. Special Topics. (4) Lecture, two hours. Variable topics; consult Schedule of Classes or department counselor for topics to be offered in a specific term. May be repeated once with topic change and consent of appropriate guidance committee.

M294. Seminar: Literary Theory. (5) (Same as Comparative Literature M294, East Asian Languages M251, English M270, French M270, German M270, Italian M270, and Scandinavian M270.) Seminar, three hours. Advanced interdisciplinary seminar to explore philosophical, historical, and critical foundations of literary theory as well as current issues in literary and cultural studies. S/U or letter grading.

M299. Research Resources for European Studies. (2) (Same as French M299, German M299, Information Studies M299, Italian M299, and Slavic M299.) Lecture, two hours. Essentials of library research strategy and effective searching in key print and online resources for European and Russian studies. Through combination of lecture, online demonstration, and hands-on activities in and outside class, students understand how to efficiently use library and databases. S/U grading.

310. Teaching Spanish in Elementary School. (4) Lecture, three hours.

370. Teaching Spanish in Secondary School. (4) Lecture, three hours.

373. Teaching Composition. (2) Designed for graduate students. Seminar on teaching writing in Spanish language courses. Introduction to composition theory. Instruction and practice in integrating writing into curriculum, setting goals and standards, designing and sequencing course materials, evaluating and commenting on papers. May not be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

375. Teaching Apprentice Practicum. (1 to 4) Seminar, to be arranged. Preparation: apprentice personnel employment as a teaching assistant, associate, or fellow. Teaching apprenticeship under active guidance and supervision of a regular faculty member responsible for curriculum and instruction at the University. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

490. Using Technology in Foreign Language Classroom. (4) Discussion, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Theory and practice of using technology in foreign language classroom. Computer applications that facilitate instruction of grammar, discourse, culture, and composition, as well as evaluation and communication between students and instructor. S/U grading.

495. Teaching Spanish at College Level. (4) Seminar, to be arranged. Designed for graduate Spanish and Portuguese students. Basic concepts of modern theories of language and language acquisition which underlie modern methods of second language teaching. S/U grading.

596. Directed Individual Study or Research. (4 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Study or research in areas or subjects not offered as regular courses. No more than 4 units may be applied toward M.A. course requirements.

597. Preparation for Graduate Examinations. (4 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: official acceptance of candidacy by department. Individual preparation for M.A. comprehensive examination or Ph.D. qualifying examinations. May be taken only once for each degree examination and only in term that comprehensive or qualifying examinations are to be taken. S/U grading.

598. Research for M.A. Thesis. (4 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Research in preparation of M.A. thesis. S/U grading.

599. Research for Ph.D. Dissertation. (4 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Limited to students who have passed Ph.D. qualifying examinations. Research for and preparation of Ph.D. dissertation. S/U grading.

Scope and Objectives

There is no major in speech; however, several undergraduate courses are offered for interested students.

Speech

Lower Division Courses

A. Oral Communication for Nonnative Speakers. (No credit) Lecture, four hours. Speech A displaces 4 units on student's Study List but yields no credit toward a degree. Emphasis on public and private speaking skills in American English necessary for social, academic, and professional growth in this country. Provides experiences necessary to remove barriers to communication created by inappropriate oral language usage. Offered in summer only. P/NP grading.

1. Principles of Oral Communication. (4) Enforced requisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. Theory and practice of informal public speaking, including selection of content, organization of ideas, language, and delivery; practice in extemporaneous and manuscript speaking; training in critical analysis through reading and listening to contemporary speeches.

1A. English Language Program in Effective Speaking. (4) Lecture, eight hours and 20 minutes. Combination of courses A and 1 to help nonnative speakers of English increase fluency and vocabulary while also improving presentation skills. Language usage, reasoning, style, and delivery. Conversation and pronunciation practice. Offered in summer only. P/NP or letter grading.

2. Public Speaking and Discussion. (4) Enforced requisite: course 1. Continuation of course 1, with special emphasis on group discussions, panels, symposia, debates, and formal public speaking. Critical analysis of speeches in both contemporary and historical settings.

Upper Division Courses

190A-190B. Forensics. (2-2) May be repeated once for credit.

191. Analysis and Briefing. (2) Intensive study of selected political or social issues; preparation of bibliography; analysis and evaluation of issues and arguments. May be repeated once for credit.

197. Proseminar: Rhetoric. (4) Designed for seniors. Variable topics course involving intensive study of discourse associated with a single major issue or personality.

199. Special Studies. (2 to 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Limited to seniors.

Scope and Objectives

One of the goals of the Department of Statistics, established in April 1998, is to coordinate both the undergraduate and graduate teaching of statistics at UCLA. Statistics is important for all sciences because a great deal of advanced work in each scientific discipline involves statistical analysis for proper interpretation of data. In addition, many laws, proposals, and programs in society require statistics to evaluate collected quantitative data.

Undergraduate Courses

Students planning to pursue advanced degrees in statistics should enroll in the Statistics 100A, 100B, 100C sequence. The 110A and 110B sequence is less comprehensive than the 100 series. In particular, probability topics do not receive the same level of coverage. Courses 110A and 110B are offered each term. The remaining upper division courses are usually offered once or twice each year. The tentative class schedule for the forthcoming academic year is posted in the department office in February.

Statistics Minor

The Statistics minor is designed to provide a solid background in applied and theoretical statistics for students who are majors in another discipline.

To enter the minor, students should have successfully completed one lower or upper division Statistics Department course with a letter grade, have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better, and file a petition with the undergraduate adviser in 8142A Math Sciences, (310) 206-3742. Mathematics 32B and 33A must be taken before students take Statistics 100A.

Required Upper Division Courses (28 units): Statistics 100A, 100B, 100C, CM120A, CM120B, and two additional statistics courses. Either Statistics 199 or 199I may be applied toward the additional two courses. A minimum of 20 units applied toward the minor requirements must be in addition to units applied toward major or minor requirements in any other department or program.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Statistics offers Master of Science (M.S.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Statistics.

Statistics

Lower Division Courses

10. Introduction to Statistical Reasoning. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Preparation: three years of high school mathematics. Not open for credit to students with credit for course 11, M12, 13, Anthropology M80, Geography M40, or Sociology M18 (or former Statistics M11, M13, Economics M40, or Organismic Biology M22). Descriptive statistics, elementary probability, random variables, binomial and normal distributions. Large and small sample inference concerning means. P/NP or letter grading.

10H. Introduction to Statistical Reasoning (Honors). (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, two hours. Preparation: three years of high school mathematics. Not open for credit to students with credit for course 10, 11, M12, 13, Anthropology M80, Geography M40, or Sociology M18 (or former Statistics M11, M13, Economics M40, or Organismic Biology M22). Descriptive statistics, elementary probability, random variables, binomial and normal distributions. Large and small sample inference concerning means. Introduction to statistical software. Letter grading.

11. Introduction to Statistical Methods for Business and Economics. (5) (Formerly numbered M11.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour; laboratory, one hour. Not open to students with credit for course 10, M12, 13, 100A, 100B, 100C, Anthropology M80, Geography M40, Mathematics 170A, 170B, or Sociology M18 (or former Statistics M11, M13, or Organismic Biology M22). Elements of statistical analysis. Presentation and interpretation of data; descriptive statistics; theory of probability and basic sampling distributions; statistical inference, including principles of estimation and tests of hypotheses; introduction to regression and correlation. P/NP or letter grading.

M12. Introduction to Statistical Methods for Social Sciences. (5) (Same as Anthropology M80, Geography M40, and Sociology M18.) Lecture, four hours; discussion, one hour; laboratory, one hour. Not open for credit to students with credit for course 10, 11, or 13 (or former Statistics M11, M13, Economics M40, or Organismic Biology M22). Elements of statistical analysis for social sciences. Presentation and interpretation of data, descriptive statistics, theory of probability and basic sampling distributions, statistical inference including principles of estimation and tests of hypotheses, introduction to regression and correlation. P/NP or letter grading.

13. Introduction to Statistical Methods for Life and Health Sciences. (5) (Formerly numbered M13.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour; laboratory, one hour. Not open for credit to students with credit for course 10, 11, M12, Anthropology M80, Geography M40, or Sociology M18 (or former Statistics M11, Economics M40, or Organismic Biology M22). Presentation and interpretation of data, descriptive statistics, introduction to correlation and regression and to basic statistical inference (estimation, testing of means and proportions, ANOVA) using both bootstrap methods and parametric models. P/NP or letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

100A. Introduction to Probability Theory. (4) (Formerly numbered M100A.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: Mathematics 32B, 33A. Not open to students with credit for Electrical Engineering 131A or Mathematics 170A; open to graduate students. Students may receive credit for only two of the following: courses 100A, 110A, Biostatistics 100A. Probability distributions, random variables and vectors, expectation. P/NP or letter grading.

100B. Introduction to Mathematical Statistics. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 100A. Survey sampling, estimation, testing, data summary, one- and two-sample problems. P/NP or letter grading.

110A-110B. Applied Statistics. (4-4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. P/NP or letter grading. 110A. Requisites: Mathematics 32B, 33A. Not open to students with credit for Electrical Engineering 131A. Students may receive credit for only two of following: courses 100A, 110A, Biostatistics 100A. Probability, distributions, expectation, estimation, central limit theorem, confidence intervals, testing. 110B. Requisite: course 110A. One- and two-sample problems, goodness of fit and contingency tables, correlation and regression, analysis of variance, nonparametrics.

CM120A-CM120B. Applied Regression Analysis. (4-4) (Formerly numbered M120A-M120B.) (Same as Biomathematics M153A-M153B and Biostatistics M153A-M153B.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Applied regression analysis, with emphasis on general linear model (e.g., multiple regression) and generalized linear model (e.g., logistic regression). Special attention to modern extensions of regression, including regression diagnostics, graphical procedures, and bootstrapping for statistical inference. Concurrently scheduled with courses C217A-C217B. P/NP or letter grading.

C125. Experimental Design. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 100C or 110B or CM120A or Biomathematics M153A or Biostatistics M153A. Basic principles, analysis of variance, randomized block designs, Latin squares, balanced incomplete block designs, factorial designs, fractional factorial designs, minimum aberration designs, robust parameter designs. Concurrently scheduled with course C225. P/NP or letter grading.

C126. Resampling Methods. (4) (Formerly numbered 125.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Preparation: one lower division statistics course. Simple intuitive introduction to practical application of statistics for experiments and surveys in business and biological, medical, physical, and social sciences. Resampling methods — bootstrap and permutation test — are table-free and distribution-free, require common sense (not calculus), yet have a broader range of applications than classical parametric statistical procedures. Concurrently scheduled with course C226. P/NP or letter grading.

130A. Statistical Analysis with STATA. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 10 or 11 or M12 or 13. How to manage and analyze quantitative data using STATA statistical software. Graphical analysis and programming and extensions to basic package. P/NP or letter grading.

130B. Statistical Analysis with SAS. (4) (Formerly numbered 130.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: courses 10, 130A. How to manage and analyze quantitative data using statistical procedures produced by SAS Institute, Inc. Discussion of many statistical techniques available in SAS and ways to extend basic system by SAS programming. P/NP or letter grading.

130C. Introduction to Computational Statistics with R. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 130B. Introductory examination of programming in R. P/NP or letter grading.

M140. Introduction to Spatial Statistics. (4) (Same as Geography M171.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Requisite: course M12. Introduction to methods of measurement and interpretation of geographic distributions and associations. P/NP or letter grading.

150. Data Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 100A and 100B, or 110A and 110B, or CM120A and CM120B, or one course from 10, 11, M12, 13 and one upper division statistics course. Practice in solving statistical problems, with coverage of basics of cleaning and checking data, exploratory analysis, model building, model checking, reporting results, working with “clients.” P/NP or letter grading.

153. Statistical Analysis with Missing Data. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, 11, M12, 13. Study of methods dealing with nonresponse and missing data, including introduction to terminology, limitations of simple methods, and modern methods for dealing with missing data, such as EM algorithm and multiple imputation. P/NP or letter grading.

C155. Introduction to Statistical Analysis of Environmental Data. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Routine intermediate applied statistics course, with emphasis on applications to environmental data and statistical computing with the language R. Statistical analysis and scientific report from real data required. Concurrently scheduled with course CM255. P/NP or letter grading.

170. Introduction to Time-Series Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisite: course 10 or 11 or M12 or 13 or Anthropology M80 or Geography M40 or Sociology M18. Exploration of standard methods in temporal and frequency analysis used in analysis of numerical time-series data. Examples provided throughout, and students implement techniques discussed. P/NP or letter grading.

C180. Introduction to Bayesian Statistics. (4) (Formerly numbered 180.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Requisites: Mathematics 32B, 33B. Designed for juniors/seniors. Introduction to statistical inference based on use of Bayes theorem, covering foundational aspects, current applications, and computational issues. Topics include Stein paradox, nonparametric Bayes, and statistical learning. Examples of applications include protein alignment algorithms and image denoising procedures. Concurrently scheduled with course C236. P/NP or letter grading.

CM185. Statistical Methods for Physical Sciences. (4) (Same as Atmospheric Sciences CM185.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Statistical framework for data analysis in fields of atmospheric sciences, astronomy, geology, and chemistry, depending on class composition. Presentation of popular techniques in all fields, with emphasis on applications and data, not theory, although some understanding of theory is needed. Concurrently scheduled with course CM252. P/NP or letter grading.

197. Current Topics in Statistics. (4) Lecture, three hours. Limited to juniors/seniors. Study of selected current topics in statistics. May not be repeated. P/NP or letter grading.

199. Special Studies in Statistics. (1 to 4) Tutorial, one to four hours. At discretion of chair and subject to availability of staff, individuals may study topics suitable for undergraduate course credit but not specifically offered as separate courses. No more than 8 units may be applied toward degree requirements. P/NP or letter grading.

199I. Independent Studies for Internships. (2 to 4) Tutorial, to be arranged. Independent studies course to be supervised jointly by the Center for Experiential Education and Service Learning and faculty supervisor. Further supervision to be provided by business for which student is doing internship. P/NP or letter grading.

Graduate Courses

201. Nonparametric and Robust Statistics. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 200B. Development of nonparametric and robust procedures for hypothesis testing, estimation in one- and two-sample problems, linear and nonlinear regression, multiple classification, density estimation. Letter grading.

202. Decision Theory. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: course 200B, Mathematics 131A. Bayes, admissible, and minimax decision rules. Invariant tests and estimates, best unbiased tests, locally best tests. Application to general linear model. Letter grading.

203. Sequential Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: course 200B, Mathematics 131A. Bayes sequential decision problems, stopping rule problems, optimality of sequential probability ratio test, Wald identity, asymptotic theory, and other topics. Letter grading.

204. Nonparametric Function Estimation and Modeling. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 200A. Introduction to many useful nonparametric techniques such as nonparametric density estimation, nonparametric regression, and high-dimensional statistical modeling. Some semiparametric techniques and functional data analysis. Letter grading.

M211. Analysis of Data with Qualitative and Limited Dependent Variables. (4) (Same as Sociology M242.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 100A, 100B, and 100C, or Sociology 210A and 210B. Models for binary, polytomous, and ordered outcomes; censored and truncated dependent variables; sample selection bias and qualitative response models; count outcomes; multilevel models; log-linear models. S/U or letter grading.

212. Program Evaluation and Policy Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course M120B. Primary focus on methods of program evaluation. Randomized experiments, observational studies, and topics such as matching, stratification, covariance adjustments, and sensitivity analyses. Letter grading.

M213. Applied Event History Analysis. (4) (Same as Sociology M213B.) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: exposure to binary response models. Requisites: Sociology 210A, 210B. Introduction to regression-like analyses in which outcome is "time to event." Topics include logit models for discrete-time event history models; piecewise exponential hazards models; proportional hazards; nonproportional hazards; parametric survival models; heterogeneity; multilevel survival models. S/U or letter grading.

216. High-Dimensional Data Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 100A, 100B, 100C. Designed for graduate students. Discussion of several statistical methodologies useful for exploring voluminous data, including principle component analysis, clustering and classification, tree-structured analysis, neural network, hidden Markov models, sliced inverse regression (SIR), and principal Hessian direction (PHD). S/U or letter grading.

C217A-C217B. Applied Regression Analysis. (4-4) (Formerly numbered 217A-217B.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Applied regression analysis, with emphasis on general linear model (e.g., multiple regression) and generalized linear model (e.g., logistic regression). Special attention to modern extensions of regression, including regression diagnostics, graphical procedures, and bootstrapping for statistical inference. Concurrently scheduled with courses CM120A-CM120B. S/U or letter grading.

218. Generalized Linear Models. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 100C or CM120A. Nonlinear models, estimation, diagnostics, statistical inference. Applications to models defined by systems of differential equations and robust regression. Introduction to generalized linear models and categorical data analysis. S/U grading.

M220A-M220B. Applied Probability. (4-4) (Same as Mathematics M282A-M282B.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 100A or Mathematics 170A. S/U or letter grading. M220A. Conditioning, Markov chains, Poisson process, Brownian motion, stationary processes, applications. M220B. Simulation, renewal theory, martingale, and selected topics from queuing, reliability, speech recognition, computational biology, mathematical finance, epidemiology.

221. Time-Series Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Exploration of methods for analyzing numerical time-series data. Basic topics in temporal and frequency analysis, followed by more recent topics. Examples in various fields including economics, signal processing, and atmospheric sciences. S/U or letter grading.

M222. Spatial Statistics. (4) (Formerly numbered 222.) (Same as Geography M272 and Urban Planning M215.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Survey of modern methods used in analysis of spatial data. Implementation of various techniques using real data sets from diverse fields, including neuroimaging, geography, seismology, demography, and environmental sciences. S/U or letter grading.

C225. Experimental Design. (4) (Formerly numbered 225.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 100C or 110B or CM120A or Biomathematics M153A or Biostatistics M153A. Basic principles, analysis of variance, randomized block designs, Latin squares, balanced incomplete block designs, factorial designs, fractional factorial designs, minimum aberration designs, robust parameter designs. Concurrently scheduled with course C125. S/U or letter grading.

C226. Resampling Methods. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for graduate students. Simple intuitive introduction to practical application of statistics for experiments and surveys in business and biological, medical, physical, and social sciences. Resampling methods — bootstrap and permutation test — are table-free and distribution-free, require common sense (not calculus), yet have a broader range of applications than classical parametric statistical procedures. Concurrently scheduled with course C126. S/U or letter grading.

M230. Statistical Computing. (4) (Same as Biomathematics M280 and Biostatistics M280.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: course 100C, Mathematics 115A. Introduction to theory and design of statistical programs: computing methods for linear and nonlinear regression, dealing with constraints, robust estimation, and general maximum likelihood methods. Letter grading.

231. Pattern Recognition and Machine Learning. (4) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Fundamental concepts, theories, and algorithms for pattern recognition and machine learning that are used in computer vision, image processing, speech recognition, data mining, statistics, and computational biology. Topics include Bayesian decision theory, parametric and nonparametric learning, clustering, complexity (VC-dimension, MDL, AIC), PCA/ICA/TCA, MDS, SVM, boosting. S/U or letter grading.

232A. Statistical Modeling and Learning in Vision and Science. (4) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: basic statistics, linear algebra (matrix analysis), computer vision. Computer vision and pattern recognition. Study of four types of statistical models for modeling visual patterns: descriptive, causal Markov, generative (hidden Markov), and discriminative. Comparison of principles and algorithms for these models; presentation of unifying picture. Introduction of minimax entropy and EM-type and stochastic algorithms for learning. S/U or letter grading.

C236. Introduction to Bayesian Statistics. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Designed for graduate students. Introduction to statistical inference based on use of Bayes theorem, covering foundational aspects, current applications, and computational issues. Topics include Stein paradox, nonparametric Bayes, and statistical learning. Examples of applications include protein alignment algorithms and image denoising procedures. Concurrently scheduled with course C180. S/U or letter grading.

240. Multivariate Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 200B. Distributions in several dimensions, partial and multiple correlation. Normal distribution theory, Wishart distribution, Hotelling  $T^2$ . Principal components, canonical correlation, discriminant analysis. Introduction to linear structural relations and factor analysis. Letter grading.

M241. Causal Inference. (4) (Same as Computer Science M262C.) Lecture, four hours. Requisite: Computer Science 112 or equivalent probability theory course. Techniques of using computers to interpret, summarize, and form theories of empirical observations. Mathematical analysis of trade-offs between computational complexity, storage requirements, and precision of computerized models. Letter grading.

M243. Logic, Causation, and Probability. (4) (Same as Epidemiology M204.) Lecture, four hours. Preparation: two terms of statistics or probability and statistics. Recommended requisite: Epidemiology 201B. Principles of deductive logic and causal logic using counterfactuals. Principles of probability logic and probabilistic induction. Causal probability logic using directed acyclic graphs. S/U or letter grading.

M244. Statistical Analysis with Latent Variables. (4) (Same as Education M231E.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: Education 231A, 231B. Extends path analysis (causal modeling) by considering models with measurement errors and multiple indicators of latent variables. Confirmatory factor analysis, covariance structure modeling, and multiple-group analysis. Identification, estimation, testing, and model building considerations. Letter grading.

M245. History of Statistics. (4) (Same as History M296.) Seminar, three hours. History of statistics ranges over vast and diverse territory. Development of mathematical methods; philosophical, political, and social issues that were linked to their emergence and use. S/U or letter grading.

M250. Statistical Methods for Epidemiology. (4) (Same as Biostatistics M211 and Epidemiology M211.) Lecture, four hours. Preparation: two terms of statistics (such as Biostatistics 100A, 100B). Requisites: Epidemiology 201A, 201B. Concepts and methods tailored for analysis of epidemiologic data, with emphasis on tabular and graphical techniques. Expansion of topics introduced in Epidemiology 201A and 201B and introduction of new topics, including principles of epidemiologic analysis, trend analysis, smoothing and sensitivity analysis. S/U or letter grading.

M251. Statistical Methods for Life Sciences. (4) (Same as Organismic Biology M216.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 13. Fundamentals of statistics as applied in life sciences, including statistical inferences for continuous and categorical data (estimation, testing of means and proportions, ANOVA) study design, linear regression, and introduction to principle components analysis. Methods to be implemented on computer with SAS. S/U or letter grading.

CM252. Statistical Methods for Physical Sciences. (4) (Formerly numbered M252.) (Same as Atmospheric Sciences CM213.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Statistical framework for data analysis in fields of atmospheric sciences, astronomy, geology, and chemistry, depending on class composition. Presentation of popular techniques in all fields, with emphasis on applications and data, not theory, although some understanding of theory is needed. Concurrently scheduled with course CM185. S/U or letter grading.

M254. Statistical Methods in Computational Biology. (4) (Same as Biomathematics M271.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Preparation: elementary probability concepts. Requisite: course 100A. Training in probability and statistics for students interested in pursuing research in computational biology, genomics, and bioinformatics. Letter grading.

CM255. Introduction to Statistical Analysis of Environmental Data. (4) (Same as Environmental Science and Engineering M255.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Routine intermediate applied statistics course, with emphasis on applications to environmental data and statistical computing with the language R. Statistical analysis and scientific report from real data required. Concurrently scheduled with course C155. S/U or letter grading.

285. Seminar: Computing for Statistics. (2 to 4) Seminar, one to three hours. Topics in various statistical areas by means of lectures and informal conferences with staff members. S/U grading.

M286. Seminar: Statistical Problem Solving for Population Biology. (2) (Same as Organismic Biology M286.) Seminar, two hours. Designed for graduate students. Statistical solutions to complex data analysis and/or experimental design problems encountered by biology graduate students in their own research. S/U or letter grading.

290. Current Literature in Statistics. (2) Seminar, one hour. Topics in various statistical areas by means of lectures and informal conferences with staff members. S/U grading.

291. Statistics Consulting Seminar. (4) Seminar, three hours. Preparation: at least one UCLA graduate-level statistics course. Exposure to realistic statistical and scientific problems that appear in typical interactions between statisticians and researchers, with lectures centered on case studies presented by faculty members and invited speakers from business and academic fields. Applied regression analysis and design of experiments, together with basic statistical programs. Presentations and written reports required. S/U or letter grading.

296. Participating Seminar: Statistics. (1 to 2) Seminar and discussion by staff and students. S/U grading.

370. Teaching of Statistics. (4) Lecture, four hours. Exhaustive review of literature in teaching of statistics followed by analysis of what is missing in this area. Discussion of prevalent education, cognitive psychology, and evaluation theories and strategies that help to improve teaching of statistics. Letter grading.

375. Teaching Apprentice Practicum. (1 to 4) Seminar, to be arranged. Preparation: apprentice personal employment as a teaching assistant, associate, or fellow. Teaching apprenticeship under active guidance and supervision of a regular faculty member responsible for curriculum and instruction at the University. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

495A. Teaching College Statistics. (2) (Formerly numbered 495.) Seminar, two hours; intensive training at beginning of Fall Quarter. Required of all potential departmental teaching assistants and new Ph.D. students. Practical and theoretical issues in teaching of statistics. S/U grading.

495B. Teaching College Statistics. (2) Seminar, two hours. Weekly discussion and intensive training for all first-year teaching assistants that addresses practical and theoretical issues in using technology to teach statistics, including use of statistical software as education tool. S/U grading.

495C. Evaluation of Teaching Assistants. (2) Seminar, two hours. Overview of new trends and directions in teaching of statistics. Observation of teaching assistants twice by instructor to give them chance to observe and analyze their own strengths and weaknesses and think about how they can improve their teaching. S/U grading.

596. Directed Individual Study or Research. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Supervised individual reading and study on project approved by a faculty member. May be repeated for credit. Letter grading.

598. M.S. Thesis Research. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for second-year statistics M.S. students. Study and research for M.S. thesis. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

599. Ph.D. Dissertation Research. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: advancement to Ph.D. candidacy. Study and research for Ph.D. dissertation. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

Arthur Fleming, M.D., Chief of Surgery, King/Drew

Scope and Objectives

The Department of Surgery instructs medical students during all four years of medical school. Students are expected to obtain broad knowledge of diseases treated by surgical means and to understand the pathology of these conditions, the therapy that may be applied, and the anticipated results of treatment. They are also encouraged to learn about the impact of surgical illness on the patient and the patient's family and environment.

Third-year students participate in one 12-week core clerkship in clinical surgery and are assigned to rotations at a combination of UCLA, Harbor-UCLA, West Los Angeles VA, and Olive View-UCLA Medical Centers. Each facility has a special orientation depending on the patient population and the individual staff, in addition to the initial surgery clerkship orientation. During the fourth year students may elect to take additional clinical rotations with increasing responsibilities. Additional in-depth elective courses are offered in collaboration with other departments.

For further details on the Department of Surgery and a listing of the courses offered, see <http://www.surgery.medsch.ucla.edu>.

Surgery

Upper Division Course

199. Special Studies. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Individual projects carried out under direction of a faculty member. Special studies in surgery, with appropriate objectives, readings, laboratory work, or other assignments designed for proper training of students. P/NP or letter grading.

Scope and Objectives

UCLA's theater program offers comprehensive training for the profession, as well as serious study of theater's long history and rich literature. Drawing on this vibrant heritage, the curriculum promotes an awareness of theater as a global phenomenon embodying the contributions of diverse cultures and explores theater as a forum for reflecting the human experience as revealed through the dynamics of theater production. With this in mind, students engage in the presentation of dramatic work in a community where creativity and critical thought combine in the exploration of the artistic and intellectual challenges inherent in the making of theater.

Manifesting talent and promise as well as representing a wide range of backgrounds and interests, prospective students are selected by the faculty through auditions and interviews in cities throughout the U.S.

At the undergraduate level, students receive education in acting, design, directing, history and criticism, musical theater, and playwriting, all within the rigorous liberal arts framework of the B.A. degree.

At the graduate level, the M.A. in Theater offers a flexible curriculum of graduate courses that provides a focus in theater scholarship or theater practice. For exceptional students who wish to pursue graduate education, the M.A. offers a foundation in theater history, criticism, or performance studies, or an area of theater practice such as dramatic writing, directing, design, or theater education outreach. Students in the M.F.A. program develop as artists and are given preprofessional training in the skills of theater, while Ph.D. students engage in critical investigations of the art form. In conjunction with their theater studies, students also have the opportunity to pursue elective courses in the area of film and television.

For current or specific information about the programs and faculty members, see <http://www.tft.ucla.edu>.

Theater B.A.

The Bachelor of Arts degree provides a liberal education and preprofessional training in a comprehensive program that combines the study of the arts, humanities, and sciences with exploration of the principal areas of theater practice — acting, design, directing, the history and criticism of theater and drama, musical theater, and playwriting. The program is designed to ensure that students graduate with a sound humanistic and experiential base for further pursuits in education and in life beyond the University.

The Theater B.A. provides a liberal education by combining critical study of theater with experiential practice in one or more of its component parts. Students explore acting, design, directing, playwriting, and production to build a foundation for future creative work. Specialized and advanced training is available to prepare students for a variety of careers, further training, or graduate study. At the upper division level, students choose from an array of advanced elective courses in acting, design and production, directing, musical theater, playwriting, theater history, criticism, dramatic literature, and performance.

The acting electives include fundamental and advanced courses in all aspects of performance training that prepare students for careers in performance. There is some performance in projects, but emphasis is on class and studio work. Upper division advanced courses explore verse, scene study, comedy, cabaret, movement, and combat.

The design and production electives introduce design principles and investigate the design of scenery, lighting, costumes, and sound for theater, film, and television in lower division courses. Four design and production areas of study are available at the upper division level — scenic design, costume design, lighting design, and sound design. Students select from an array of design skills courses to develop proficiency in essential areas of rendering, drafting, painting, computer-aided design, and technology. Courses in art, history, and philosophy build an understanding of the social history of visual ideas. A sequence of courses in each area of study examines design principles and practice specific to each field.

The directing electives explore the basic theories of play direction, as well as text analysis and craft fundamentals. Advanced courses emphasize psychological aspects of director-actor communication and development of specific directorial and production styles.

The Ray Bolger Musical Theater Program electives train selected students in acting, singing, and dance for the musical theater and provide knowledge of musical theater history. The dance courses (Theater 1A, 1B, 1C) are open to all freshman Theater majors and must be taken as requisites to be considered for the program. Auditions are held during Spring Quarter of the freshman year. Junior transfer students are also eligible for consideration for admission. Additional courses provide hands-on training with professional artists and a range of performing experiences from workshops to full production.

The history and criticism of theater and drama electives include the study of fundamental cultural, social, ethical, and political issues in the context of artistic expression enriched by historical perspective. The curriculum promotes an awareness of the theater as a global phenomenon embodying the contributions of diverse cultures and explores the verbal and visual elements of its language as revealed through the dynamics of theater production.

The playwriting electives include specialized and advanced courses that prepare students to write one-act and full-length plays, books and lyrics for music theater, and scripts for the one-person show.

Admission

All applicants must meet the admission standards of UCLA and the departmental screening process. Applications are accepted only in November for admission to the following Fall Quarter. There are no mid-year admissions. On receipt of the application the department notifies students of the screening process, which includes submission of a written essay on a topic selected annually by faculty members, letters of recommendation, and an interview and/or audition. Information on the scheduling of the audition/interview is sent to each applicant with the departmental request for supplemental materials. Every applicant must complete the interview portion of the application process. The audition is optional for all students except those wishing to qualify for admission on the basis of their ability in performance. There is a $40 fee for all auditions/interviews. Applicants may submit materials for consideration in one or more of the following areas: acting, design and production, directing, history and criticism, musical theater, and playwriting.

All entering students are admitted as Theater majors and must audition and interview at the end of their freshman year or beginning of their sophomore year for elective courses in acting, design and production, directing, history and criticism of theater and drama, musical theater, or playwriting.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Theater 11, 12, 13, 14A, 14B, 14C, 15, 50 (must be taken for 4 units total).

The Major

Required: A total of 58 upper division units, including Theater 101A, 101B, 101C, 106, 150 (must be taken for 4 units total), 180, and 34 upper division elective units selected from courses 101 through 199 not otherwise specified as requirements.

The Ray Bolger Musical Theater Program electives are Theater 104C, 114A, 114B, 114C, 115A, 115B, 115C, 116A, 116B, 116C, 134A, 134B, 134C, 135A, 135B, 135C, 137A, 137B, 137C.

Through certain of these required courses, students are responsible for completing specific production assignments related to production activity of the theater curriculum.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Theater offers Master of Arts (M.A.), Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.), and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Theater.

Theater

Lower Division Courses

1A-1B-1C. Introduction to Dance for Music Theater. (1-1-1) Studio, four hours. Designed for Theater majors. Introduction to basic music theater dance technique. Letter grading.

11. Contemporary Theater Issues. (4) Lecture, three hours. Investigation of theater in contemporary American culture and society. Topics illustrated by faculty and guest speakers, visits to off-campus theaters, and reading from contemporary plays. Letter grading.

12. Introduction to Performance. (4) Lecture, two hours; studio, four hours. Investigation of phenomenon of performance and role of the performer in the theatrical event, including interpretation of drama through performance. Examination of various forms of theatrical performance and styles of expression, and development of acting, voice, and movement skills. Letter grading.

13. Play Reading and Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Provides a base for subsequent study in theater. Development of techniques of play reading and habits of scholarship useful to further study in each of the theater's subdisciplines, including acting, directing, design, playwriting, and critical study. Letter grading.

14A-14B-14C. Introduction to Design. (4-4-4) Lecture, three hours; studio, six hours. Exploration of visual interpretation of drama. Study of styles and techniques of design, collaborative role of the designer, principles of design for scenery, lighting, costumes, and sound. Both technical and aesthetic groundwork for further study. Letter grading.

15. Introduction to Directing. (4) Lecture, two hours; studio, four hours. Requisite: course 11. Investigation of role of the director in theatrical production and theories of play direction, with emphasis on analysis and interpretation of dramatic work and its realization in production. Letter grading.

20. Acting Fundamentals. (4) Studio, 24 hours. Introduction to interpretation of drama through art of the actor. Development of individual insights, skills, and disciplines in presentation of dramatic material to an audience. P/NP or letter grading.

28A-28F. Acting, Voice, and Movement Workshops I. (2 each) Studio, three to six hours. Study of beginning acting technique, scene study, and development of voice and movement skills. May be repeated for a maximum of 12 units. Letter grading.

50. Theater Production. (1 to 2) Laboratory, three to six hours. Laboratory experience in various aspects of theater production, including stage management or member of production crew. May be repeated for a maximum of 8 units. Letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

101A-101B-101C. History of World Theater and Drama. (4-4-4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Survey of history of influence of different cultures, traditions, and technologies on development of theater as a social institution. Letter grading. 101A. Ritual and Religious Drama. Study of origins of theater and drama from oral tradition, myth, storytelling, Shamanism, collective ritual, Greek festival drama, and cloister drama of different cultures. 101B. Rise of Secular Drama. Study of Renaissance secular theater and drama in Europe, Asia, Africa, and the New World. 101C. Emergence of Realism and 20th-Century Responses. Study of realism and subsequent departures from realism in theater and drama.

102A. Theater of Japan. (4) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of major theater traditions of Japan from emergence of earliest theatrical activity to the present, including investigation of Noh, Bunraku, and Kabuki performance traditions. Letter grading.

102B. Theater of Southeast Asia. (4) Lecture, three hours. Examination of representative theatrical genre from various geographical areas in Southeast Asia to illustrate importance and contribution that theater plays in society. Letter grading.

102C. Cross-Cultural Currents in Theater. (4) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of interculturalism in theater, with focus on 20th-century alternatives to naturalism. Analysis of historical materials and dramatic texts to investigate cultural, aesthetic, ethical, and social implications of borrowing from other cultures. Letter grading.

102E. Theater of Non-European World. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Survey of theater forms of non-European world in which primary attention is concentrated on examination and analysis of traditional dance-drama and puppet theaters of East Asia, Southeast Asia, South Asia, the Middle East, and Africa. Analogous forms from European theater included for comparative purposes.

M103A. African American Theater History: Slavery to Mid-1800s. (4) (Same as Afro-American Studies M103A.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Exploration of extant materials on history and literature of theater as developed and performed by African American artists in America from slavery to the mid-1800s. Letter grading.

M103B. African American Theater History: Minstrel Stage to Rise of the American Musical. (4) (Same as Afro-American Studies M103B.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Exploration of extant materials on history and literature of theater as developed and performed by African American artists in America from the minstrel stage to the rise of the American musical. Letter grading.

M103C. Origins and Evolution of Chicano Theater. (4) (Same as Chicana and Chicano Studies M103C.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Exploration of development of Chicano theater from its beginning in legends and rituals of ancient Mexico to work of Luis Valdez (late 1960s).

M103D. Contemporary Chicano Theater: Beginning of Chicano Theater Movement. (4) (Same as Chicana and Chicano Studies M103D.) Lecture, three hours. Analysis and discussion of historical and political events from 1965 to 1980, as well as theatrical traditions which led to emergence of Chicano theater. Letter grading.

M103E. African American Theater History: The Depression to the Present. (4) (Same as Afro-American Studies M103E.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for juniors/seniors. Exploration of extant materials on history and literature of theater as developed and performed by African American artists in America from the Depression to the present. Letter grading.

103F. Native American Theater. (4) Study of American Indian theater as an evolving art form.

M103H. Contemporary Chicano Theater: Chicano Theater since 1980. (4) (Same as Chicana and Chicano Studies M103H.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course M103D. Analysis and discussion of Chicano theater since 1980, including discussion of Chicana playwrights, magic realism, Chicano comedy, and Chicano performance art. Letter grading.

104A-104B-104C. History of American Theater. (4-4-4) Lecture, three hours. Study of history of influence of different cultures, traditions, and technologies on development of theater as a social institution in America. Letter grading. 104A. Revolutionary War to the Civil War; 104B. Civil War to WWI; 104C. WWI to the Present.

105. Main Currents in Theater. (4) Lecture, three hours. Critical examination of leading theories of theater from 1887 to the present. Study and discussion of modern styles of production.

106. History of American Theater and Drama. (4) Lecture, three hours. Survey of key works of American dramatic literature and landmarks of American theater history. Letter grading.

107. Drama of Diversity. (4) Lecture, three hours. Investigation of diversity in American society as manifested in dramatic works and theatrical presentations. Letter grading.

108. Special Topics in History and Criticism. (4) Lecture, three hours. Investigation of selected topics of diversity in American society as manifested in dramatic works and theatrical presentations. Letter grading.

111A. Selected Topics on History of European Theater from Primitive Times to 1640. (4) Lecture, three hours. Investigation in depth of a selected area of study in theater history from the Greeks to 1640. May be repeated twice for credit.

111B. Selected Topics on History of European Theater from 1640 to 1900. (4) Lecture, three hours. Investigation in depth of a selected area of study in theater history from the Renaissance through 1900. May be repeated twice for credit.

M112. Interpreting Performance: Examination of Social, Historical, and Cultural Models for Performing Arts. (5) (Same as Honors Collegium M154.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, two hours. Examination of nature of performance in theory and practice and of social, historical, and cultural contexts in which performance traditions have evolved. Attendance at approximately five designated performances/events required. P/NP or letter grading.

152A-152B. Lighting Design. (4-4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Investigation of principles and techniques of lighting design for theater and television. Study of lighting, with emphasis on imagination, text analysis, metaphor, and conceptualization. Investigation of composition and control of light and color in relation to the actor.

C152C. Lighting Design for Television. (4) Lecture/studio. Study of current professional lighting design practices in television for single- and multiple-camera production. Concurrently scheduled with course C452C. Letter grading.

153A-153B. Costume Design. (4-4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Letter grading.

C153C. Costume Design for Film and Television. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Study of current professional costume design and wardrobe practices in film and television, including effect of differing media on design choices. Concurrently scheduled with course C453C. Letter grading.

154A-154B. Sound Design. (4-4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Letter grading.

154A. Study of recording, mixing, editing, and playback of sound effects, voice, and music in the theater.

154B. Introduction to use of delay, equalization, and microphone placement for theater sound reinforcement. Study of creation of sound effects, control of MIDI data, and design techniques for musical theater.

C154C. Sound for Film and Television. (4) Lecture/studio. Study of current professional sound recording, rerecording, mixing, and synchronization practices for film and television. Concurrently scheduled with course C454C. Letter grading.

C155A-C155H. Graphic Representation of Design. (2 each) Studio. Concurrently scheduled with courses C455A-C455H. Letter grading:

C155A. Perspective Drawing. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Introduction to use of pencil and pen to communicate scenic designs, including one- and two-point perspective, form light, shade, and textures. Letter grading.

C155B. Watercolor Rendering. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of watercolor techniques as they relate to interpretation of scenic designs, including painting of brick, wood, stone, fabrics, and other surfaces. Letter grading.

C155C. Marker Rendering. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study and practice of marker rendering techniques as a means of communication for scenic and costume designers. Letter grading.

C155D. Model Making. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of the model for representation of scenic designs from initial working prototypes to finished color models. Use of wide variety of materials and techniques for execution of the model. Letter grading.

C155E. Life Drawing. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study and practice in drawing of human form. Letter grading.

C155F. Costume Rendering. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of techniques for rendering theatrical costumes, with emphasis on figure, clothing, and fabrics. Letter grading.

C155G. Scene Painting Techniques. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of scenic painting techniques and materials and their realization of color design and elevations. May be repeated once for credit. Letter grading.

C155H. Selected Topics in Graphic Representation of Design. (2) Studio, six hours. Group study of selected subjects in techniques for interpretation of design for theater. May be repeated for a maximum of 4 units. Letter grading.

C156A. Introduction to Computer-Assisted Drafting. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of computer-assisted design for theater, film, and television. Introduction to computer drafting, drawing and editing techniques, drawing floor plans, and elevation drawings. Concurrently scheduled with course C456A. Letter grading.

C156B. Introduction to Computer-Assisted Design. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of computer-assisted design for theater, film, and television. Investigation of computer-assisted design techniques, including lighting designs, use of symbol libraries, and pictorial. Introduction to computer-assisted drafting. Concurrently scheduled with course C456B. Letter grading.

C156C. Introduction to Computer-Assisted Rendering. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of computer design for theater, film, and television. Investigation of three-dimensional computer drawing: wire-frame perspective drawing and photo-realistic computer rendering techniques. Concurrently scheduled with course C456C. Letter grading.

C157A-C157B-C157C. Costume Construction Techniques. (2-2-2) Studio, four hours. Study of theory and application of drafting, pattern making, fitting, and construction techniques for period costumes and undergarments to achieve an authentic-appearing costume using contemporary methods. Concurrently scheduled with courses C457A-C457B-C457C.

C157A. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Introduction to draping, pattern grading fitting, and slash and spread adaptation. Letter grading. C157B. Requisite: course C157A. Introduction to costume drafting, construction of period undergarments. C157C. Requisites: courses C157A, C157B. Draping, patterning, and fitting techniques for period garments.

C158A. Scenic Design Technology. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Investigation of materials, systems, and techniques for realization of scenic designs for theater, film, and television. Study of advanced techniques and materials for construction, finishing, and rigging of scenery and properties. Concurrently scheduled with course C458A. Letter grading.

C158B. Lighting Design Technology. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Investigation of materials, systems, and techniques for realization of lighting designs for theater, film, and television. Study of design, operation, and performance of lighting instruments, dimming equipment, and control systems, including automated fixtures, projection equipment, and computer systems for lighting. Concurrently scheduled with course C458B. Letter grading.

C158C. Sound Design Technology. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Investigation of materials, systems, and techniques for realization of sound designs for theater, film, and television. Study of operation and performance of equipment for recording, mixing, and reproduction of theater sound. Concurrently scheduled with course C458C. Letter grading.

159. Design Portfolio Project. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Preparation of complete designs and drawings for a production and assembly of a design portfolio and résumé. Projects prepared under guidance of a faculty adviser. Letter grading.

160. Fundamentals of Play Direction. (5) Lecture, two hours; laboratory, four hours. Required of Theater majors. Course 121 may be taken concurrently. Basic theories of play direction and their application through preparation of scenes under rehearsal conditions.

441C. Investigation of lighting design in production, musical theater, opera, touring, and repertory situations. Study of analysis of script and score for lighting designer. May be repeated once for credit.

441D. Scenic Projection and Media Techniques. (4) Lecture/laboratory. Designed for graduate students. Advanced study and practice in scenic projection and media techniques, with emphasis on analysis, design, and execution of theatrical projection and photographic technique for the stage.

442A-442B-442C. Costume Design. (4-4-4) Lecture/studio. Advanced study and practice in costume design for theater. Imagination as impetus for design, text analysis, metaphor, and conceptualization. Investigation of design research process, period style, and character analysis leading to visual presentation of the design. Study of costume design for theatrical productions, ballet, opera, and musical theater. May be repeated once for credit. Letter grading.

443. Problems in Design. (2 or 4) Lecture/laboratory, four hours (additional hours as required). Study and practice in design techniques for theater. May be repeated for a maximum of 12 units.

C444A-C444B-C444C. Advanced Sound Design. (4-4-4) (Formerly numbered 444A-444B-444C.) Lecture, four hours; laboratory, four hours. Concurrently scheduled with courses C144A-C144B-C144C. Letter grading:

C444A. (4) Lecture, four hours; laboratory, four hours. Study of sound and acoustics as they relate to performance environments, techniques associated with recording, mixing, processing, automation, and reproduction of dialogue, effects, and music tracks for theater sound design. May be repeated once for credit. Letter grading.

C444B. (4) Lecture, four hours; laboratory, four hours. Advanced study and practice in preparation and recording of theater sound designs, with emphasis on analysis of script and score, conceptual development of the design, and multitrack recording techniques to realize the design. May be repeated once for credit. Letter grading.

C444C. (4) Lecture, four hours; laboratory, four hours. Study and practice in processing and mixing of live and recorded sound; mix-down of multitrack recordings; preparation of sound tracks and sound reinforcement in the theater. Study of creation of sound effects, control of MIDI data, and design techniques for music theater. May be repeated once for credit. Letter grading.

C451C. Production Design for Film and Television. (4) Lecture/studio. Study of role of art director. Production design for single- and multiple-camera production and set decoration. Concurrently scheduled with course C151C. Letter grading.

C452C. Lighting Design for Television. (4) Lecture/studio. Study of current professional lighting design practices in television for single- and multiple-camera production. Concurrently scheduled with course C152C. Letter grading.

C453C. Costume Design for Film and Television. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Study of current professional costume design and wardrobe practices in film and television, including effect of differing media on design choices. Concurrently scheduled with course C153C. Letter grading.

C454C. Sound for Film and Television. (4) Lecture/studio. Study of current professional sound recording, rerecording, mixing, and synchronization practices for film and television. Concurrently scheduled with course C154C. Graduate students expected to produce designs demonstrating a higher level of proficiency and skill. Letter grading.

C455A-C455H. Graphic Representation of Design. (2 each) Studio. Concurrently scheduled with courses C155A-C155H. Letter grading:

C455A. Perspective Drawing. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Introduction to use of pencil and pen to communicate scenic designs, including one- and two-point perspective, form light, shade, and textures. Graduate students expected to produce drawings demonstrating a higher level of proficiency and skill. Letter grading.

C455B. Watercolor Rendering. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of watercolor techniques as they relate to interpretation of scenic designs, including painting of brick, wood, stone, fabrics, and other surfaces. Graduate students expected to produce drawings demonstrating a higher level of proficiency and skill. Letter grading.

C455C. Marker Rendering. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study and practice of marker rendering techniques as a means of communication for scenic and costume designers. Letter grading.

C455D. Model Making. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of the model for representation of scenic designs from initial working prototypes to finished color models. Use of wide variety of materials and techniques for execution of the model. Graduate students expected to produce models demonstrating a higher level of proficiency and skill. Letter grading.

C455E. Life Drawing. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study and practice in drawing of human form. Letter grading.

C455F. Costume Rendering. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of techniques for rendering theatrical costumes, with emphasis on figure, clothing, and fabrics. Letter grading.

C455G. Scene Painting Techniques. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of scenic painting techniques and materials and their realization of color design and elevations. May be repeated once for credit. Letter grading.

C455H. Selected Topics in Graphic Representation of Design. (2) Studio, six hours. Group study of selected subjects in techniques for interpretation of design for theater. May be repeated for a maximum of 4 units. Letter grading.

C456A. Introduction to Computer-Assisted Drafting. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of computer-assisted design for theater, film, and television. Introduction to computer drafting, drawing and editing techniques, drawing floor plans, and elevation drawings. Concurrently scheduled with course C156A. Letter grading.

C456B. Introduction to Computer-Assisted Design. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of computer-assisted design for theater, film, and television. Investigation of computer-assisted design techniques, including lighting designs, use of symbol libraries, and pictorial. Introduction to computer-assisted drafting. Concurrently scheduled with course C156B. Letter grading.

C456C. Introduction to Computer-Assisted Rendering. (2) Studio, four hours. Requisite: course 147A or 147B. Study of computer design for theater, film, and television. Investigation of three-dimensional computer drawing: wire-frame perspective drawing and photo-realistic computer rendering techniques. Concurrently scheduled with course C156C. Letter grading.

C457A-C457B-C457C. Costume Construction Techniques. (2-2-2) Studio, four hours. Study of theory and application of drafting, pattern making, fitting, and construction techniques for period costumes and undergarments to achieve an authentic-appearing costume using contemporary methods. Concurrently scheduled with courses C157A-C157B-C157C.
C457A. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Introduction to draping, pattern grading fitting, and slash and spread adaptation. C457B. Requisite: course C457A. Introduction to costume drafting, construction of period undergarments. C457C. Requisites: courses C457A, C457B. Draping, patterning, and fitting techniques for period garments.

C458A. Scenic Design Technology. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Investigation of materials, systems, and techniques for realization of scenic designs for theater, film, and television. Study of advanced techniques and materials for construction, finishing, and rigging of scenery and properties. Concurrently scheduled with course C158A. Letter grading.

C458B. Lighting Design Technology. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Investigation of materials, systems, and techniques for realization of lighting designs for theater, film, and television. Study of design, operation, and performance of lighting instruments, dimming equipment, and control systems, including automated fixtures, projection equipment, and computer systems for lighting. Concurrently scheduled with course C158B. Letter grading.

C458C. Sound Design Technology. (4) Lecture/studio. Requisites: courses 14A, 14B, 14C. Investigation of materials, systems, and techniques for realization of sound designs for theater, film, and television. Study of operation and performance of equipment for recording, mixing, and reproduction of theater sound. Concurrently scheduled with course C158C. Letter grading.

459A-459B. Directing for Theater, Film, and Television. (4-4) Lecture, three hours. Limited to graduate theater students. Analysis and exploration, with specific scenes, of differences and many similarities in directorial approach to same literary material in three media.

460AF-460AW-460AS. Contemporary Issues in Direction. (1-1-1) Discussion, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Discussion of role of director in contemporary professional practice. Review discussion and critique of directing projects. May be repeated for a maximum of 4 units. Letter grading.

460B-460C. Problems in Advanced Direction for the Stage. (4-4) Lecture, to be arranged. Limited to M.F.A. candidates. Discussion and critique of work in progress. 460B. Preparation and presentation of a published play under rehearsal conditions. 460C. Preparation and presentation of a full-length original play under rehearsal conditions.

462. Advanced Directing. (8 or 12) Studio, 12 or 30 hours. Designed for graduate students. Advanced problems in directing for theater, film, and television. May be taken for a maximum of 24 units. Letter grading.

463. Production Project in Direction for the Stage (8 or 12 units). Studio, 24 hours. Designed for graduate students. Creative participation as director in conceptualization and preparation of a dramatic work. Letter grading.

C472. Production and Performance Laboratory. (2 to 8) Laboratory, to be arranged. Limited to M.F.A. candidates. Credit for creative production projects required of all M.F.A. students. May be repeated three times for a maximum of 16 units. Concurrently scheduled with courses C172 and C272.

474. Projects in Theater Design. (2 or 4) Discussion, three hours; laboratory, 12 hours to be arranged. Designed for graduate students. Study and practice in preparation and performance of dramatic works for public performances as a contributing artistic member of a departmental production. Creative responsibilities include designer, technical supervisor, production manager, choreographer, or dramaturge. May be repeated for a maximum of 16 units. Letter grading.

495A-495B-495C. Practicum and Practice in Teaching Theater. (2-2-2) Seminar, to be arranged; discussion, two hours. Limited to Ph.D. students. Study and practice of teaching theater at university level. Orientation and preparation of graduate (Ph.D.) students who have responsibility to assist in teaching undergraduate courses in department. Discussion of problems common to the teaching experience. Letter grading.

498. Professional Internship in Theater, Film, and Television. (4, 8, or 12) Full- or part-time at a studio or on a professional project. Designed for advanced M.F.A. students. Internship at various film, television, or theater facilities accentuating creative contribution, organization, and work of professionals in their various specialties. Given only when projects can be scheduled.

501. Cooperative Program. (2 to 8) Preparation: consent of UCLA graduate adviser and graduate dean, and host campus instructor, department chair, and graduate dean. Used to record enrollment of UCLA students in courses taken under cooperative arrangements with USC. S/U grading.

596A. Directed Individual Studies: Research. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for graduate students. May be repeated with consent of instructor.

596B. Directed Individual Studies: Writing. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for graduate students. May be repeated with consent of instructor.

596C. Directed Individual Studies: Directing. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for graduate students. May be repeated with consent of instructor.

596D. Directed Individual Studies: Design. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for graduate students. May be repeated with consent of instructor.

596E. Directed Individual Studies: Acting. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for graduate students. May be repeated with consent of instructor.

596F. Directed Individual Studies: Production. (2 to 12) Tutorial, to be arranged. Designed for graduate students. May be repeated with consent of instructor.

597. Preparation for Ph.D. Qualifying Examinations in Theater Arts. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be repeated for a maximum of 12 units. S/U grading.

598. M.A. Thesis in Theater Arts. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: advancement to M.A. candidacy. Research and writing for M.A. thesis. May be repeated for a maximum of 12 units. S/U grading.

599. Ph.D. Dissertation in Theater Arts. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Preparation: advancement to Ph.D. candidacy. Research and writing for Ph.D. dissertation. May be repeated for a maximum of 12 units. S/U grading.

Scope and Objectives

The professional urban planner works on the creation and management of the urban environment, including its physical, economic, and social elements. Housing, transportation, air and water quality, the preservation of historic communities, and the development of community-level economic and employment programs are some of the tasks undertaken by recent graduates of the UCLA Department of Urban Planning. Graduates have taken positions in local, state, and national governments, and increasingly with nonprofit and private companies whose products and services affect the urban environment. While most UCLA graduates find positions in the U.S., the program offers the opportunity to specialize in development planning abroad, including rural development, and many graduates have found positions in Latin America, Africa, and Asia.

The program offers a two-year Master of Arts degree and a Ph.D. degree. Concurrent degree programs allow students to combine study for an M.A. in Urban Planning with work toward an M.B.A. in the John E. Anderson Graduate School of Management, a J.D. in the School of Law, an M.Arch. I in the Department of Architecture and Urban Design, or an M.A. in Latin American Studies.

The department takes pride in its collegial atmosphere. It features a lively mix of students from diverse academic backgrounds, drawn from many foreign countries and from every avenue of American life. It includes many members of racial and ethnic minority groups, and more than half the students are women. Student organizations provide an interesting program of extracurricular activities.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of Urban Planning offers Master of Arts (M.A.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Urban Planning. Four concurrent degree programs (Urban Planning M.A./Architecture M.Arch. I, Urban Planning M.A./Latin American Studies M.A., Urban Planning M.A./Law J.D., and Urban Planning M.A./Management M.B.A.) are also offered.

Urban Planning*Lower Division Course

88. Lower Division Seminar: Special Topics in Urban Planning. (4) Seminar, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Prerequisite: satisfaction of Subject A requirement. Variable topics seminar which examines specific issues or problems and ways that professionals in urban planning approach study of them. Students define, prepare, and present their own research projects with guidance of a professional school faculty member. Letter grading.

Upper Division Courses

M121. Issues in Latina/Latino Poverty. (4) (Same as Chicana and Chicano Studies M121.) Lecture, three hours. Examination of nature and extent of urban and rural poverty confronting Latina/Latino population in the U.S. Special emphasis on antipoverty policies of government and nonprofit organizations and social planning and economic development strategies. Attention also to literature on the underclass. Letter grading.

M122. Planning Issues in Latina/Latino Communities. (4) (Same as Chicana and Chicano Studies M122.) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of socioeconomic, demographic, and political forces that shape low-income communities and analyses of planning intervention strategies. Emphasis on community and economic development and environmental equity. Letter grading.

CM128. Global Environment and Development: Problems and Issues. (4) (Same as Geography M128.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Prerequisite: Geography 5. Designed for juniors/seniors. Questions of population, resource use, Third World poverty, and the environment. Analysis of global economic restructuring and its connections to changing organization of production and resulting environmental impacts. Examination of emergent local and regional coalitions for self-reliance and sustainable development. Case studies from Africa, Latin America, Asia, and the U.S. Concurrently scheduled with course C266. P/NP or letter grading.

M149. Transportation Geography. (4) (Same as Geography M149.) Study of geographical aspects of transportation, focusing on characteristics and functions of the various modes and on complexities of intra-urban transport.

C184. Looking at Los Angeles. (4) Discussion, three hours. Introduction to physical form and history of Los Angeles, with emphasis on visual observation of the city as a skill for architects and planners. Field trips throughout the city. Concurrently scheduled with course C284. Letter grading.

187. Planning for Minority Communities. (4) (Formerly numbered 197.) Lecture, three hours. Introduction to inner-city policy issues on three separate levels: (1) each student develops a comprehensive inner-city urban program using materials from Alternatives Inner-City Future Exercise, (2) each student is expected to identify value assumptions and theories of social justice implicit or explicit in alternative intervention programs, and (3) each student is expected to participate in class discussions that emphasize minority issues which affect implementation. P/NP or letter grading.

CM189. Environmentalism: Past, Present, and Future. (4 to 6) (Same as Geography M115.) Discussion, three hours; optional field study, five to 10 hours. Exploration of history, politics, and theories of environmental movements, dynamics of race, class, and gender in relation to environmental agendas, and potential role of environmentalism in reshaping our society. Readings, discussion, and research papers. Offered annually as a graduate research seminar and biannually as an undergraduate upper division lecture and field studies program. Concurrently scheduled with course C265. P/NP or letter grading.

M190. Human Environment: Introduction to Architecture and Urban Planning. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design M190.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Kinds of problems that arise in creating and maintaining an environment for urban activities, and approaches and methods of architecture and urban planning in helping to cope with such problems. Complexities involved in giving expression to human needs and desires in provision of shelters and movement systems, to possibilities and limitations of technology and building forms, and to issues involved in relating the human-made to the natural environment. Students encouraged to comprehend major urban issues both as citizens and as potential technical experts.

191. Introduction to Cities and Planning. (4) Survey of urban history and evolution in the U.S., urban social theory, current growth trends, system of cities, urban economy and economic restructuring, traditional and alternative location theories, urban transportation, and residential location and segregation. P/NP or letter grading.

192. Urban Policy and Planning. (4) Examination of current urban planning and policy issues and debates, such as normative theories of good urban form, metropolitan organization and governance, economic development and growth management, edge cities, spatial mismatch hypothesis, urban poverty, racial/ethnic inequality, gender and urban structure, sustainability, and future of cities. P/NP or letter grading.

193. Special Topics in Urban Policy and Research. (4) Lecture, three hours. Examination of a particular planning/policy subfield (e.g., economic development, environmental planning, housing and community development, international planning and development, land use, or urban design) in some depth. Specific topic area rotates depending on instructor. May be repeated for credit with topic change. P/NP or letter grading.

M194. Women and the City. (4) (Same as Women's Studies M194.) Lecture, three hours. Examination of relationship between women and cities: (1) how cities have affected women's opportunities for economic and social equality, (2) women's contributions to development of U.S. cities, and (3) contemporary strategies and efforts to create urban environments that reflect women's needs and interests. P/NP or letter grading.

M195. Policy, Planning, and Community. (4) (Same as Asian American Studies M108.) Lecture, three hours; field laboratory. Project-oriented methods course on conducting needs assessment in Asian American communities. Geographic information systems to be used to define problems and needs. Letter grading.

C196. Southern California Regional Economy. (4) Lecture, three hours. Introduction to regional economy, with emphasis on Los Angeles. Key economic sectors, labor market composition, and review of conflicting portrayals depicting dynamics of region. Two all-day bus tours of key economic regions and guest lectures by regional experts included. Concurrently scheduled with course C237C. Letter grading.

199. Special Studies. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. Independent research or investigation on a selected topic to be arranged with a faculty member. May be repeated for credit.

Graduate Courses

M201. Theories of Architecture. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design M201.) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of conceptual and historical structures that shape current issues in architectural theory. Readings in primary texts serve as framework for understanding the nature of speculative inquiry in an architectural context. Letter grading.

M202A. Public Control of Land Development. (3 to 6) (Same as Law M286.) Lecture, three hours. Analysis of legal and constitutional constraints on land-use planning and development; administrative and environmental regulatory processes, including relationship between law and planning, formulating land-use legislation, zoning, subdivision controls, eminent domain, taxation, urban development, environmental law, and negotiation. Theory and doctrine applied to case studies; research project/paper and/or examination required.

M202C. Seminar: Urban Affairs. (3 to 6) (Same as Law M526.) Seminar, two hours; two field trips. Consideration of selected aspects of housing law and policy, including current federal and state housing subsidies; remedies of housing consumers; impacts of market discrimination against children, racial minorities, and women; and local governmental laws influencing cost and supply, such as antispellulation and rent control legislation. Catalytic role of economic and community development in expansion of housing supply also considered.

M204. Research Design and Methods for Social Policy. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M218.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Limited to graduate students. How to become more sophisticated consumers and producers of qualitative and quantitative policy research. In first half of course, formal principles of research design; in second half, various data collection methods, including ethnography, interviewing, and survey design. Letter grading.

205. Seminar: Master's Thesis/Comprehensive Examination. (4) Seminar, three hours. Designed for second-year M.A. students. Preparation for student thesis research and client projects. Through discussion of each other's work, participants learn how to design and implement a research/client project. Administrative issues and common implementation problems. S/U or letter grading.

M206A. Introduction to Geographic Information Systems. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M224A.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Preparation: one graduate-level statistics course, familiarity with one of the packaged statistics programs. Principles of Geographic Information Systems (GIS) and applied techniques of using spatial data for mapping and analysis. Topics include data quality, data manipulation, spatial analysis, and information systems. Use of mapping and spatial analysis to address a planning problem. Letter grading.

M206B. Advanced Geographic Information Systems. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M224B.) Lecture, four hours; laboratory, four hours. Requisite: course M206A or Policy Studies M224A. Principles and skills of geographic analysis and modeling; managing, processing, and interpreting spatial data. Especially useful for students interested in environmental, demographic, suitability, and transportation-related research. Scripts (Avenue), modeling (Spatial Analyst), network analysis, and transportation modeling (TransCAD). Letter grading.

207. Public Resource Allocation. (4) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: passing score on microeconomics examination given first day of class. Practical use of economics in analyzing public resource allocation problems. Topics include review of marginal analysis, difference between equity and efficiency, public goods and free rider problem, environmental pricing, public service pricing, and conflicts between individual and collective rationality.

208. Seminar: Advanced Research Methods. (4) Seminar, three hours. Required of Ph.D. students in their first year. Advanced critical analysis of research design and epistemology; quantitative and qualitative methodologies prominent in social sciences and field of urban planning. S/U grading.

209. Special Topics in Planning Theory. (4) Lecture, three hours. Topics in planning theory selected by faculty members. May be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

210A. Introduction to Planning Theory. (4) Lecture, three hours. Historical introduction to major ideas and theories of planning which have influenced its development from the early 19th century to the present. Letter grading.

210B. Comparative History of Planning Practice. (4) Lecture, three hours. Limited to Ph.D. and advanced M.A. students. Examination of history and historical method in planning through group discussion, oral presentations, and written assignments. Organization of course into three parts to develop critical historical skills: historiography and historical methods, critique of planning histories of Los Angeles, and writing of urban histories. S/U or letter grading.

210C. Colloquium in Planning Theory. (4) Lecture, one hour; discussion, two hours. Requisite: course 210A. Limited to Ph.D. students. Introduction to some central theoretical issues of contemporary planning.

211. Law and the Quality of Urban Life. (4) Lecture, three hours. Introduction to law as an urban system, directed primarily toward those interested in intersection of law and policy; broad array of urban issues examined, as is law's role as a partial cause and cure of urban problems. Examination of law as a changing process rather than a collection of principles, so that students develop facility to interact with law and lawyers in a positive and forceful manner.

212. International/Comparative Planning Workshop. (4) Discussion, three hours; field trips, five to 10 days. Topics of planning and policy in various international or domestic sites. Topics may include urban design, urban development, urban governance, land use, environmental issues, transportation, infrastructure planning, housing development, community development, and/or physical planning. May be repeated for credit. Letter grading.

M215. Spatial Statistics. (4) (Same as Geography M272 and Statistics M222.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Survey of modern methods used in analysis of spatial data. Implementation of various techniques using real data sets from diverse fields, including neuroimaging, geography, seismology, demography, and environmental sciences. S/U or letter grading.

217A-217B. Comprehensive Planning Project. (4-4) Seminar, three hours. Designed for second-year students. Comprehensive project brings together students of varying backgrounds and interests in joint solution of an urban planning problem. Each project spans two terms. Successful completion of project meets requirements of Comprehensive Examination Plan A of master's program. S/U grading.

218. Graphics and Urban Information. (4) Lecture, two hours; studio, one hour. Presentation of basic graphic methods and tools for conceptualization, analysis, and documentation of the built environment. Development of fundamental skills of graphic ideation and communication. Letter grading.

219. Special Topics in the Built Environment. (4) Lecture, three hours. Topics in the built environment selected by faculty members. May be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

220A. Quantitative Analysis in Urban Planning I. (4) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: passing score on basic mathematics proficiency examination given first day of class. Introduction to mathematical and statistical concepts and methods with applications in urban planning. Review of basic mathematical concepts fundamental to planning methods; linear and nonlinear functions focusing on growth curves and mathematics of finance; data measurement and display; descriptive statistics and probability. Introduction to use of computer as a tool in analysis of planning-related data.

220B. Quantitative Analysis in Urban Planning II. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 220A or equivalent as demonstrated by passing score on mathematics proficiency examination given first day of course 220A. Introduction to concepts of statistical inference and modeling, with emphasis on urban planning applications. Topics include sampling, hypothesis testing, analysis of variance, correlation, and simple and multiple regression. Use of computer as a tool in statistical analysis and modeling.

221. Evaluation Methods. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 207, 220A. Examination of methods used to evaluate efficiency and effectiveness of government programs and investment projects. Theory and practice of evaluation, with emphasis on techniques of cost-effectiveness analysis, cost-benefit analysis, discounting, sensitivity analysis, target efficiency, fiscal audits, and evaluation design.

222. Introduction to Histories and Theories of Urban Planning. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Exploration of planning thought and practice over time, leading authors and key issues in field of planning, traditional and insurgent histories of planning, and alternative approaches to planning for multiple and pluralistic publics. Generally taken Fall Quarter of first year of M.A. program. Letter grading.

223. Professional Development Seminar. (4) Seminar, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Recommended preparation: course 222. Problems of professional practice. Development of methods which integrate theory and practice through readings and individual and collective analyses of each student's fieldwork experience. Students must be working in a field setting to enroll. Job fair is held at end of Fall Quarter to place students in field settings. Students combine course 223 with one term of course 496 to meet fieldwork requirement. Letter grading.

M226A. Introduction to Computer-Aided Architectural Design, Two-Dimensional. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design M226A.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Concepts of hardware, software, and networks; paint, draft, multimedia, DTP, and presentation programs; CAD in an office environment. Letter grading.

M226B. Introduction to Computer-Aided Architectural Design, Three-Dimensional. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design M226B.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Concepts of three-dimensional space, modeling, and virtual reality; file formats; modeling, rendering, and animation programs; video conference. Letter grading.

229. Special Topics in Planning Methods. (4) Lecture, three hours. Topics in planning methodology selected by faculty members. May be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

M230. Introduction to Regional Planning: Evolution of Regional Planning Doctrines. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M241.) Lecture, three hours. Critical and historical survey of evolution of regional planning theory and practice, with particular emphasis on relations between regional planning and developments within Western social and political philosophy. Major concepts include regions and regionalism, territorial community, and social production of space. Letter grading.

M231. Regional Development, Urbanization, and Industrial Policy. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M242.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Survey of regional development, with special reference to "new economic geography" and its relevance for formulation of local economic development policies. Letter grading.

233. Political Economy of Urbanization. (4) Introduction to basic concepts and analytical approaches of urban political economy, with major emphasis on American urban problems. Topics include historical geography of urbanization, development and transformation of urban spatial structure, suburbanization and metropolitan political fragmentation, urban fiscal crisis, and role of urban social movements.

234A. Development Theory. (4) Lecture, three hours. Review of basic literature and schools of thought on development theory through analysis of impact of mercantilism, colonialism, capitalism, and socialism on various urban and rural social and economic structures in the Third World. Presentation, through evaluation of theoretical writings and case studies, of complexity and diversity of developing countries. Emphasis on linkages between policy and rural and urban impacts. Gives students important background for courses 234B, M234C, and many of the other planning courses addressing Third World issues. Letter grading.

234B. Rural Development Issues. (4) Lecture, three hours. Recommended preparation: course 234A. Development more thoroughly of themes raised in earlier courses. Topics may include peasant-ries, development and rural women, agricultural ecology, comparative land reform, agrarian revolution, and special problems of tropical development. May be repeated for credit with consent of instructor. Letter grading.

M234C. Resource-Based Development. (4) (Same as Geography M229.) Discussion, three hours. Recommended preparation: course 234A. Some major issues associated with development of specific natural resources. Topics include nature of particular resource (or region associated with it), its previous management, involvement of the state, corporations, and local groups, and environmental and social impact of its development. Letter grading.

235A-235B. Urbanization in Developing World I, II. (4-4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisite for course 235A: course 234A; for course 235B: course 235A. Questions of urbanization and planning in first term; rural development in second term. Case studies from Latin America, Africa, and Asia. Lectures, student presentations, and policy debates. Letter grading.

M236A. Theories of Regional Economic Development I. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M240.) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Introduction to theories of location of economic activity, trade, and other forms of contact between regions, process of regional growth and decline, reasons for different levels of economic development, relations between more and less developed regions. Letter grading.

236B. Globalization. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course M236A. Application of theories of regional economic development, location, and trade learned in course M236A to contemporary process known as globalization. Examination of nature and effects of globalization on development, employment, and social structure, along with implications for policy. Letter grading.

237A. Sectoral Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours; laboratory, one hour. Introduction to methods and procedures of sectoral investigation as applied to regions, industries, companies, and their labor forces. Current theories and conceptions of industrial structure and industrial change. Investigation of characteristics and trends of industry subsectors in Los Angeles resulting in industry profile that can serve as aid to planning and shaping economic development. Letter grading.

237B. Urban and Regional Economic Development Applications. (4) Lecture, three hours. Survey and analysis of economic development strategies in the U.S. Because economic development strategies seek to modify or shape existing conditions, focus on how policies attempt to harness dynamics associated with new forms of industrialization, intensified global competition, and interrelationships among capital, labor, and the state. Letter grading.

C237C. Southern California Regional Economy. (4) Lecture, three hours. Introduction to regional economy, with emphasis on Los Angeles. Key economic sectors, labor market composition, and review of conflicting portrayals depicting dynamics of region. Two all-day bus tours of key economic regions and guest lectures by regional experts included. Concurrently scheduled with course C196. Letter grading.

238. Advanced Seminar: Urban and Regional Development. (4) Seminar, two hours; discussion, two hours. Designed for Ph.D. students. Advanced research seminar on major issues in urban and regional development theory and/or policy. Topics usually reflect faculty research projects and change from year to year. May be repeated for credit.

239. Special Topics in Regional and International Development. (4) Lecture, three hours. Topics in urban and regional development selected by faculty members. May be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

M240. Local Government. (2 to 6) (Same as Law M285.) Lecture, three hours. Analysis of structure and function of local, regional, and state government in historical and institutional context: organization, finance, intergovernmental relations, role of judiciary, public services, lawmaking, citizen participation through initiatives and referenda, and government tort liability. Letter grading.

M241. Foundations of Social Welfare Policy. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M210 and Social Welfare M221A.) Lecture, three hours. Nature, roles, and history of welfare institutions in different societies; applicable social system theory of different components of the welfare system; theory and research about welfare policies and organizational forms. S/U or letter grading.

242. Locational Conflict. (4) Discussion, three hours. Conceptual foundation for understanding underlying sources of locational conflict across cities and regions; exploration of examples aimed at varying types of controversial facilities and land uses in human service and environmental arenas; development of strategies for addressing, overcoming, and coping with locational conflict. Letter grading.

M243. Privatization, Regulation, and Public Finance. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M293.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Requisite: Policy Studies 201. Evaluation of economic and political determinants of trend toward privatizing public services, and equity and efficiency outcomes of this trend as expressed through new pricing, financing, and service-level policies. Exploration of new regulatory role this trend implies for state and local governments. Letter grading.

245. Urban Public Finance. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 207, 220A. Theory and practice of urban public finance, with emphasis on methods used to fund public infrastructure. Topics include fiscal impact analysis of real estate development, effects of taxes on land-use decisions, benefit assessments to finance neighborhood public investment, private and intergovernmental contracting as method of supplying urban public services, tax increment finance for urban redevelopment, and municipal bond market.

M246. Poverty, the Poor, and Welfare Reform. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M214 and Social Welfare M290L.) Lecture, three hours. Major policy and research issues concerning poverty and social welfare policy directed toward the poor in the U.S. S/U or letter grading.

247. Race, Gender, Culture, and Cities. (4) Discussion, three hours. Exploration of multicultural context of contemporary U.S. cities, with focus on changing social and spatial relations of ethnic communities and their policy implications. Topics relate the new diversity and gender with global restructuring, new urban economy, and policies of workplace, housing, schools, and governance.

M248. Law and the Poor. (4) (Same as Law M215, Policy Studies M295, and Social Welfare M290R.) Lecture, three hours. Designed for graduate students. Study of major income-maintenance programs in the U.S., with emphasis on interaction of moral attitudes toward the poor and structure and implementation of the law, policy, and administration. Current reform consensus and major reforms. Letter grading.

249. Special Topics in Social Policy and Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Topics in social policy and analysis selected by faculty members. May be repeated for credit. S/U or letter grading.

250. Introduction to Social Policy. (4) Lecture, three hours. Analysis of demographic changes, history, needs, and ideological debates which affect development of social policy in the U.S., compared with Western Europe.

251. Planning for Multiple Publics. (4) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of planning needs of various social groups in urban settings, using existing literature and research studies to determine appropriate mechanisms of planning for multiple publics. Analysis of communities in Los Angeles metropolitan area to gain insights into practical, theoretical, and methodological problems of planning for multiple publics. Generally taken in first year.

252. Social Impact Analysis. (4) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of ways of assessing and determining social impacts on communities resulting from large-scale planning projects. Students develop mitigation measures to address identified adverse consequences. S/U or letter grading.

253. Sprawl. (4) (Not the same as course 253 prior to Fall Quarter 2002.) Lecture, three hours. Suburbs are not new, but metropolitan areas in the U.S. and elsewhere continue to grow rapidly at their edges in ways that many consider poorly planned. Discussion of causes and impacts of sprawl and what, if anything, should be done about it. Letter grading.

M254. Transportation, Land Use, and Urban Form. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M220.) Lecture, three hours. Historical evolution of urban form and transportation systems, intrametropolitan location theory, recent trends in urban form, spatial mismatch hypothesis, jobs/housing balance, transportation in the strong central city and polycentric city, neotraditional town planning debate, rail transit and urban form. Letter grading.

M255. Transportation Planning. (4) (Formerly numbered 255.) (Same as Policy Studies M244.) Lecture, three hours. Examination of how planners analyze, manage, and operate transportation systems. Measuring system performance, intelligent transportation systems, transportation system demand management, parking management, freight movement and facilities, public transit evaluation and management, paratransit, bicycle and pedestrian planning, transportation for elderly and disabled. Letter grading.

M256. Travel Behavior Analysis. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M221.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 207 and 220B, or Policy Studies 201 and 203. Descriptions of travel patterns in metropolitan areas, recent trends and projections into the future, overview of travel forecasting methods, trip generation, trip distribution, mode split traffic assignment, critique of traditional travel forecasting methods and new approaches to travel behavior analysis. Letter grading.

M257. Transportation Economics, Finance, and Policy. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M222.) Lecture, three hours. Overview of transportation finance and economics; concepts of efficiency and equity in transportation finance; historical evolution of highway and transit finance; current issues in highway finance; private participation in road finance, toll roads, road costs and cost allocation, truck charges, congestion pricing; current issues in transit finance; transit fare and subsidy policies, contracting and privatization of transit services. Letter grading.

M258. Transportation and Environmental Issues. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M223.) Lecture, three hours. Regulatory structure linking transportation, air quality, and energy issues, chemistry of air pollution, overview of transportation-related approaches to air quality enhancement; new car tailpipe standards; vehicle inspection and maintenance issues; transportation demand management and transportation control measures; alternative fuels and electric vehicles; corporate average fuel economy and global warming issues; growth of automobile worldwide fleet; the automobile in the sustainability debate. Letter grading.

260. Environmental Politics and Governance. (4) (Formerly numbered 260A, 260B.) Lecture, three hours. Environmental planning is more than simply finding problems and fixing them. Each policy must be negotiated and implemented within multiple, complex systems of governance. Institutions and politics matter deeply. Overview of how environmental governance works in practice and how it might be improved. Letter grading.

261. Land-Use Control: Economic and Structural Perspectives. (4) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Comparison of regulatory methods of land-use control to command or planning methods. Basics of land use as a commodity in first part: land economics, land markets. Development, historically, of a structuralist perspective on use of land in cities and regions in second part. Land-use regulation (in third part) in light of first two, to see how effective it is in steering course of land development. Regulatory approach compared with real planning. S/U or letter grading.

M262A. Toxics Reduction: Science, Engineering, and Policy Issues. (4) (Same as Environmental Health Sciences M249.) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 260. Public health experts, industrial engineers, and planners are being asked to assess risks biologically active chemicals present and to take such risks into account in planning process. Examination of potential for toxics reduction and current state of government and industry activities in this area. Letter grading.

262B. Urban Environmental Problems: Water Resources. (4) Lecture, three hours. Water is life and wealth in California, which has world's most extensive long-distance, interbasin water transfer system. To date, water resources planning has been devoted almost exclusively to adding facilities for water delivery. But conflicts over additional developments have basically precluded further extension of this system, despite growing pressures to increase supplies. Examination of environmental impacts, geography, use of water, and consideration of resource planning.

M262C. Pollution Prevention. (2) (Same as Environmental Health Sciences M239.) Seminar, one hour. Designed for graduate students. Series of talks by academics, policymakers, industry representatives, and public interest advocates addressing opportunities for and obstacles to adopting principles of pollution prevention, including several case studies of specific policy and industry initiatives in this area. S/U grading.

263. Natural Resource Conservation. (4) Discussion, three hours. Requisites: courses 260A, 260B. Exploration, through reading, discussion, and student presentations, of meaning of resource conservation, its desirability, and ways of achieving it. Emphasis on integrated management of public lands, though students may attend particularly to a specific resource (minerals, water, timber, wilderness).

M264. Environmental Law. (3 to 6) (Same as Law M290.) Lecture, three to three and one-half hours. Examination of the field of environmental law through analysis of various legal issues and public policy: legal consequences of public decision-making strategies and allocation of primary responsibility for various environmental decisions. Focus on air pollution and Clean Air Act as a means of illustrating policy issues underlying the field.

C265. Environmentalism: Past, Present, and Future. (4 to 6) Discussion, three hours; optional field study, five to 10 hours. Exploration of history, politics, and theories of environmental movements, dynamics of race, class, and gender in relation to environmental agendas, and potential role of environmentalism in reshaping our society. Readings, discussion, and research papers. Offered annually as a graduate research seminar and biannually as an undergraduate upper division lecture and field studies program. Concurrently scheduled with course CM189. S/U or letter grading.

C266. Global Environment and Development: Problems and Issues. (4) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Questions of population, resource use, Third World poverty, and the environment. Analysis of global economic restructuring and its connections to changing organization of production and resulting environmental impacts. Examination of emergent local and regional coalitions for self-reliance and sustainable development. Case studies from Africa, Latin America, Asia, and the U.S. Concurrently scheduled with course CM128. S/U or letter grading.

M267. Environmental and Resource Economics and Policy. (4) (Same as Policy Studies CM250.) Lecture, three hours. Requisites: courses 207 and 220B, or Policy Studies 204 and 208. Survey of ways economics is used to define, analyze, and resolve problems of environmental management. Overview of analytical questions addressed by environmental economists which bear on public policies. Letter grading.

268. Advanced Seminar: Environmental Analysis and Policy. (4) Discussion, three hours. Generally designed for second-year M.A. and Ph.D. students. Exploration of broad issues related to environmental and resource planning. May be repeated for credit.

269. Special Topics in Environmental Analysis and Policy. (2 to 8) Seminar, three hours. Topics in environmental analysis and policy selected by faculty. May be repeated for credit.

M270. Homelessness: Housing and Social Service Issues. (4) (Formerly numbered 270.) (Same as Social Welfare M206A.) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes; one field trip. Review of current status of homelessness: who homeless are, what social services and housing are available, existing and proposed programs — appropriate architecture, management, and sources of funding. Outside speakers include providers of services to the homeless. Letter grading.

271. Community Economic Development. (4) Lecture, three hours. Requisite: course 236B. Introduction to fundamentals of community economic development and neighborhood development strategies. Overview of basic approaches, important concepts, resources and language of the field, and major strategies for revitalization of low-income neighborhoods. Letter grading.

M272. Real Estate Development and Finance. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design M272.) Lecture, two hours; workshop, two hours; outside study, eight hours. Introduction to real estate development process specifically geared to students in planning, architecture, and urban design. Financial decision model, market studies, designs, loan packages, development plan, and feasibility studies. Lectures and projects integrate development process with proposed design solutions which are interactively modified to meet economic feasibility tests. S/U or letter grading.

273. Site Planning. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; laboratory, 90 minutes. Introduction to principles of site planning for urban areas.

274. Introduction to Physical Planning. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Overview of physical planning, land use, site analysis, and surveys; general plans and community plans; environmental review; zoning and ordinances; social impacts.

M275. Community Development and Housing Policies: Roles of State, Civil Society, and Nonprofits. (4) (Formerly numbered 275.) (Same as Policy Studies M243 and Social Welfare M290U.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Examination of role of U.S. housing policy and role of government agencies and community organizations. Is the problem housing or economic development? Should interventions be directed toward inner city housing markets or through neighborhood strategies? What lessons can be learned from experiences of other countries? Letter grading.

M276. Urban Housing and Community Development. (3 to 4) (Same as Law M287.) Lecture, three hours; discussion, one hour. Examination of past 40 years of federal and state programs to stem urban decline and improve housing in the U.S.; comparison and contrast of legal and policy initiatives in areas of public housing, housing segregation, mortgage subsidies, landlord/tenant law, urban renewal, and community organizing. Research paper required. Letter grading.

277. Historic Preservation: Principles and Practices. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Overview of preservation field, including history and theory, current legislation, tax incentives, preservation planning, landmark and district surveys and designations, adaptive reuse, citizen involvement, and social issues.

278. Qualitative Research Methods for Planners and Designers. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Emphasis on conceptualizing research projects using grounded theory; relation to survey data. Techniques include content analysis, user needs analysis, participant observation, questionnaire construction, interview techniques. Projects include students' own research.

279. Seminar: Public Space. (4) Seminar, three hours. Investigation of changes in production, consumption, design, and meaning of public space and analysis of socioeconomic, political, and cultural factors that lie behind them. Letter grading.

280. Nonprofit Housing Development. (4) Discussion, three hours. Overview of basic concepts and skills utilized in nonprofit development initiatives, especially by community-based organizations. Focus on nonprofit provision of subsidized housing, emphasizing way professionals "broker" debt and equity funding from private, governmental, and philanthropic sources. Use of client projects and negotiation exercises. S/U or letter grading.

281. Introduction to History of Built Environment in the U.S. (4) (Formerly numbered 281A.) Lecture, two hours; discussion, one hour. Open to advanced undergraduates with consent of instructor. Introduction to history of physical forms of urbanization in America; survey of economic, political, social, and aesthetic forces behind creation of built environments. S/U or letter grading.

282. Urban Design: Theories, Paradigms, Applications. (4) Lecture, three hours. Discussion and evaluation of philosophical bases, ideologies, and paradigms of urban design in last century; examination of how these are reflected on the built environment of cities. Letter grading.

283. History of the American Household and American Home. (4) Lecture, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Requisite: course 281. Introduction to history of housing design in the U.S., emphasizing changing roles of women and men from Colonial times to the present and effects of these social changes on physical form of the dwelling and settlement. Discussion of concerns of professional architects and planners, as well as activity of bankers, builders, and homemakers.

C284. Looking at Los Angeles. (4) Discussion, three hours. Introduction to physical form and history of Los Angeles, with emphasis on visual observation of the city as a skill for architects and planners. Field trips throughout the city. Concurrently scheduled with course C184. Letter grading.

285. Women and Community Development: Great Gender Debates. (4) Seminar, 90 minutes; discussion, 90 minutes. Relationship between planning, community development, and women, with attention to interaction of gender, race, and class/ethnicity. Examples from domestic and international developments. Alternative theories and methods to close gaps between household needs and urban policies. Preparation of written and oral critical reviews of literature and research paper. Letter grading.

M286. Management Challenges and Tools for Nonprofit Sector. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M226 and Social Welfare M290V.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Fundamental building blocks for successful management in nonprofit sector. Students develop management skills in strategic thinking/problem solving, project management, team building, and negotiation. Use of case studies to troubleshoot critical challenges, from finance to crisis management to marketing, that nonprofit managers typically face. Letter grading.

M287. Nonprofit Sector, State and Civil Society. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M227 and Social Welfare M290S.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Use of political economy perspective to analyze forces that have shaped rise and characteristics of nonprofit sector and its constituent elements. Examination of social history of nonprofit sector in the U.S. Exploration of legal and policy environments and distinct organizational forms. Comparative perspective between the U.S. and other countries. Letter grading.

M288. Leadership, Development, and Governance of Nonprofit Organizations. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M228 and Social Welfare M241E.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Various patterns of community action for attaining social welfare objectives; research and field experience directed toward study of social problems within context of community planning; emerging patterns of physical, economic, and social planning within framework of social change theory. Letter grading.

M290. Strategic Planning for Public and Nonprofit Organizations. (4) (Same as Policy Studies M247 and Social Welfare M241F.) Lecture, three hours; outside study, nine hours. Designed for graduate students. Technical processes of problem solving regarding substantive social welfare problems at community level. This form of community practice fills niche between the professional and knowledge and skill set possessed by agency and program administrators on one hand and by policy analysts and policy-makers on other. Letter grading.

M291. Introduction to Sustainable Architecture and Community Planning. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design CM247A.) Lecture, three hours. Relationship of built environment to natural environment through whole systems approach, with focus on sustainable design of buildings and planning of communities. Emphasis on energy efficiency, renewable energy, and appropriate use of resources, including materials, water, and land. Letter grading.

M292. Elements of Urban Design. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design M271.) Lecture, three hours. Introduction of basic knowledge of elements and methods of urban design. Multidisciplinary approach leading to understanding of political, socio-economic, and technological framework of urban systems and its dynamic interrelations. S/U or letter grading.

M293. Politics, Ideology, and Design. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design M293.) Lecture, three hours. Exploration of cultural and political context of architecture and planning work. Examination of theory and practice from variety of perspectives applied to a set of varied physical environments and to a set of current spatialized concepts. Consideration of theoretical propositions that are shaping present urban and architectural debate and concrete case studies where politics and ideology shape design process. Letter grading.

298. Special Topics in Emerging Planning Issues. (2 to 4) Discussion, two to three hours. Topics in newly emerging planning issues such as role of cutting edge technology, innovative policies, and experimental programs. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

375. Teaching Apprentice Practicum. (1 to 4) Seminar, to be arranged. Preparation: apprentice personnel employment as a teaching assistant, associate, or fellow. Teaching apprenticeship under active guidance and supervision of a regular faculty member responsible for curriculum and instruction at the University. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

M404. Joint Planning/Architecture Studio. (4) (Same as Architecture and Urban Design M404.) Lecture, one hour; discussion, one hour; studio, four hours. Opportunity to work on joint planning/architecture project for a client. Outside speakers; field trips. Examples of past projects include Third Street Housing, Santa Monica; New American House for nontraditional households; Pico-Aliso Housing, Boyle Heights; working with resident leaders at Los Angeles City public housing developments.

M470. Introduction to Occupational and Environmental Health Education. (2 or 4) (Same as Community Health Sciences M470.) Lecture, three hours. Preparation: at least three social sciences courses. Designed to provide students with understanding of problem areas of occupational and environmental health and health education interventions which can be applied. Letter grading.

496. Field Projects. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

501. Cooperative Program. (2 to 8) Preparation: consent of UCLA graduate adviser and graduate dean, and host campus instructor, department chair, and graduate dean. Used to record enrollment of UCLA students in courses taken under cooperative arrangements with USC. S/U grading.

596. Research in Planning. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be repeated for credit.

597. Preparation for M.A. Comprehensive Examination or Ph.D. Qualifying Examinations. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

598. Preparation for M.A. Thesis in Urban Planning. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

599. Ph.D. Dissertation Research in Planning. (2 to 8) Tutorial, to be arranged. May be repeated for credit. S/U grading.

Scope and Objectives

Cities are multifaceted and can usefully be explored from more than one disciplinary perspective. The undergraduate specialization in Urban Studies brings together students and faculty from the Departments of Economics, Geography, History, Political Science, Psychology, and Sociology who share an interest in the modern city. The program gives students a solid grounding in the urban perspectives and methods of at least two departments. The specialization must be taken in conjunction with a major in the social sciences.

Undergraduate Study

Urban Studies Specialization

Students may elect to combine the Urban Studies specialization with a departmental major and may petition to have the area of specialization recognized with the bachelor's degree.

The option of completing an individual major in Urban Studies is also open to qualified students. For more information on individual majors, see the College of Letters and Science section of this catalog.

Students with a departmental major should seek advising in their major department. Those interested in the individual major should consult a Letters and Science counselor.

Courses within the specialization must be taken for a letter grade. The specialization must be taken in conjunction with a major in the division of social sciences.

Preparation for the Specialization

Required: At least five of the following courses appropriate to the courses to be taken in the specialization: Economics 1, 2; Geography 4; Political Science 40; Psychology 10; Sociology 1, M18, 104 or equivalent.

Upper Division Requirements

Required: Nine upper division courses, including (1) at least three courses outside the major department selected from Anthropology 167, Economics 120, Geography 150, Psychology 168, Sociology 158; (2) a minimum of three courses selected from one of the following suites within the major department: Economics 130, 133; Geography 150, 156; History 154A through 154D; Political Science 143A, 143B, 167B; Psychology 127, 135; Sociology 132, 156, 160; (3) a minimum of three courses selected from one of the suites in item 2 in a department outside the major department; (4) internship experience in an urban governmental or community service organization.

Director

Mark S. Litwin, M.D., M.P.H., Director of Medical Student Education

Scope and Objectives

The fundamental goal of the Department of Urology is to teach medical students the general principles of diagnosis and management in diseases of the genitourinary tract. Urology encompasses a wide scope of human illness, including conditions that are congenital and acquired, pediatric and adult, male and female, malignant and benign. The department functions to acquaint students with the skills necessary to manage these conditions in the initial stages and over the long term.

Instruction spans all four years of the undergraduate medical school curriculum but is concentrated during the clinical rotations. Students spend one week on the urology service during the third year and may return for an additional four-week elective rotation during the fourth year. The clinical experience includes time spent in the faculty and resident clinics, on ward rounds, and in didactic conferences that cover general urology, urological subspecialties, uropathology, and uroradiology. Urology teaching settings include the UCLA, Harbor-UCLA, Olive View-UCLA, UCLA-Santa Monica Hospital, and West Los Angeles VA Medical Centers.

Scope and Objectives

The Women's Studies Program, established in 1975, provides interdisciplinary academic programs that span departments, disciplines, and ideologies. The undergraduate program offers a Bachelor of Arts degree and a minor; the graduate program offers the Master of Arts and Ph.D. degrees.

The programs provide students the opportunity to study the full range of human experience and arrangements of social organization from the perspectives of those whose participation has been traditionally distorted, omitted, neglected, or denied — women in their racial, class, sexual, and cultural diversity. Students develop critical reasoning and analytical skills, research and communication skills, a deep appreciation for complexities of power and asymmetries in gender relations across time, class, and cultures, and conceptual tools for social change. Emphasis on multidisciplinary and multiethnic approaches assures a broader exposure to the humanities and social sciences than is commonly available within disciplinary confines. A background in women's studies offers unique contextual validation for today's gender controversies and prepares students for a wide range of career and life choices.

The core faculty members who teach women's studies courses come from various UCLA departments and professional schools. Many professionals within and outside the University contribute their time, expertise, and enthusiasm. A governance committee composed of the chair, faculty members, and graduate and undergraduate student representatives sets program policies and curricula.

The program sponsors two student associations and assists other student groups with extracurricular programming on feminist issues. Research in women's studies is promoted in cooperation with the Center for the Study of Women.

Women's Studies B.A.

The interdisciplinary major in Women's Studies may be taken alone or in conjunction with another Letters and Science major. In the case of a double major, no more than five courses may be applied toward both majors.

Admission

To be admitted to the major, students must have completed Women's Studies 10, be in good standing, and formally register with the program. They are encouraged to declare their major as early as possible and to discuss their proposed course of study with the chair or undergraduate adviser.

Students are encouraged to draw on the University's diverse resources in creating their program of study. They may pursue traditional and/or innovative subjects in fields ranging from the humanities and fine arts to the social and life sciences. In addition to courses on the women's studies approved list, students may petition to have diverse courses accepted, including courses outside the College of Letters and Science, independent studies, or field study courses.

All courses applied toward the major must be taken for a letter grade, and students must have a grade-point average of 2.0 or better in women's studies courses to receive credit for completing the program. Courses in which they receive a grade of C– or lower may not be applied toward the core requirements in the major.

Preparation for the Major

Required: Women's Studies 10. Students must also complete departmental lower division requisites, as applicable, for upper division women's studies courses in the disciplines.

Transfer Students

To be admitted as Women's Studies majors, transfer students with 90 or more units must complete the following introductory courses prior to admission to UCLA: one multidisciplinary feminist perspectives on women and society course and departmental lower division requisite courses.

The Major

The major is designed to (1) impart core concepts in theory and critical analysis, research design, and methods, (2) provide exposure to a range of feminist scholarship across disciplines, and (3) enable students to acquire a depth of knowledge within one or two disciplinary or topical fields of inquiry. To achieve this goal, the major is divided into three categories.

Required: At least 13 upper division courses as follows:

1. Three core courses, including (a) one feminist theory course from Women's Studies 110A or 110B or M192, (b) course 130 or one course on the study of American ethnic minority women from the approved list of women's studies credit courses issued each term by the program, and (c) course 197 (departmental 197 courses may not be applied)
2. A distribution of at least four courses, each from a different department or discipline, selected from the approved list of women's studies courses
3. Six additional concentration courses from one or two of the disciplines in which the core and distribution courses have been taken. Students may petition for interdisciplinary or topical concentrations such as feminist theory, women of color, women's health, or lesbian studies. If two fields are selected, the ratio of the six courses may be divided 3-3 or 4-2

Four units of Women's Studies 199 may be applied toward the concentration requirement for the major. This limit does not apply to Women's Studies 199HA or 199HB.

Honors Program

The honors program is open to advanced junior and senior Women's Studies majors with a 3.4 grade-point average in women's studies courses and a minimum 3.0 overall GPA who have no outstanding Incomplete grades, and to majors who demonstrate ability to do honors work by submitting a paper to the program chair for approval. Students wishing to undertake honors in the major are advised to complete Women's Studies 197 by Spring Quarter of the junior year.

To qualify for honors at graduation, students must successfully complete course 197 and two successive terms of independent studies (courses 199HA, 199HB) with their faculty sponsor and receive a grade of B+ or better on their research paper/project. Course 199HA may be applied toward the concentration requirement; course 199HB is in addition to the minimum required concentration courses. Further information is available from the undergraduate counselor in the program office.

Women's Studies Minor

The Women's Studies minor augments study in a traditional field. Students participating in this program are required to complete both a departmental major and the Women's Studies minor.

To enter the minor, students must have an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better and file a petition in 240 Kinsey Hall. They are encouraged to declare the minor as early as possible and to discuss their proposed course of study with the chair or undergraduate adviser.

Required Lower Division Course (4 units): Women's Studies 10.

Required Upper Division Courses (28 units):

(1) One feminist theory course from Women's Studies 110A or 110B or M192, (2) 120 or 197 or an equivalent senior research seminar approved in advance, and (3) five elective courses from the approved list of women's studies courses issued each term by the program. At least three elective courses must be taken in departments other than the major department. No more than 4 units of any 199 course may be applied.

All minor courses must be taken for a letter grade, with an overall grade-point average of 2.0 or better. Courses in which students receive a grade of C– or lower may not be applied toward the core requirements in the minor. Successful completion of the minor is indicated on the transcript and diploma.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Women's Studies Program offers Master of Arts (M.A.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Women's Studies.

Women's Studies

Lower Division Course

10. Introduction to Women's Studies: Feminist Perspectives on Women and Society. (5) Lecture, three hours; discussion, two hours. Introduction to study of women and men in society, covering comparative issues of social, political, and economic position in the workplace, family, cultural institutions; historical basis of women's subordination; the female experience; the male experience; relations between women and men; intersections of ethnicity, class, and gender; violence against women; cultural images of women and men; social roles of women and men and movements for social change. P/NP or letter grading.

Core Courses

110A. Feminist Theories in Social Sciences. (4) Lecture/discussion, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Multidisciplinary explorations of theorists' attempts to describe, explain, and critique social institutions, considering impact of race, ethnicity, class, etc. Emphasis on relation of theories to change in law, work, politics, education, economics, family, religion, sexuality, etc. Applications of theories to research questions and methodologies. P/NP or letter grading.

110B. Feminist Theories in the Humanities. (4) Lecture/discussion, three hours. Requisite: course 10. Examination of theoretical positions on gender and women in study of literature and the arts. Analysis of ways in which women and sexuality have been represented in cultural production, considering impact of race, ethnicity, class, etc. Applications of theories to research questions and methodologies. P/NP or letter grading.

197. Senior Research Seminar. (4) Seminar, three hours. Requisites: courses 10, and 110A or 110B. Designed for advanced junior/senior Women's Studies majors or minors. In-depth study of a major theme in feminist research. Themes vary by instructor and term. Students pursue independent research related to course theme, with guidance from instructor, then share and critique other student works in progress. P/NP or letter grading.

Supporting Courses

M101A. Lesbian and Gay Literature before Stonewall. (5) (Same as English M101A and Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender Studies M101A.) Lecture, four hours. Requisite: English Composition 3 or 3H. Survey of lesbian and gay literature in English from earlier periods through the 1960s. ## Scope and Objectives

Guided by an interdisciplinary faculty of artists, arts scholars, and ethnographers, the academic programs in the Department of World Arts and Cultures (WAC) are organized around three fundamental missions: (1) the formulation of critical and intercultural insights into the nature of human creativity, (2) the creation and interdisciplinary study of dance and other body-based modes of performance, and (3) mutually beneficial engagement with the diverse cultural and artistic communities of Los Angeles.

The department is an interdisciplinary unit that finds its raison d'être in a set of intellectual and artistic problems rather than an established academic discipline. The programs of teaching, research, and performance are unified around a shared concern with problems of cultural identity and differences, the meaning of tradition in contemporary societies, the forging of connections between critical theory and artistic practices, and the changing social roles and responsibilities of artists and scholars of the arts, both in the U.S. and worldwide.

The undergraduate program offers concentrations in dance and cultural studies. The graduate program offers Master of Arts and Ph.D. degrees in Culture and Performance and a Master of Fine Arts in Dance. Students are encouraged to explore relationships among the different curricular emphases, including world arts practices, cultural studies, dance studies, and folklore, as a means to tailor a particular course of study to their professional goals.

Students in the World Arts and Cultures Department at UCLA study with faculty members of international standing engaged in both creative artistic work and research. Students from this unique department have gone on to pursue advanced degrees and/or careers in arts management, education, cultural policy, community outreach, architecture and urban planning, law, and various academic disciplines within the arts, humanities, and social sciences, as well as in the professional fields of dance.

World Arts and Cultures B.A.

The World Arts and Cultures major leads to the Bachelor of Arts degree and is designed to offer choice and flexibility while maintaining balance and rigor. At the outset, students select one of two concentrations: dance or cultural studies. All students take a set of core courses designed to explore a wide range of artistic practices in cultural context. In addition, students selecting the dance concentration are required to study movement techniques of their choice four to five days a week for the first two years of the program, while those concentrating in cultural studies must select 12 units of arts practice electives in movement, music, theater, film, design, or visual art — either within or outside the department. At the end of the sophomore year, students propose a course of study from courses in and outside the department that leads to the senior project — in the form of an academic paper, a video, or a performance, with the student's imagination as the only limit — which serves as the culmination of the undergraduate coursework.

The dance concentration offers courses in a wide range of idioms from throughout the world, including special emphasis on modern/postmodern dance. Opportunities for performance, production, videography, and movement studies are augmented by courses in the study of the body and of bodily identity from historical and cultural perspectives, dance theory, and dance in the public sphere, including arts pedagogy. Multimedia forms of expression integrating music, theater, visual arts, film, and other technologies along with hybrid forms of cultural expression utilizing both emerging and classically based vocabularies are encouraged.

The cultural studies concentration provides students with an introduction to key issues, problems, and debates in the study of art and creativity in cultural context. Beyond the required set of core courses, students select from a range of courses offered in the World Arts and Cultures Department and in other departments. Students may also consider courses from ethnic and area studies programs and may organize their course of study in relation to particular interests or professional goals (e.g., international comparative studies, intercultural studies, area specializations such as Africa, Asia, or Latin America, minority discourse, gender or women's studies).

Students who wish to confer with the departmental student affairs officers regarding program planning and major requirements should contact Wendy Temple at (310) 825-8537 or Sandra McKerroll at (310) 206-5467.

Admission

New students are admitted to the major for Fall Quarter only. All applicants are reviewed individually, based on submission of a written research paper, transcripts, two letters of recommendation, and two personal essays. These materials are requested from students in mid-December, after the general UC application is received and processed, and are due back in the department in January. For freshman applicants, college placement test scores are also considered. Students interested in the dance concentration must participate in a February audition.

Current UCLA students who petition to change their major are required to meet with one of the student affairs officers prior to application. They are advised to take world arts and cultures courses during the term in which they apply to the program. They must have a minimum 2.0 overall grade-point average and no more than 120 quarter units. Students interested in the cultural studies concentration may apply at the beginning of Fall, Winter, and Spring Quarters. Those interested in the dance concentration may apply at the beginning of Fall and Spring Quarters and are expected to participate in an audition.

The Major

The major consists of 97 units of coursework for the dance concentration and 85 units for the cultural studies concentration, including the 8-unit senior project.

Required: A core of 10 courses (32 units): World Arts and Cultures 1, 2 (taken twice), 3, 70, 90, 100A or 100B, 101, 102, 103.

Sixteen units of coursework in culture/performance studies are also required, selected from World Arts and Cultures 106B through 185C, 192 through 199, or outside the department subject to consent of the faculty adviser.

In addition, the following courses are required:

Cultural Studies Concentration: 12 units of arts practice electives selected from World Arts and Cultures 5 through 16 and 56 through 69 or from courses offered by other departments subject to consent of the faculty adviser; course 20; and 12 units selected from courses 120 through C142.

Dance Concentration: 24 units of movement techniques selected from World Arts and Cultures 5 through 16 and 56 through 69, including courses 16 and 67 or 69; course 45; and 12 units selected from courses 116 through 119 and C145 through C168.

World Arts and Cultures 190, 191A, and 191B (9 units total) are required. These courses are the culmination of the major and have three possible areas of focus — performance, applied research, or cultural studies research — as follows: (a) the performance project is a creative project leading to the production and public performance of original or traditional work; (b) the applied research focus implies an application of knowledge in a hands-on situation and includes projects in and with the community or campus; (c) the cultural studies focus involves students in independent ethnographic research in some aspect of the arts. The subject of study can be found in, but is not restricted to, the Los Angeles community. Field study includes the use of video, slides, and sound recordings.

Graduate Study

Official, specific degree requirements are detailed in Program Requirements for UCLA Graduate Degrees, available at the Graduate Division website, <http://www.gdnet.ucla.edu>. In many cases, more detailed guidelines may be outlined in announcements, other publications, and websites of the schools, departments, and programs.

Graduate Degrees

The Department of World Arts and Cultures offers Master of Arts (M.A.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degrees in Culture and Performance and Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) degree in Dance.

APPENDIX A: REGULATIONS AND POLICIES

Nondiscrimination

The University of California, in accordance with applicable Federal and State Laws and University Policies, does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national origin, religion, sex, disability, age, medical condition (cancer-related), ancestry, marital status, citizenship, sexual orientation, or status as a Vietnam-era veteran or special disabled veteran. The University also prohibits sexual harassment. This nondiscrimination policy covers admission, access, and treatment in University programs and activities.

Inquiries regarding the University's student-related nondiscrimination policies may be directed to the UCLA Campus Counsel, 3149 Murphy Hall, Box 951405, Los Angeles, CA 90095-1405, (310) 825-4042. Speech- and hearing-impaired persons may call TTY (310) 206-6083.

Inquiries regarding nondiscrimination on the basis of disability covered by the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) of 1990 or Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 may be directed to Karen Henderson-Winge, Assistant Coordinator of ADA and 504 Compliance, A239 Murphy Hall, UCLA, Box 951405, Los Angeles, CA 90095-1405, voice (310) 825-7906, TTY (310) 206-3349; <http://www.saonet.ucla.edu/ada.htm>.

Students may complain of any action which they believe discriminates against them on the ground of race, color, national origin, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, disability, or age and may contact the Office of the Dean of Students, 1206 Murphy Hall, and/or refer to Section 111.00 of the University of California Policies Applying to Campus Activities, Organizations, and Students (available in 1206 Murphy Hall or at <http://www.ucop.edu/ucophome/uwnews/aospol/toc.html>) for further information and procedures.

Student Conduct Policies

Students are members of both society and the academic community with attendant rights and responsibilities. Students are expected to comply with the general law, University policies, and campus regulations. For further information, refer to the University of California Policies Applying to Campus Activities, Organizations, and Students at <http://www.ucop.edu/ucophome/uwnews/aospol/toc.html> and the UCLA Student Conduct Code at <http://www.deanofstudents.ucla.edu/studentconductcode.pdf>.

A. Jurisdiction

The University shall have jurisdiction over student conduct that occurs on University property, or in connection with official University functions whether on or off University property. Although the University will not routinely invoke its disciplinary processes over student conduct that occurs off campus except in connection with an official University function, the University shall have discretion to exercise jurisdiction over conduct that occurs off campus and that would violate student conduct and discipline policies or regulations if the conduct had occurred on campus when (1) the alleged misconduct indicates the student poses a threat to the safety or security of any member(s) of the University community or (2) the alleged misconduct involves academic work or the forgery, alteration, or misuse of any University document, record, key, electronic device, or identification.

Specifically, the University may choose to exercise jurisdiction over off-campus incidents under item 1 above where the alleged misconduct involves

- a. Physical abuse, including but not limited to rape, sexual assault, sex offenses, and other physical assault; threats of violence; or conduct that threatens the health or safety of any person;
- b. Stalking (as defined in Section 102.10 of the University of California Policies Applying to Campus Activities, Organizations, and Students);
- c. Sexual harassment (as defined in Section 102.09 of the University of California Policies Applying to Campus Activities, Organizations, and Students);
- d. Hazing (as defined in Section 102.12 of the University of California Policies Applying to Campus Activities, Organizations, and Students).

In determining whether or not to exercise off-campus jurisdiction in cases under item 1 above, the University will consider the seriousness of the alleged misconduct; whether the alleged victim is a member of the campus community; the ability of the University to gather evidence, including the testimony of witnesses; or whether the off-campus conduct is part of a series of actions that occurred both on and off campus.

This section is intended only to provide guidance for the exercise of discretion by the University in invoking its jurisdiction over conduct that occurs off campus. It may not be relied on by any student charged under this section to create any rights, substantive or procedural, or as a basis for a challenge to the exercise of the University's jurisdiction.

B. Grounds for Discipline

The chancellor may impose discipline for violation of, or an attempt to violate, any University policies or campus regulations. The lack of intent to commit a violation is not a factor in determining if a violation occurred; however, the lack of intent may be considered a mitigating factor in determining the appropriate sanction if it has been determined that a violation has occurred. Violations or attempted violations include, but are not limited to, the following types of misconduct (Sections 102.01 through 102.26 below are adapted from the University of California Policies Applying to Campus Activities, Organizations, and Students):

C. Types of Misconduct

102.01: Academic Dishonesty. All forms of academic misconduct, including but not limited to cheating, fabrication, plagiarism, multiple submissions, or facilitating academic dishonesty. For the purposes of this Code, the following definitions apply:

102.01a: Cheating. Cheating includes, but is not limited to, the use of unauthorized materials, information, or study aids in any academic exercise; or helping another student commit an act of academic fraud; or the failure to observe the expressed procedures or instructions of an academic exercise (e.g., examination instructions regarding alternate seating or conversation during an examination).

102.01b: Fabrication. Fabrication includes, but is not limited to, falsification or invention of any information or citation in an academic exercise.

102.01c: Plagiarism. Plagiarism includes, but is not limited to, the use of another's words or ideas as if they were one's own; including but not limited to representing, either with the intent to deceive or by the omission of the true source, part of or an entire work produced by someone other than the student, obtained by purchase or otherwise, as the student's original work; or representing the identifiable but altered ideas, data, or writing of another person as if those ideas, data, or writing were the student's original work.

102.01d: Multiple Submissions. Multiple submissions includes, but is not limited to, the resubmission by a student of any work which has been previously submitted for credit in identical or similar form in one course to fulfill the requirements of a second course, without the informed permission/consent of the instructor of the second course; or the submission by a student of any work submitted for credit in identical or similar form in one course to fulfill the requirements of a concurrent course, without the permission/consent of the instructors of both courses.

102.02: Other Forms of Dishonesty. Other forms of dishonesty, including but not limited to fabricating information or knowingly furnishing false information or reporting a false emergency to the University or to University officials acting in the performance of their duties.

102.03: Forgery. Forgery, alteration, or misuse of any University document, record, key, electronic device, or identification. Section 102.03 applies to any individual for whom the University maintains records, regardless of current student status.

102.04: Theft. Theft of, conversion of, misappropriation of, or damage to or destruction of any property of the University or property of others while on University premises or at official University functions; or possession of any property of the University or others stolen while on University premises or at official University functions; or possession of any property when the student had knowledge or reasonably should have had knowledge that it was stolen.

102.05: Computers. Theft or abuse of University computers and other University electronic resources such as computer and electronic communications facilities, systems, and services. Abuses include, but are not limited to, unauthorized entry, use, transfer, or tampering with the communications of others, and interference with the work of others and with the operation of computer and electronic communications facilities, systems, and services. Violation of the University of California Electronic Communications Policy (available at <http://www.ucop.edu/ucophome/policies/ec/>), or of any UCLA acceptable or allowable use policy, is also considered a violation of Section 102.05.

102.06: Unauthorized Conduct. Unauthorized entry to, possession of, receipt of, or use of any University services, equipment, resources, or properties, including the University's name, insignia, or seal. Sale of or unauthorized transfer of commencement tickets.

102.07: Other University Policies, Regulations, or Rules.

102.07a: University-Owned Housing. Violation of policies, regulations, or rules governing University-owned, -operated, or -leased housing facilities or other housing facilities located on University property.

102.07b: Parking Services. Violation of policies, regulations, or rules governing University parking services or University-owned or -operated parking facilities.

102.08: Physical Abuse. Physical abuse, including but not limited to rape, sexual assault, sex offenses, and other physical assault; threats of violence; or conduct that threatens the health or safety of any person.

102.08a: Rape. For the purposes of this Code, rape refers to "rape" as defined by the California Penal Code (as it may be amended from time to time). Among other acts, the Penal Code prohibits the following acts:

1. Sexual intercourse against a person's will accomplished by force or threats of bodily injury

2. Sexual intercourse against a person's will where the person has reasonable fear that she (or he) or another will be injured if she (or he) does not submit to the intercourse

3. Sexual intercourse where the person is incapable of giving consent, or is prevented from resisting, due to alcohol or drugs, and this condition was known, or reasonably should have been known by the accused

4. Sexual intercourse where the person is incapable of resisting because she (or he), at the time, is unconscious or asleep, and this is known to the accused

102.08b: Sexual Assault. The act of sexual assault includes forced sodomy (anal intercourse); forced oral copulation (oral-genital contact); rape by foreign object (forced penetration by a foreign object, including a finger); and sexual battery (the unwanted touching of an intimate part of another person for the purpose of sexual arousal). These also include situations when the accused sexually assaults a complainant incapable of giving consent, including where the complainant is prevented from resisting due to alcohol or drugs and this condition was known, or reasonably should have been known by the accused. NOTE: For the purpose of this regulation, students should understand that

1. Forced intercourse or other unwanted sexual contact is defined as rape or sexual assault whether the assailant is a stranger or an acquaintance of the complainant

2. Intoxication of the assailant shall not diminish the assailant's responsibility for sexual assault

102.09: Sexual Harassment. Unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal, nonverbal, or physical conduct of a sexual nature constitute sexual harassment when

- a. A student who is also an employee of the University makes submission to such conduct, either explicitly or implicitly, a term or condition of instruction, employment, or participation in other University activity over which the student has control by virtue of his or her University employment; or

- b. A student who is also an employee of the University makes submission to or rejection of such conduct a basis for evaluation in making academic or personnel decisions affecting an individual, when the student has control over such decisions by virtue of his or her University employment; or

- c. Such conduct by any student has the purpose or effect of creating a hostile and intimidating environment sufficiently severe or pervasive to substantially impair a reasonable person's participation in University programs or activities, or use of University facilities shall be given to the record of the incident as a whole and to the totality of the circumstances, including the context in which the alleged incidents occurred.

102.10: Stalking. Stalking behavior in which a student repeatedly engages in a course of conduct directed at another person and makes a credible threat with the intent to place that person in reasonable fear for his or her safety, or the safety of his or her family; where the threat is reasonably determined by the University to seriously alarm, torment, or terrorize the person; and where the threat is additionally determined by the University to serve no legitimate purpose.

102.11: Harassment. Harassment by a student of any person. For the purposes of this Code, harassment

- Is the use, display, or other demonstration of words, gestures, imagery, or physical materials, or the engagement in any form of bodily conduct, on the basis of race, color, national or ethnic origin, alienage, sex, religion, age, sexual orientation, or physical or mental disability that has the effect of creating a hostile and intimidating environment sufficiently severe or pervasive to substantially impair a reasonable person's participation in University programs or activities, or use of University facilities;
- Must target a specific person or persons; and
- Must be addressed directly to that person or persons

102.12: Hazing. Participation in hazing or any method of initiation or preinitiation into a campus organization or any activity engaged in by the organization or members of the organization at any time that causes, or is likely to cause, physical injury or personal degradation or disgrace resulting in psychological harm to any student or other person.

102.13: Obstruction or Disruption. Obstruction or disruption of teaching, research, administration, disciplinary procedures, or other University activities.

102.15: Disturbing the Peace. Participation in a disturbance of the peace or unlawful assembly.

102.16: Failure to Comply. Failure to identify oneself to, or comply with directions of, a University official or other public official acting in the performance of their duties while on University property or at official University functions, or resisting or obstructing such University or other public officials in the performance of or the attempt to perform their duties.

102.17: Controlled Substances. Unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensing, possession, use, or sale of, or the attempted manufacture, distribution, dispensing, or sale of controlled substances, identified in Federal and State laws or regulations.

102.18: Alcohol. Manufacture, distribution, dispensing, possession, use, or sale of, or the attempted manufacture, distribution, dispensing, or sale of alcohol which is unlawful or otherwise prohibited by, or not in compliance with, University policy or campus regulations.

102.19: Destructive Devices. Possession, use, storage, or manufacture of explosives, firebombs, or other destructive devices.

102.20: Weapons. Except as expressly permitted by law, possession, use, storage, or manufacture of a firearm or other weapon capable of causing bodily injury.

102.21: Violation of Disciplinary Conditions. Violation of the conditions contained in the terms of a disciplinary action imposed under this Code.

102.22: Violation of Emergency or Interim Suspension Conditions. Violation of the conditions contained in a written Notice of Emergency or Interim Suspension issued pursuant to Section IV of this Code.

102.23: Unauthorized Use or Sale of Course Notes. Selling, preparing, or distributing for any commercial purpose course lecture notes or video or audio recordings of any course unless authorized by the University in advance and explicitly permitted by the course instructor in writing. The unauthorized sale or commercial distribution of course notes or recordings by a student is a violation of this Code whether or not it was the student or someone else who prepared the notes or recordings.

Copying for any commercial purpose handouts, readers, or other course materials provided by an instructor as part of a University of California course unless authorized by the University in advance and explicitly permitted by the course instructor or the copyright holder in writing (if the instructor is not the copyright holder).

102.24: Violation of Campus Restraining Order. Violation of the conditions contained in a written Campus Restraining Order issued pursuant to Section III.A.2.a.(1) of this Code.

102.25: University Properties. Using University properties for the purpose of organizing or carrying out unlawful activity.

102.26: Violations of Law. Violation of Federal, State, or local laws.

Rape and Other Forms of Sexual Assault

UCLA does not tolerate sexual assault in any form, including rape, acquaintance rape, or date rape. Where there is probable cause to believe that the campus regulations prohibiting sexual assault have been violated, the campus pursues disciplinary actions which may include sanctions up to and including dismissal from the University.

A student charged with sexual assault can be prosecuted under California criminal statutes and disciplined under the campus student conduct policies and regulations. Even if the criminal justice authorities choose not to prosecute, the campus can pursue disciplinary action.

Definitions

For detailed definitions of rape and sexual assault, refer to Sections 102.08a and 102.08b of the Student Conduct Policies listed above.

If a Person Has Been Raped or Sexually Assaulted

Those who believe that they are the victims of rape or other forms of sexual assault should

- Immediately call the police department. If possible, call 911 or the UCLA Police Department at (310) 825-1491
- Get medical attention. Campus police will provide transportation to the Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center Emergency Room for emergency medical treatment and evidence collection. A counselor from the Rape Treatment Center will be available at that time, free of charge

Utilize campus and community support services:

- Contact a Rape Services Consultant (RSC) at the Center for Women and Men. RSCs have expertise in working with victims of rape or sexual assault. They can discuss options and alternatives, help identify the most appropriate support services, and provide information about medical care, psychological counseling, academic assistance, legal options, how to file a police report, and how to file a complaint through the Office of the Dean of Students. RSCs are available to assist UCLA faculty, staff, and students regardless of where or when the assault occurred. For assistance, contact the Center for Women and Men at (310) 825-3945 or go to B44 Student Activities Center and ask to speak to an RSC.
- Contact the Rape Treatment Center at Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center (310-319-4000) for free emergency medical treatment and counseling services.

Campus Discipline Process When the Assailant Is a Student

Those who believe that they are the victims of rape or other forms of sexual assault by a student on University properties or in conjunction with an official University function may file a complaint directly with the Office of the Dean of Students, 1206 Murphy Hall, <http://www.deanofstudents.ucla.edu>.

Cases referred to the Office of the Dean of Students are treated under the hearing procedures set forth in the UCLA Student Conduct Code (<http://www.deanofstudents.ucla.edu/studentconductcode.pdf>). Where the allegation is of rape or other forms of sexual assault, and the case is referred to the Student Conduct

Committee, the following additional procedures shall apply:

1. The complainant shall be entitled, for support, to have up to two persons of the complainant's choice accompany the complainant to the hearing. A support person may be called as a witness, and the fact that he or she is to act as a witness shall not preclude that person's attendance throughout the entire hearing. If a support person is also a witness, the committee chair (or the hearing officer) may require him or her to testify prior to the complainant. Neither of these persons shall be entitled to represent or defend the complainant. Similar rights shall be afforded to the accused student.
2. The complainant shall have the right to be present during the entire hearing, notwithstanding the fact that the complainant is to be called as a witness.
3. Evidence of the complainant's past sexual history, including opinion evidence, reputation evidence, and evidence of specific instances of the complainant's sexual conduct, shall not be admissible by the accused student unless the committee chair or hearing officer makes a specific finding of relevance after an offer of proof by the accused student. Under no circumstances is past sexual history admissible to prove consent. The offer of proof must be made and resolved by the panel before the complainant testifies.
4. The hearing shall be closed to spectators.

Harassment

Sexual Harassment

Every member of the campus community should be aware that the University will not tolerate sexual harassment and that such behavior is prohibited both by law and by University policy.

Definitions

For detailed definitions of sexual harassment, refer to Section 102.09 of the Student Conduct Policies listed above.

Complaint Resolution

Experience has demonstrated that many complaints of sexual harassment can be effectively resolved through informal intervention. Individuals who experience what they consider to be sexual harassment are advised to confront the alleged offender immediately and firmly.

Additionally, an individual who believes that she or he has been sexually harassed may contact the alleged offender's supervisor and/or a Sexual Harassment Information Center counselor for help and information regarding sexual harassment complaint resolution or grievance procedures at one of the locations listed below as determined by the complainant's status at the University at the time of the alleged incident:

Other Forms of Harassment

The University strives to create an environment that fosters the values of mutual respect and tolerance and is free from discrimination based on race, ethnicity, sex, religion, sexual orientation, disability, age, and other personal characteristics. Certainly harassment, in its many forms, works against those values and often corrodes a person's sense of worth and interferes with one's ability to participate in University programs or activities. While the University is committed to the free exchange of ideas and the full protection of free expression, the University also recognizes that words can be used in such a way that they no longer express an idea, but rather injure and intimidate, thus undermining the ability of individuals to participate in the University community. The University of California Policies Applying to Campus Activities, Organizations, and Students (hereafter referred to as Policies; <http://www.ucop.edu/ucophome/uwnews/aospol/toc.html>) presently prohibit a variety of conduct by students which, in certain contexts, may be regarded as harassment or intimidation.

For example, harassing expression which is accompanied by physical abuse, threats of violence, or conduct that threatens the health or safety of any person on University property or in connection with official University functions may subject an offending student to University discipline under the provisions of Section 102.08 of the Policies.

Similarly, harassing conduct, including symbolic expression, which also involves conduct resulting in damage to or destruction of any property of the University or property of others while on University premises may subject a student violator to University discipline under the provisions of Section 102.04 of the Policies.

Further, under specific circumstances described in the Universitywide Student Conduct Harassment Policy (<http://www.deanofstudents.ucla.edu>), students may be subject to University discipline for misconduct which may consist solely of expression. Copies of this Policy are available in the Office of the Dean of Students, 1206 Murphy Hall, or in any of the Harassment Information Centers listed below:

Complaint Resolution

One of the necessary measures in our efforts to assure an atmosphere of civility and mutual respect is the establishment of procedures which provide effective informal and formal mechanisms for those who believe that they have been victims of any of the above misconduct.

Many incidents of harassment and intimidation can be effectively resolved through informal means. For example, an individual may wish to confront the alleged offender immediately and firmly. An individual who chooses not to confront the alleged offender and who wishes help, advice, or information is urged to contact any of the Harassment Information Centers listed immediately above.

In addition to providing support for those who believe they have been victims of harassment, Harassment Information Centers offer persons the opportunity to learn about the phenomena of harassment and intimidation; to understand the formal and informal mechanisms by which misunderstandings may be corrected and, when appropriate, student perpetrators may be disciplined; and to consider which of the available options is the most useful for the particular circumstances.

With regard to the Universitywide Student Conduct Harassment Policy, complainants should be aware that not all conduct which is offensive may be regarded as a violation of this Policy and may, in fact, be protected expression. Thus, the application of formal institutional discipline to such protected expression may not be legally permissible. Nevertheless, the University is committed to reviewing any complaint of harassing or intimidating conduct by a student and intervening on behalf of the complainant to the extent possible.

Faculty Code of Conduct

The entire Faculty Code of Conduct can be found in the UCLA Faculty Handbook (copies are available in the Academic Personnel Office, 3109 Murphy Hall, and at <http://www.apo.ucla.edu/facultyhandbook/>). Part IIA outlines faculty obligations to students and reads as follows:

Teaching and Students

Ethical Principles: "As teachers, the professors encourage the free pursuit of learning of their students. They hold before them the best scholarly standards of their discipline. Professors demonstrate respect for students as individuals and adhere to their proper roles as intellectual guides and counselors. Professors make every reasonable effort to foster honest academic conduct and to assure that their evaluations of students reflect each student's true merit. They respect the confidential nature of the relationship between professor and student. They avoid any exploitation, harassment, or discriminatory treatment of students. They acknowledge significant academic and scholarly assistance from them. They protect their academic freedom." (from 1966 AAUP statement, revised 1987)

Types of Unacceptable Conduct

Failure to meet the responsibilities of instruction, including (1) arbitrary denial of access to instruction, (2) significant intrusion of material unrelated to the course, (3) significant failure to adhere, without legitimate reason, to the rules of the faculty in the conduct of courses, to meet class, to keep office hours, or to hold examinations as scheduled, (4) evaluation of student work by criteria not directly reflective of course performance, (5) undue and unexcused delay in evaluating student work.

Discrimination, including harassment, against a student on political grounds or for reasons of race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, ethnic origin, national origin, ancestry, marital status, medical condition, status as a covered veteran or, within the limits imposed by law or University regulations, because of age or citizenship or for other arbitrary or personal reasons.

Violation of University policy, including the pertinent guidelines, applying to nondiscrimination against students on the basis of disability.

Use of the position or powers of a faculty member to coerce the judgment or conscience of a student or to cause harm to a student for arbitrary or personal reasons.

Participating in or deliberately abetting disruption, interference, or intimidation in the classroom.

Charges of Violation

If a student has reason to believe that a faculty member has violated the Faculty Code of Conduct and that formal discipline may be warranted, the alleged violator should be reported to the chair of the department and to the dean of the division or school with a request that a charge be filed with the Academic Senate Charges Committee. If the dean, in consultation with the vice chancellor of Academic Personnel, determines that there are not sufficient grounds for the administration to file a charge, the student may, after discussing the matter with the Office of Ombuds Services and a member of the Academic Senate Grievance and Disciplinary Procedures Committee, file such a charge in person if the student continues to feel it is warranted.

Residence for Tuition Purposes

Students who have not been living in California with intent to make it their permanent home for more than one year immediately before the residence determination date for each term in which they propose to attend the University must pay a nonresident tuition fee in addition to all other fees. The residence determination date is the day instruction begins at the last of the University of California campuses to open for the quarter, and for schools on the semester system, the day instruction begins for the semester.

Law Governing Residence

The rules regarding residence for tuition purposes at the University of California are governed by the California Education Code and implemented by Standing Orders of The Regents of the University of California. Under these rules adult citizens and certain classes of aliens can establish residence for tuition purposes. There are particular rules that apply to the residence classification of minors (see below).

Who Is a Resident?

Persons who are adult students (at least 18 years of age) may establish residence for tuition purposes in California if (1) they are U.S. citizens, (2) they are permanent residents or other immigrants, or (3) they are nonimmigrants who are not precluded from establishing a domicile in the U.S.

Nonimmigrants who are not precluded from establishing domicile in the U.S. include those who hold valid visas of the following types—A, E, G, H-1, H-4, I, K, L, O-1, O-3, or R. To establish residence students must be physically present in California for more than one year, and they must have come here with the intent to make California their home as opposed to coming to this state to go to school. Physical presence within the state solely for educational purposes does not constitute the establishment of California residence, regardless of the length of stay. Students must demonstrate their intention to make California their home by severing their residential ties with their former state of residence and establishing those ties with California. If these steps are delayed, the one-year durational period is extended until students have demonstrated both presence and intent for one full year. If their parents are not California residents or students were not enrolled in a regular session at any University of California campus prior to fall 1993, they are required to be financially independent in order to be a resident for tuition purposes. Their residence cannot be derived from their spouse or their parents.

Requirements for Financial Independence

Students are considered "financially independent" if one or more of the following apply: (1) they are at least 24 years of age by December 31 of the calendar year for which they are requesting residence classification; (2) they are a veteran of the U.S. Armed Forces; (3) they are a ward of the court or both parents are deceased; (4) they have legal dependents other than a spouse; (5) they are married, or a graduate student or a professional student, and they were not claimed as an income tax deduction by their parents or any other individual for the tax year immediately preceding the term for which they are requesting resident classification; or (6) they are a single undergraduate student and they were not claimed as an income tax deduction by their parents or any other individual for the two tax years immediately preceding the term for which they are requesting resident classification, and they can demonstrate self-sufficiency for those years and the current year.

Note: Financial dependence is not a factor in determining residence status for graduate student instructors, graduate student teaching assistants, research assistants, junior specialists, postgraduate researchers, graduate student researchers, and teaching associates who are employed 49 percent or more of full time or awarded the equivalent in University-administered funds (e.g., grants, stipends, fellowships) in the term for which classification is sought.

Establishing Intent to Become a California Resident

Indications of students' intent to make California their permanent residence can include the following: (1) registering to vote and voting in California elections, (2) designating California as their permanent address on all school and employment records, including military records if they are in the military service, (3) obtaining a California driver's license or, if they do not drive, a California Identification Card, (4) obtaining California vehicle registration, (5) paying California income taxes as a resident, including taxes on income earned outside California from the date they establish residence, (6) establishing a California residence in which they keep their personal belongings, and (7) licensing for professional practice in California.

The absence of these indicia in other states during any period for which students claim residence can also serve as an indication of their intent. Documentary evidence is required, and all relevant indications are considered in determining the classification. Intent is questioned if students return to their prior state of residence when the University is not in session.

General Rules Applying to Minors

If students are unmarried minors (under age 18), the residence of the parent with whom they live is considered to be their residence. If they have a parent living, they cannot change their residence by their own act, by the appointment of a legal guardian, or by the relinquishment of their parent's right of control. If students live with neither parent, their residence is that of the parent with whom they last lived. Unless they are minor aliens present in the U.S. under the terms of a nonimmigrant visa which precludes them from establishing domicile in the U.S., students may establish their own residence when both their parents are deceased and a legal guardian has not been appointed. If they derive California residence from a parent, that parent must satisfy the one-year durational residence requirement.

Specific Rules Applying to Minors

Divorced or Separated Parents

Minor U.S. citizens or eligible aliens may be able to derive California resident status from a California resident parent if they move to California to live with that parent on or before their 18th birthday. If they begin residing with their California parent after their 18th birthday, they are treated like any other adult student coming to California to establish residence.

Parent of Minor Moves from California

Students may be entitled to resident status if they are minor U.S. citizens or eligible aliens whose parent(s) was a resident of California who left the state within one year of the residence determination date if (1) they remained in California after their parent(s) departed, (2) they enroll in a California public postsecondary institution within one year of their parent(s) departure, and (3) once enrolled, they maintain continuous attendance in that institution. Financial independence is not required in this case.

Two-Year Care and Control

Students under the age of 19 may be entitled to resident status if they are U.S. citizens or eligible aliens and they have lived continuously with an adult who is not their parent for at least two years prior to the residence determination date. The adult with whom they are living must have been responsible for their care and control for the entire two-year period and must have been residing in California during the one year immediately preceding the residence determination date.

Self-Support

If students are U.S. citizens or eligible aliens and are either a minor or age 18 and can prove that they lived in California for the entire year immediately before the residence determination date, that they have been self-supporting for that year, and that they intend to make California their permanent home, they may be eligible for resident status.

Exemptions from Nonresident Tuition

Member of the Military

If students are members of the U.S. military stationed in California on active duty, unless they are assigned for educational purposes to a state-supported institution of higher education, they may be exempt from the nonresident tuition fee until they have lived in California long enough to become a resident. They must provide the residence deputy on campus with a statement from their commanding officer or personnel officer stating that their assignment to active duty in California is not for educational purposes. The letter must include the dates of their assignment to the state.

Spouse or Other Dependents of Military Personnel

Students are exempt from payment of the nonresident tuition fee if they are a spouse or a natural or adopted child or stepchild who is a dependent of a member of the U.S. military stationed in California on active duty. The exemption is available until they have lived in California long enough to become a resident. Students must petition for a waiver of the nonresident tuition fee each term they are eligible. If they are enrolled in an educational institution and the member of the military is transferred on military orders to a place outside California where he or she continues to serve in the Armed Forces, or the member of the military retires from active duty immediately after having served in California on active duty, they may retain this exemption under conditions listed above.

Child or Spouse of Faculty Member

To the extent funds are available, if students are an unmarried dependent child under age 21 or the spouse of a member of the University faculty who is a member of the Academic Senate, they may be eligible for a waiver of the nonresident tuition fee. Confirmation of the faculty member's membership on the Academic Senate must be secured each term this waiver is granted.

Child or Spouse of University Employee

Students may be entitled to resident classification if they are an unmarried dependent child or the spouse of a full-time University employee whose assignment is outside California (e.g., Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory). Their parent's or spouse's employment status with the University must be ascertained each term.

Child of Deceased Public Law Enforcement or Fire Suppression Employee

Students may be entitled to a waiver of the nonresident tuition fee if they are the child of a deceased public law enforcement or fire suppression employee who was a California resident at the time of his or her death and who was killed in the course of fire suppression or law enforcement duties.

Dependent Child of a California Resident

If students have not been an adult resident of California for more than one year and are the natural or adopted dependent child of a California resident who has been a resident for more than one year immediately prior to the residence determination date, they may be entitled to a waiver of the nonresident tuition fee until they have resided in California the minimum time necessary to become a resident, so long as continuous attendance is maintained at an institution.

Native American Graduate of a Bureau of Indian Affairs High School

Students who are graduates of a California high school operated by the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs may be exempt from the nonresident tuition fee.

Employee of a California Public School District

Students holding a valid credential authorizing service in the public schools of the State of California who are employed by a school district in a full-time certificate position may be exempt from the nonresident tuition fee.

Student Athlete in Training at the U.S. Olympic Training Center, Chula Vista

Any amateur student athletes in training at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Chula Vista may be exempt from the nonresident tuition fee until they have resided in the state the minimum time necessary to become a resident.

Graduate of a California High School

Students who attended high school in California for three or more years (9th grade included) and graduated from a California high school (or attended the equivalent) may be exempt from the nonresident tuition fee. They are not eligible for the exemption if they are a nonimmigrant alien.

Surviving Dependents of California Residents Killed in the September 11, 2001, Terrorist Attacks

Students who are surviving dependents of California residents killed in the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks may be exempt from the nonresident tuition fee.

Recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor and Their Children under Age 27

Congressional Medal of Honor recipients and their children under age 27 may be exempt from the nonresident tuition fee.

Temporary Absences

If persons are nonresident students who are in the process of establishing a residence for tuition purposes and they return to their former home during noninstructional periods, their presence in the state is presumed to be solely for educational purposes and only convincing evidence to the contrary rebuts this presumption. Students who are in the state solely for educational purposes are NOT classified as residents for tuition purposes regardless of the length of their stay.

If persons are students who have been classified as residents for tuition purposes and they leave the state temporarily, their absence could result in the loss of their California residence. The burden is on students (or their parents if they are minors) to verify that they did nothing inconsistent with their claim of a continuing California residence during their absence. Steps that students (or their parents) should take to retain a California residence include the following:

1. Continue to use a California permanent address in all records—educational, employment, military, etc.

2. Continue to satisfy California tax obligations. If students are claiming California residence, they are liable for payment of income taxes on their total income from the date they establish their residence in the state, including income earned in another state or country.
3. Retain a California voter's registration and vote by absentee ballot.
4. Maintain a California driver's license and vehicle registration. If it is necessary to change the driver's license or vehicle registration, students must change them back within the time prescribed by law.

Petition for Resident Classification

Students may obtain a petition at 1113 Murphy Hall for a change of classification from nonresident to resident status. All changes of status must be initiated at least three weeks in advance of the fee payment deadline for the applicable term.

Time Limitation on Providing Documentation

If additional documentation is required for residence classification but is not readily accessible, students are allowed until the end of the applicable term to provide it.

Incorrect Classification

Students who were incorrectly classified as residents are subject to nonresident classification and to payment of all nonresident tuition fees not paid. If they concealed information or furnished false information and were classified incorrectly as a result, they are also subject to University discipline. Resident students who become nonresidents must immediately notify the residence deputy.

Inquiries and Appeals

Inquiries regarding residence requirements, determination, and/or recognized exceptions should be directed to the Residence Deputy, Office of the Registrar, 1113 Murphy Hall, 405 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90095-1429 (310-825-3447; <http://www.registrar.ucla.edu/faq/res.htm>) or to the Senior Paralegal—Residence Matters, 1111 Franklin Street, 8th Floor, Oakland, CA 94607-5200. NO OTHER UNIVERSITY PERSONNEL ARE AUTHORIZED TO SUPPLY INFORMATION RELATIVE TO RESIDENCE REQUIREMENTS FOR TUITION PURPOSES.

Students are cautioned that this summary is NOT a complete explanation of the law regarding residence. Note that changes may be made in the residence requirements between the publication of this statement and the relevant residence determination date. Any student, following a final decision on residence classification by the residence deputy, may appeal in writing to the senior paralegal within 45 days of notification of the residence deputy's final decision.

Privacy Notice

All of the information requested on the Statement of Legal Residence form is required (by the authority of Standing Order 110.2 (a)-(d) of The Regents of the University of California) for determining whether or not students are legal residents for tuition purposes. Registration cannot be processed without this information. The Registrar's Office on campus maintains the requested information. Students have the right to inspect University records containing the residence information requested on the form.

Financial Aid Minimum Progress Standards

Federal regulations require UCLA to establish, publish, and apply standards of satisfactory academic progress for financial aid eligibility. Students who fail to meet minimum progress standards become ineligible to receive financial aid until they are in compliance with the standards. If, during any term, students expect they cannot meet the satisfactory academic progress requirements listed below, they should contact the Financial Aid Office immediately for further advising.

Undergraduate Students

Qualitative Standard

The qualitative standard is enforced by the College or school. Students are notified by their academic department if they fall below the required grade-point average (GPA).

Quantitative Standard

This standard is enforced by the Financial Aid Office on the basis of the number of units (including remedial courses) successfully completed within any given number of terms, including summer. It may differ from the College/school requirement.

All students receiving aid as full-time students must be enrolled in at least 12 units in order to obtain funds. To be eligible for financial aid as full-time students, they must successfully complete at least 24 units in their first academic year at UCLA to maintain satisfactory academic progress. Thereafter, students must successfully complete 55 units by the end of the sixth term, 86 units by the end of the ninth term, 117 units by the end of the twelfth term, 148 units by the end of the fifteenth term, and 180 units by the end of the eighteenth term.

After 18 terms of enrollment as a full-time student or the equivalent as a part-time student, no further need-based financial aid is granted.

The measurement of progress occurs at the end of each Winter Quarter. The schedule above is adjusted appropriately for students ending an academic year with a different number of terms completed than is listed above. If students enter UCLA in advanced standing, the number of terms for which they are eligible for aid is reduced proportionally to the number of transfer units credited to their record. For example, students who are credited with 90 transfer units would have only 12 terms of financial aid eligibility as an undergraduate at UCLA.

If persons are continuing students at UCLA at the time they apply for financial aid, their progress is measured by the satisfactory academic progress chart to determine their eligibility (i.e., they must have successfully completed 55 units if they attended UCLA for six terms). They would then have only 12 terms of financial aid eligibility.

Nonstandard Enrollment

Progress for students approved for part-time enrollment by the Registrar's Office is measured by a modified schedule. Part-time students should inform the Financial Aid Office of their enrollment arrangements so their aid can be adjusted accordingly.

Successful Completion

To successfully complete units, students must receive a grade of A, B, C, D, or P (S for graduate students) in a course. Grades of F, I, NP (U for graduate students), NR (No Report), and DR (Deferred Report) do not earn completed units. An I or DR grade that is replaced with a passing grade does earn units.

Withdrawal and Cancellation

Withdrawal after the first day of classes during a term counts as a term attended when determining overall term and unit count eligibility, unless students do not attend any classes for the given term and receive a 100 percent refund of all fees. Cancellation of registration on or before the first day of classes does not count as a term attended when determining term or unit count eligibility. Administrative cancellation does not count toward the overall term or unit count eligibility.

Disqualification and Reinstatement

The Financial Aid Office monitors satisfactory progress annually after Winter Quarter grades are recorded. Progress is measured according to the number of terms students have attended and the number of units they have successfully completed.

Students not meeting the requirements shown on the schedule may receive a warning letter or have their financial aid suspended. Once deficiencies are satisfied, financial aid may be reinstated.

Financial aid eligibility is reinstated for the term following the term in which students reestablish compliance with the units-per-term schedule. For example, if they successfully complete 16 units in Fall Quarter and therefore make up the deficiency, they become eligible for financial aid in Winter Quarter. Financial aid is then awarded on the basis of their need and the availability of funds.

Appeal Process

Students who fail to meet the satisfactory academic progress standards because of debilitating illness, prolonged hospitalization, death in the immediate family, or other such mitigating circumstances may appeal their disqualification.

To appeal, students should submit a letter and supporting documentation to the Financial Aid Appeal Committee explaining the circumstances and how they affected their ability to meet the requirements. The committee evaluates the request based on the rationale and evidence provided.

Graduate Students

Qualitative Standard

The qualitative standard is enforced by the dean of the Graduate Division in consultation with the department.

Quantitative Standard

Students must successfully complete at least 8 units per term of enrollment to be eligible for financial aid as full-time students. Approved study loads of less than 8 units result in proportionally reduced aid for that term and are charged against the maximum period of eligibility at the appropriate proportional rate.

Disqualification and Appeal Process

If students fail to meet the qualitative and quantitative requirements, their financial aid is discontinued until the deficiencies are made up. Appeals are reviewed by their academic department, the dean of the Graduate Division, and/or the Financial Aid Appeal Committee.

Period of Eligibility

The degree program to which students are admitted determines the maximum number of terms for which they can receive need-based financial aid. Terms for which no need-based aid is received are considered when determining the remaining number of terms of financial aid eligibility.

Students who are in a credential program or a professional master's program (other than Master of Fine Arts) are eligible for a maximum of nine terms of need-based financial aid.

Students who are in a Master of Fine Arts program are eligible to apply for aid for the first 12 terms of enrollment. If students are in an M.A. or M.S. program, a doctoral program, or a combination master's/doctoral program, their eligibility expires after 27 terms of enrollment. Students who change their program may be accommodated through an extension of terms of eligibility. The extension should be secured at the time the program change is made.

Professional Schools

Students attending the Schools of Dentistry, Law, and Medicine are covered by criteria established by the respective school.

Grading Regulations

Assigning a Grade

The instructor in charge of a course is responsible for determining the grade of each student in the course. The standards for evaluating student performance are based on the course description as approved by the appropriate course committee.

The final grade in the course is based on the instructor's evaluation of the student's achievement in the course. When on an examination or other work submitted by a student, the student is suspected of having engaged in plagiarism or otherwise having cheated, the suspected infraction is to be reported to the appropriate administrative officer of the University for consideration of disciplinary proceedings against the student. Until such proceedings, if any, have been completed, the grade DR (Deferred Report) is assigned for that course. If in such disciplinary proceedings it is determined that the student did engage in plagiarism or otherwise cheat, the administrative officer, in addition to imposing discipline, reports back to the instructor of the course involved, the nature of the plagiarism or cheating. In light of that report, the instructor may replace the grade DR with a final grade that reflects an evaluation of that which may fairly be designated as the student's own achievement in the course as distinguished from any achievement that resulted from plagiarism or cheating.

Grade Complaints

A grade may be appealed, on any reasonable grounds, to the instructor, the chair of the department, and the dean of the division or school.

If the student believes that the instructor has violated the Faculty Code of Conduct by assigning the grade on any basis other than academic, the matter should first be taken up with the instructor. If the matter is not resolved, the student may go for counsel to the Office of Ombuds Services or may follow the procedures for the formal filing of charges (see Faculty Code of Conduct earlier in the Appendix). If a charge is sustained by the Academic Senate Committees on Charges and on Privilege and Tenure, an ad hoc committee is appointed within two weeks to review the disputed grade, and any warranted change is made within four weeks.

Correction of Grades

All grades, except DR, I, and IP, are final when filed by the instructor in the end-of-term course report. However, the Registrar's Office is authorized to change a final grade (1) on written request of an instructor, provided that a clerical or procedural error is the reason for the change or (2) on written request of the chair of the UCLA Academic Senate in cases where it has been determined by the Committee on Privilege and Tenure that an instructor has assigned a grade on any basis other than academic grounds. No change of grade may be made on the basis of reexamination or, with the exception of the I and IP grades, the completion of additional work. Any grade change request made more than one year after the original filing must be validated for authenticity of the instructor's signature by the department chair. Any grade change request made by an instructor who has left the University must be countersigned by the department chair. All grade changes are recorded on the transcript.

Policy on Alternate Examination Dates

In compliance with Section 92640(a) of the California Education Code, the University must accommodate requests for alternate examination dates at a time when that activity would not violate a student's religious creed. This requirement does not apply in the event that administering the test or examination at an alternate time would impose an undue hardship which could not reasonably be avoided. Accommodation for alternate examination dates will be worked out directly and on an individual basis between the student and the faculty member involved.

In general, students should make such requests of the instructor during the first two weeks of any given academic term, or as soon as possible after a particular examination date is announced by the instructor.

Students unable to reach a satisfactory arrangement with their instructor should contact the Office of Ombuds Services, 105 Strathmore Building, or the Office of the Dean of Students, 1206 Murphy Hall, for assistance.

Instructors who have questions or who wish to verify the nature of the religious event or practice involved should contact the Office of Ombuds Services or the Office of the Dean of Students for assistance.

Undergraduate Final Examinations

No student shall be excused from assigned final examinations, except as provided above in the policy on alternate examination dates and as provided in the following three paragraphs.

The instructor in charge of an undergraduate course is responsible for assigning the final grade in the course. The final grade shall reflect the student's achievement in the course and shall be based on adequate evaluation of that achievement. The instructor's method of evaluation must be announced at the beginning of the course. The methods may include a final written examination, a term paper, a final oral examination, a take-home examination, or other evaluation device. Evaluation methods must be of reasonable duration and difficulty and must be in accord with applicable departmental policies. Final written examinations may not exceed three hours' duration and are given only at the times and places established and published by the department chair and the Registrar's Office.

At the end of the term in which a student is expected to be graduated, a student's major department may examine him or her in the field of the major, may excuse the student from final examinations in courses offered by the department during that term and, with the approval of the Undergraduate Council, assign a credit value to such general examination.

An instructor shall, if he or she wishes, release to individual students their original final examinations (or copies). This may be done by any method which insures the students' right to privacy. Otherwise, the instructor shall retain final examination materials, or a copy thereof, until the end of the next succeeding regular term of instruction, during which period students shall have access to their examinations.

Disclosure of Student Records

Pursuant to the Federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), the California Information Practices Act, and the University of California Policies Applying to the Disclosure of Information from Student Records, students at UCLA have the right to (1) inspect and review records pertaining to themselves in their capacity as students, except as the right may be waived or qualified under Federal and State Laws and University Policies, (2) have withheld from disclosure, absent their prior consent for release, personally identifiable information from their student records, except as provided by Federal and State Laws and University Policies, (3) inspect records maintained by UCLA of disclosures of personally identifiable information from their student records, (4) seek correction of their student records through a request to amend the records or, if such request is denied, through a hearing, and (5) file complaints with the U.S. Department of Education regarding alleged violations of the rights accorded them by FERPA.

UCLA, in accordance with Federal and State Laws and University Policies, has designated the following categories of personally identifiable information as "directory information" which UCLA may release and publish without the student's prior consent: name, address (local/mailling, permanent, and/or e-mail), telephone numbers, major field of study, dates of attendance, number of course units in which enrolled, degrees and honors received, the most recent previous educational institution attended, participation in officially recognized activities (including intercollegiate athletics), and the name, weight, and height of participants on intercollegiate athletic teams.

Students who do not wish certain items (i.e., name, local/mailling, permanent, and/or e-mail address, telephone numbers, major field of study, dates of attendance, number of course units in which enrolled, and degrees and honors received) of this "directory information" released and published may so indicate through URSA (<http://www.ursa.ucla.edu>). To restrict the release and publication of the additional items in the category of "public information," complete the UCLA FERPA Restriction Request form available from Enrollment and Degree Services, 1113 Murphy Hall.

Student records which are the subject of Federal and State Laws and University Policies may be maintained in a variety of offices, including the Registrar's Office, Office of the Dean of Students, UCLA Career Center, Graduate Division, and the offices of a student's College or school and major department. Students are referred to the UCLA Telephone Directory which lists all the offices that may maintain student records, together with their campus address and telephone number. Students have the right to inspect their student records in any such office subject to the terms of Federal and State Laws and University Policies. Inspection of student records maintained by the Registrar's Office is by appointment only and must be arranged 72 hours in advance. Call (310) 825-3801 or inquire at Academic Record Services, 1134 Murphy Hall.

A copy of the Federal and State Laws, University Policies, and the UCLA Telephone Directory may be inspected in the office of the Information Practices Coordinator, 600 UCLA Wilshire Center. Information concerning students' hearing rights may be obtained from that office and from the Office of the Dean of Students, 1206 Murphy Hall.

In addition to the public information described above, information related to students' Social Security number, sex, and marital status, and the name(s), address(es), and telephone number(s) of their parents or next of kin are made available to the UCLA External Affairs Department for use in alumni, development, and public relations activities. To restrict the release of this additional information, complete a Request for External Affairs Information Restriction form available from Enrollment and Degree Services, 1113 Murphy Hall.

Undergraduate Retention, Graduation, and Time to Degree

Retention and graduation rates are higher than ever before at UCLA and among the highest for public universities anywhere in the country. Over the past three years, 96 percent of all students entering from high school and 94 percent of all students entering as transfers were still enrolled at UCLA one year later.

Over the past three years, the four-year, five-year, and six-year graduation rates for students entering from high school averaged 52, 81, and 83 percent respectively. More than 83 percent of all students entering from high school from 1990 to 1996 have graduated from UCLA. Final graduation rates above 85 percent are projected for all freshmen cohorts arriving since 1997.

Over the past three years, the two-year, three-year, and four-year graduation rates for entering transfer students have averaged 45, 79, and 84 percent respectively. More than 84 percent of all transfer students entering from 1992 to 1998 have graduated from UCLA. Final graduation rates above 85 percent are projected for all transfer cohorts arriving since 1999.

Time to degree for UCLA undergraduates has declined significantly over the past decade. In 2001-02 more than 4,100 baccalaureate degrees were awarded to students who entered directly from high school. The average number of quarters registered at UCLA was 12.6, down from an average of 13.6 quarters for similar graduates in 1991-92. Among recent graduates, 65 percent were registered for 12 quarters or less (i.e., four years or less), 73 percent for 13 quarters or less, 81 percent for 14 quarters or less, and 95 percent for 15 quarters or less (i.e., five years or less).

In 2001-02 more than 2,600 baccalaureate degrees were awarded to students who entered as transfers. The average number of quarters registered at UCLA was 7.1, down from an average of 8.1 quarters for similar graduates in 1991-92. Among recent graduates, 52 percent were registered for six quarters or less (i.e., two years or less), 67 percent for seven quarters or less, 76 percent for eight quarters or less, and 92 percent for nine quarters or less (i.e., three years or less).

Campus Security Information

UCLA Police Department

The UCLA Police Department (310-825-1491; <http://www.ucpd.ucla.edu>), located at Westwood Plaza and Charles E. Young Drive South, has 56 sworn California State Police Officers empowered by the State of California with the authority to enforce all state and local laws. UCLA police officers patrol the campus 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. They enforce all applicable local, state, and federal laws, arrest violators, investigate and suppress crime, and provide a full range of police services and community safety programs.

The department is linked by computer to city, state, and federal criminal justice agencies that provide access to information concerning criminal records, wanted persons, stolen property, and vehicle identification. The Detective Bureau handles criminal investigations, and detectives conduct interviews, arrest violators, execute search warrants, and file cases with the city attorney's office.

Incident Reporting

UCLA police officers have primary jurisdiction over the UCLA campus, Center for the Health Sciences, and University Apartments South. The City of Los Angeles Police Department does not handle calls for service on campus. All requests for police service should be made to the UCLA Police Department. All crime occurring on campus, the Center for the Health Sciences, and other UCLA properties should be reported immediately to the department to ensure appropriate action is taken. Crimes occurring off campus should be reported immediately to the local law enforcement agency.

Police, fire, or medical EMERGENCIES can be reported by dialing 911 from any telephone on campus. All telephones (University, private, public) located on University grounds are tied into the 911 emergency system. Emergencies can also be reported by using the blue-hooded or yellow Emergency Reporting Telephones located throughout the campus.

NONEMERGENCY calls for service can be made by contacting the department at (310) 825-1491.

Crime Statistics and Reports

As required by the Jeanne Clery Disclosure of Campus Security Policy and Campus Crime Statistics Act, UCLA prepares an annual report describing campus security policy and information concerning alcohol and drug use, crime prevention, crime reporting, and related matters. It also includes three years of crime statistics. Printed copies are available by calling (310) 825-1491. The report can be accessed at <http://www.ucpd.ucla.edu/ucpd/clery.htm>.

Community Service Officers

The UCLA Police Department employs approximately 125 student community service officers (CSOs; http://www.ucpd.ucla.edu/ucpd/services\_escort.html) who are the "eyes and ears" (trained observers) of the department and act as nonintervention visual deterrents to crime. CSOs wear high-visibility uniforms and carry two-way police radios. They are dispatched by the department's Communications Center and provide a direct link to police, fire, or medical aid. CSOs provide security service to a number of campus buildings, including residence halls and libraries. They are most well-known for the Campus Escort Service and the Evening Van Service. The Campus Escort Service operates every day of the year from dusk to 1 a.m. Individuals requesting the service call the Communications Center; a CSO is then dispatched to walk them safely to their destination. The service is available to UCLA students, staff, faculty, and visitors and operates on campus and in the nearby residential areas. The Evening Van Service provides a safe and convenient mode of transportation around campus at night and is accessible to people with disabilities.

Crime Prevention

An involved community is one of the best defenses against crime. Therefore, the department is committed to a community policing philosophy and supports a proactive Crime Prevention Unit (http://www.ucpd.ucla.edu/ucpd/services\_crimeprev.html) that works closely with community members to make UCLA a safer place to work, live, and learn. The unit gives presentations on vehicle and residential security, personal safety, office and equipment security, and rape prevention. Other programs are developed to meet the special needs of the campus community. Brochures and literature on crime prevention and personal safety are available. The Center for Women and Men and the Crime Prevention Unit provide presentations on sexual assault issues. Topics include acquaintance rape education and prevention, personal safety and prevention techniques, recovery from sexual assault, clear communications, pornography, and the continuum of violence and rape in society. The educational programs, tailored to meet the needs of individual audiences, include films, discussion groups, lectures, role-plays, and communication exercises. The Center for Women and Men reaches students through the residence halls, sororities, fraternities, athletic teams, student clubs, and various student functions. Services include crisis intervention and advocacy for victims of sexual assault; short-term counseling and referrals for survivors, their families, and friends; support groups for rape survivors; and self-defense classes and a lending library. The center works closely with the student housing offices and the police department to increase campus safety.

Several programs have been designed to increase the level of crime awareness and campus safety at UCLA. All incidents of criminal activity which pose a potential threat to the campus are brought immediately to the attention of the community through Campus Alert Bulletins (http://www.ucpd.ucla.edu/ucpd/bulletin\_crime.html). Additionally, those interested in receiving public safety bulletins and news briefs can sign up for the public safety list server at <http://www.ucpd.ucla.edu/ucpd/listserv.html>.

Emergency Medical Services

The UCLA Police Department provides emergency medical assistance for the campus community through the Emergency Medical Service program, which is staffed by students certified as emergency medical technicians (EMTs). As in all emergencies, call 911 for this service.

Alcohol and Substance Abuse Education

Students with alcohol or substance abuse problems create safety and health risks for themselves and others. Such abuses also can result in a wide range of emotional and behavioral problems. Therefore, UCLA makes available to every student a variety of alcohol and substance abuse awareness programs which are designed to discourage the use of illicit substances and to educate students on the merits of legal and responsible alcohol consumption. Student Psychological Services (310-825-7985; <http://www.saonet.ucla.edu/sps.htm>) provides counseling and referral assistance to students who are troubled by alcohol or substance abuse problems. The service is completely confidential and free to regularly enrolled students. All information and counseling is treated in accordance with University Policies and State and Federal Laws. Any decision to seek assistance is not used in connection with any academic determination or as a basis for disciplinary proceedings.

Policies

UCLA has been designated drug free, and only under certain conditions is alcohol consumption permitted (none is permitted at athletic events). In keeping with its educational mission, the University assumes the responsibility to better inform the UCLA community about alcohol and substance abuse.

The sale, manufacture, distribution, or possession of any controlled substance without a prescription is illegal under both State and Federal Laws. Such laws are strictly enforced by UCLA police officers. Student violators are subject to University disciplinary action, criminal prosecution, fine, and imprisonment. Refer to the UCLA policies on substance abuse for further information.

The sale, consumption, and distribution of alcohol on the UCLA campus is restricted by the UCLA alcohol policy and California State Law. Organizations or groups violating alcohol or substance policies or laws may be subject to sanctions by the University.

Residential Housing

UCLA is the size of a small city and provides residential housing to approximately 18,000 students. Housing facilities range from apartments designed for students with children to multi-student apartment complexes to high-rise student residence halls. The UCLA Police Department and student housing staff work hand in hand to create a safe and comfortable living and learning environment.

Campuswide security and safety programs for residents are held throughout the year to increase crime potential awareness and improve campus safety. To keep residents immediately informed of major crime or threats to the campus, Crime Alert Bulletins are posted in residential areas by the housing staff. However, residents must take an active role to ensure their own safety by exercising simple common-sense crime prevention techniques. Because the campus is open 24 hours a day, visitation to residence halls and apartments is not restricted. All residence halls have 24-hour access control on entrance doors, and during the evening hours access control monitors are stationed at each entrance. Police officers and CSOs are also assigned to the residence halls.

UCLA-affiliated organizations that maintain off-campus facilities are under the shared jurisdiction of their local police department and the UCLA Police Department, which provides assistance to students, faculty, and staff and/or referrals to neighboring police departments.

Safety Tips

The nature of the studies and research done at UCLA requires many of the campus buildings to be open 24 hours. Because the campus is so large and adjacent to the greater Los Angeles community, individuals with criminal intent are able to access the University grounds. Regardless of the time of day or night and no matter where persons are on campus, they should be alert and aware of their surroundings and exercise good commonsense safety precautions. Anyone parking on campus should remember to lock their vehicles and consider investing in a steering wheel locking device and/or alarm. Take advantage of all of the safety services provided by the University and the UCLA Police Department. Use the Campus Escort Service when walking at night. Keep room and apartment doors locked at all times. Most important, anyone needing assistance should not hesitate to contact the department.

APPENDIX C: ENDOWED CHAIRS

Although UCLA is a public institution, private gifts are increasingly important in maintaining the quality of the University's three missions of teaching, research, and community service. Among the principal forms of private support are endowed professorships or "chairs," which support the educational and research activities of distinguished members of the faculty.

As this catalog goes to press, UCLA has 189 endowed chairs which have been approved by the Office of the President of the University of California, as follows. (Asterisks indicate new chairs which have been approved by the Office of the President since publication of the 2001-03 UCLA General Catalog.)

School of the Arts and Architecture

APPENDIX D: DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARDS

Academic Senate Recipients

Each year the UCLA Alumni Association presents Distinguished Teaching Awards to five Academic Senate faculty members. The highly prized awards are presented at the annual UCLA Alumni Association Awards Ceremony, and selection of recipients is based on recommendations of the Academic Senate Committee on Teaching. Nominations are solicited from academic departments during Fall Quarter.

The Luckman Distinguished Teaching Awards Program was established in late 1991 after receipt of a generous gift from Harriet and Charles Luckman. Awards given for 1992 through 1997 were named the Luckman Distinguished Teaching Awards.

Non-Academic Senate Recipients

In spring of 1985, the Office of Instructional Development began sponsorship of awards to three instructors who are not members of the Academic Senate. This category includes lecturers and adjunct and clinical faculty members. All non-Academic Senate faculty members who are nominated by their departments are eligible. Recipients are selected by the Academic Senate Committee on Teaching, utilizing the same criteria as that used for Academic Senate members.

Gold Shield Faculty Prize

The $30,000 Gold Shield Faculty Prize, an award for academic excellence, was created by the Gold Shield Alumnae of UCLA in celebration of their fiftieth anniversary in 1986. The prize is funded by an endowment of $250,000 raised by Gold Shield for this purpose, which has grown to over $450,000. Guidelines provide that the prize "recognize and reward UCLA faculty members who have demonstrated extraordinary accomplishment in teaching and in research or creative activity...and who have made a significant contribution to undergraduate education." Preference for recipients is given to faculty members in mid-career who do not often receive the extra professional incentives available to distinguished senior faculty.

The Gold Shield Faculty Prize is awarded to each recipient for scholarly use. The awardee is selected every two years by a committee of peers appointed by the Academic Senate. Student and Gold Shield representatives are included. Recipients must come from fields that have undergraduate programs at UCLA.
